

CONFESSED BEFORE DEATH

Mrs. Farmer Electrocutted This Morning

AT AUBURN, N. Y., PRISON

The Second Electrocutting of a Woman in New York State—Was for the Murder of Sarah Brennan—Says Husband Had No Hand in It.

Auburn, N. Y., March 29.—With half-closed eyes and muttering Catholic prayers, Mrs. Mary Farmer walked to the death chair at four minutes thirty seconds past six this morning, and was put to death with 1,840 volts, for the murder of Sarah Brennan, in the village of Brownsville, a year ago. This electrocution, the second a woman in New York, was signally successful. After three contacts, Warden Benham pronounced death at 6:15:40 o'clock. Father Hickey, her confessor, Mrs. John Dunningan, Miss Mary Gorman, attendants, Prison Captains Crowley, Marling, Paterson, and Dr. Helen M. West, II, were in the procession to the chair. Prison physician John Gerin, Dr. Spitzka, the Philadelphia alienist, and electrician Davis made the death tests after the shocks.

Before her death Mrs. Farmer made a confession to Father Hickey, declaring that, "My husband, James D. Farmer, never had any hand in Sarah Brennan's death, nor knew nothing about it until the trunk in which the body was packed after cutting it up was opened. He was not at home the day the affair happened, nor did he ever put a hand on Sarah Brennan after death. I feel he has been terribly wronged."

The confession was sworn to before B. F. Winsgar, notary for Cayuga county, New York. James Farmer, who is also under sentence of death for the Brennan murder, was removed with all the other prisoners from the vicinity of the death chamber while the execution was in progress.

An autopsy of Mrs. Farmer, held in the prison dissecting room, showed the woman's body to be normal in every organ. The brain was healthy and the weight was forty-five ounces, normal for women. The investigation took three hours.

Taken to the Death Room. Mrs. Farmer was taken to the "death room" shortly after dark last night. Two of the women attendants, Mrs. Dunningan and Miss Gorman, who have kept constant vigil outside Mrs. Farmer's cell door since she was brought to Auburn prison, told the woman that she was to be permitted to visit her husband for a last interview. In the subdued light that found its way in the cell, Mrs. Farmer dressed for her execution. She clothed herself in a prison gown and then carefully arranged her hair.

Early this morning she was brought to the execution chamber, where she knelt and said the Lord's prayer. The electrodes were applied to the neck and the current was turned on. A look or two of hair was clipped from the head in order to form a perfect contact with an electrode.

The prison building was quiet and the prison yard was dark. The shadows from the high walls last night when Mrs. Farmer, accompanied by the two women attendants, Dr. John Gerin, the prison physician, Father Hickey and Warden Benham, was brought down from her cell on the second tier of the woman's building. Across the silent yard the woman and her escort walked to the end of the men's building, where a carriage was in waiting to drive them to the entrance of the death row. It was only a short drive along by the cloth alops and other prison departments, but the fall of the horses' hoofs on the crunching gravel in the roadway told the prisoners in their cells the story of what was happening in the yard below.

Last Meeting with Husband. The carriage with Mrs. Farmer and her attendants came to a stop and the row leading to the condemned row was opened, the light from within showing a black-gowned woman being assisted from the conveyance by the attendants. Once inside, the door was closed and Mrs. Farmer was placed within a cell in the receiving room and her husband was sent for.

It might have been an hour before Captain Patterson, who, with the two women attendants, were in the room, gave a quick warning that they had come for the parting. There was an inaudible word spoken, a last greeting, the shuffling footsteps of a woman as she was being led along the dark and narrow corridor and the closing of a cell door next to the execution chamber. Farmer was led away and will not be brought back to his old cell in condemned row before Wednesday morning.

During her long incarceration in Auburn prison, Mary Farmer has spent most of her time in reading religious books. She rarely spoke of her two-year-old son, Peter Farmer, who is now with an uncle in Watertown, N. Y., and told Father Hickey that when she relates that she knew of her only diversion in the dull routine of prison life has been an occasional game of solitaire. Warden Benham said that he understood that Mrs. Farmer had written to a Mr. Robley Wilson of Watertown, giving him an account of her life which should be given to her son, Peter, when he becomes of age. Her prayer book she has given to her attorney, Wilcox, who defended her at the trial.

Mrs. Farmer has grown quite stout in prison and the prison physicians report that she had greatly improved in health.

MURDER WAS ONE OF UNUSUAL BURTALITY

Husband and Wife Killed the Woman and Forged a Deed to Her Property.

