The wide distinction won by Charles Klein's "The Lion and the Mouse" throughout the country, places third drama in a field of popularity in which there are few others. A most timely theme was chosen by the capable and celebrated playwright and his masterful treatment of the topic carried the play into instantaneous and seemingly everlasting vogue. Henry B. Harris played his part exceptionally well, before the clever actors he employed were given an opportunity by his ever apparent expenditure, in properly mounting the play. Not only having been played for over a year in New York City, "The Lion and the Mouse" has a firm following in every city of the United States. An estimate was recently given, estimating the number of people who had witnessed the Klein drama during its remarkable career, and after deducting a conservative number for those who may have seen it more than once, the total still remained in the tens of millions. Mr. Harris sends "The Lion and the Mouse" to the opera house here on next Thursday, Nov. 12, to renew its acquaintance among local patrons of the theatre's best offerings.

A man most decidedly green. Bought a range out of sight and unseen. When he saw it, he groaned. His good wife she mourned. They had been "stung" by a fraud-slick and clean.

"Seeing is believing" when you see the ROUND OAK CHIEF steel range, you will know at once that it is a superior range. You won't have to take anybody's word for it. You can see for yourself that the ROUND OAK cast iron in the top, fire box and all parts exposed to the fire is of the necessary thickness—not thin as a wafer, that the body is one solid sheet of the finest polished washable steel—not a cheap inferior grade.

Then compare the number of rivets and bolts used in the Chief range, 435—you will find about twice as many. They are not as "scarce as hen's teeth" like those ranges in which price is the only argument used to sell them.

When you examine the ROUND OAK CHIEF range, you know you have your money's worth. When you buy it, no chance, no guesswork, an honest, well-made reliable range with the ROUND OAK guarantee.

See the book of the range, free for the asking.
