CURRENT COMMENT.

The Local Option Law.

If, as seems probable at this time, the present legislature refrains from any radical tinkering with the statute regulating the liquor traffic, it will do the best possible service to the state. There are, however, amendments that ought to be made which will unquestionably work for a better administration of the law.

The most important is such a change as will prevent a small town from placing a licensed saloon on its borders where the patronage from a larger town only makes its existence possible. The Republican platform this year promises to do away with such an outrage and undoubtedly the dominant part in the legislature will see that this is accomplished. In doing this it will of course have the support of the minority members, who recognize the injustice possible under present conditions. It is also to be hoped that the license commissioners may be controlled by the town voting license, for a purely local option measure must govern as well as abstain in each town, whether it will or will not license the sale of liquor. The policy of local option should stand or fall purely on its merits without dividing the responsibility with the state.

Thus far the local option law, on the whole, as The News has been constrained to remark previously, has been the best prohibition measure that Vermont has had since the regulation of the liquor business. It has never got very near perfection, but it has accomplished considerable in the way of good government. With these two important amendments and possibly a few other minor changes, the law ought to work greater efficiency.

There is nothing sacred about this local option law and at any time it deteriorates it can be radically revised or replaced with something else. Its efficiency thus far warrants its continuance for the present.—Northfield News.

A Plea for Three Normal Schools.

The proposition to appropriate a sum to build a normal school at some point unannounced, while having apparently for its chief purpose the cause of higher education in view, would mean essentially a hardship imposed upon aspiring young men and women in the north part of the state, who are now able, at a very moderate expense, to attend the normal school at Johnson or the same may be said of those residing in the vicinity of Randolph and Castleton. All of these institutions fill a want and a need that a central institution, located at either one of the three places above mentioned or in one of the larger centers of population, would not meet.

The matter of obtaining the educational advantages that the ambitious Vermont boy and girl desire is largely a matter of dollars and cents and to eventually absorb the three normal institutions, that the state now possesses, into some scheme of centralization is to work a hardship upon the very students that such institutions are designed to assist.

Centralization is perfectly proper in a score of instances, but when, for instance, Orleans, Lamotte and Franklin county boys and girls can obtain a finished education in the little town of Johnson at a cost far below what such an education would cost at Burlington, Middlebury or Northfield it is not safe to say that a greater percentage of bright boys and girls will be contributed by those counties to such an institution than would be the case if the cost of tuition and living was twice and perhaps three times as much in some larger and more centrally located town or city.

Leave the normal schools to do their work. Give them the money to work with and the instructors. Give the schools at Randolph, Castleton and Johnson more men of the same mould as Principal Collins at Johnson and rest assured that the normal schools of Vermont will continue to turn out men and women fitted to battle with the problems of life because of the knowledge instilled at the non-stenographic institutions.—Morrisville News and Citizen.

Why Do Boys Leave The High School.

In the November American Magazine Dr. William Lee Howard writes an extraordinary article on "Helpless Youths and Useless Men." Following is a brief extract: "The question, 'Why Do Boys Leave the High School?' is frequently seen in educational journals. The answer is plain to a man of the world. 'I know a young woman of twenty-four years of age who takes a position this year as teacher in a public school. Her knowledge of boys—of adolescent outbreaks—is absolutely nil. Her mother is one of those injurious Puritans who deny their daughters the right to understand the biologic and physiologic laws of life and their direct effect upon the physical and moral growth of every living thing. Consequently this girl's assumed knowledge of men and things is morbid and curious—all the misinformation she received from classmates at normal school. Think of sending a youth to be under the direct effect of the physical and moral growth of every living thing because of the knowledge instilled at the non-stenographic institutions.—Morrisville News and Citizen.

CRETONNETTE WORK.

Magical Effects Arrived at in a Short Time.

Votaries of the lighter forms of fancy work, who are ever anxious to obtain wonderful results in a short space of time with very little trouble to themselves, will find in cretonnette work the ideal of their dreams, so magical are the achievements quickly arrived at, while it offers at the same time ample scope for the exercise of individuality, originality and skill, the effective grouping of designs and arrangements of color schemes calling into play the ingenuity of the worker.

The materials for cretonnette work are simple and readily obtained. All that is necessary are a few odd remnants of cretonne possessing bold, artistic designs, some white curtain net, a pair of sharp embroidery scissors and a little strong gum arabic. Silk or satin for lining purposes is also frequently called into requisition, as well as some of the numerous edgings used by fancy workers, whether chiffon, ruchings, fringe, ribbon or lace.

Suppose a set of three transparent mats for a polished wood dressing table is desired. Many modern toilet tables are covered with a sheet of plate glass, on which mats ornamented in the manner about to be described are particularly pleasing.

A duchess cloth usually measures about 12 by 45 inches. This is first cut out in the net, a tiny portion is turned in all around and the lace or chiffon edging added before any decoration is attempted. A length of cretonne is next selected, on which are depicted bold, realistic roses in shades of pink and crimson. The worker will carefully cut out the flowers, buds and foliage and glue them beneath the net, taking care that all delicate stems and sharp corners are well secured. Bit by bit, adding a few leaves here, a cluster of buds there, a most realistic looking spray can be evolved. If the mat is a very large one several sprays of varying lengths should be arranged with studied carelessness. For small mats, be they round, square or heart shaped, large single roses look well. Seen through the softening veil of net, the bright colors of the cretonne are pleasingly subdued, while the blurred effect adds an elusive charm. A toilet set, including sachets of various shapes and sizes, all harmonizing with the tints of the room, is remarkably chic and dainty. Sachets must, of course, be lined with silk or satin. In these cases it is naturally far easier to apply the cut out flowers, etc., on to the foundation and then cover with the net.

Cretones are really so lovely nowadays that there should be no dif-

TAFT CLEARS WASHINGTON.

Says General Could Not Aid British Prison Ship Martyrs.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 16.—President elect Taft, Governor Hughes, Secretary Wright and other noted men took part in the dedication of the "prison ship martyrs' monument Saturday.

A parade of military, naval and civic organizations preceded the exercises, 25,000 persons being in the line of march.

The monument covers the remains of many of the Revolutionary prisoners who died in the notorious British prison ship Jersey in the East river.

Mr. Taft in the course of his address, after referring to the fate of the Revolutionary prisoners, said:

"The British say, as is true, that the British authorities offered to exchange the prisoners detained in the prison hulks for British soldiers held by the American forces in American prisons, and that this offer was declined by Washington.

"It is true that by so doing he would have been enabled to save the sufferings of his own countrymen, who were detained in the prison hulks, and this shows clearly that the rights of those whose memory we here recall with gratitude were sacrificed to meet the exigencies of the country in the critical hour of its birth.

"But it was a balancing of Washington's obligations, and he felt it to be the higher duty to maintain that course which would weaken the enemy and ul-

NEW MANAGER FOR DODGERS.

Donovan Released by Brooklyn Baseball Club.

Brooklyn, Nov. 16.—At a special meeting of the officers of the Brooklyn National League club held Tuesday night it was decided to replace Ratsy Donovan by some one else as manager of the Superbas for 1909. Just who will get the position was not definitely settled.

It appears that the club officers believe that Donovan, who has led the team for best results from his player, is not able to get the position. In an indirect way the name of Jimmy Sebring, the outlaw player, who at present is the property of the Chicago Cubs, was mentioned as a probable successor. It is understood that the Cubs are willing to turn Sebring over to Brooklyn, and, if he is reinstated, he may lead the Superbas next season.

President Charles Ebbets sent a letter to Donovan informing him of the action of the club officers. In the communication the owner of the Brooklyn club stated that the difficulties which the manager had had to face were fully appreciated and that he, Donovan, had undoubtedly given his best efforts to his employers.

The move was not wholly unexpected. At the close of the National League season there was some talk of such an action.