Mary Farmer was sentenced to death for a shocking and brutal murder. Her husband, James D. Farmer, is also under sentence of death, he having aided his wife in the crime. This couple on April 23, 1908, enticed Mrs. Sarah Brennan, 85 years old, a neighbor, into their home in Brownsville and killed her. Mrs. Farmer confessed that while Mrs. Brennan stood looking out of a window, she, Mrs. Farmer, stole up behind her and struck her on the head with an axe. Then Mrs. Farmer and her husband chopped up the body so that it would fit into a small trunk.

The motive for this deed was possession of Mrs. Brennan's property. Mrs. Brennan was a next door neighbor of the Farmers and lived in comfortable circumstances with her husband, Patrick. The house and its furnishings were all owned by Mrs. Brennan. Knowing this, the Farmers deliberately set about to possess themselves of this house. Mrs. Farmer forged deeds to the house and its furniture, and, personating Mrs. Brennan, made a transfer of the property to her husband, James, in a Watertown lawyer's office. This was in October, 1907.

The Farmers then waited until the following April before proceeding further. Then they killed Mrs. Brennan, calmly moved into the Brennan house and produced the forged transfer deeds before the astonished Brennan. They asserted that Mrs. Brennan had turned the house over to them and gone to Watertown.

Brennan's suspicions were aroused and soon a search of the house was made by Sheriff Bellinger. In a trunk in the attic was found Mrs. Brennan's body.

Mrs. Farmer made two confessions in detail. The first time she said that she had wielded the axe that was used in murdering Mrs. Brennan. Later on, she declared that her husband had struck down Mrs. Brennan. Mrs. Farmer was tried and was convicted of murder in the first degree, on June 19, and her husband was also convicted of murder in the first degree, on October 31. The Farmers had one child, a boy, Peter J. Farmer, nearly two years old.

NEGRO COMMITS SUICIDE IN PRISON

Confessed That He Murdered the Night Hotel Clerk in New York.

New York, March 29.—James Yango, a young negro, who after his arrest in Chicago confessed that he had murdered Isadore De Vallant, night clerk in the Eastern Hotel here, for the purpose of robbery, strangled himself in his cell in the Tombs prison early yesterday. When found, life was almost extinct and despite heroic treatment by the prison doctors he died within 15 minutes.

Yango used a unique method to encompass his death and one that required almost Spartan courage. He twisted a handkerchief around his neck, after tying it securely, tightened it with a small piece of lead pencil which he used as a tourniquet, until it closed his wind pipe. He then thrust himself on his cot, placed his face in the pillow, and waited for death.

With the same pencil he had previously written two notes of farewell, one to his wife and the other to Detective James Murphy, who captured him in Chicago. "Say, Jim," he wrote this brief line: "Dear Wife—Death is but eternal sleep; why should I stay and suffer? Forgive me." (Signed) "Jim."

His note to Detective Murphy was a practical admission of the crime of which he is charged. "Say, Jim," he wrote, "you was on the job all right, but I think I will take this way out for me."

"This is no coward's act; I am only tired of life."

Night Clerk De Vallant was murdered early in the morning of March 15. His head had been crushed, his throat cut, and there were four stabs in the back. The hotel bill had been rifled of $78 in cash, the clerk's watch and money were gone, and the safe had been tampered with.

Yango, who had been a porter in the hotel, disappeared about the time of the crime and was suspected. Detective Murphy traced him to Chicago and arrested him there. When brought back to New York, Yango confessed that he had planned the murder, but that the actual killing was done by two accomplices.

If after a reasonable time it is uncovered, I will meet Ketchell, Langford, or anyone else."

INDIANS ON WAR PATH

Oklahoma Soldiers After Crazy Snake's Band

BATTLE IS IN PROGRESS

Six Persons Have Already Been Killed by the Indians and the Country Around Hickory Hills, Okla., Is in Terror.

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 29.—The early reports from Henrietta say that firing was heard in the hills, seven miles away, and it is believed that a battle is on between Crazy Snake's band of Indians and the half-breed negroes and state troops. All telephone wires are cut and no details have been received as yet.

Since Thursday the Indians have slain six officers, and the state constabulary were determined on revenge.

Five companies of militia have marched against Crazy Snake's band, to assist the posse of officers, and under orders to capture or exterminate the murderous band, which has brought about a condition of terror in Henrietta, Pierce and all the surrounding country since their refusal to accept certain land grants offered them by the government.

The troops reached Crazy Snake's camp at 9 o'clock last night and found it deserted and every trace and hut in flames. The Indians had fled to a stronger position to the north, where a battle was fought early today.

Crazy Snake is in personal control of his forces. This was established by the testimony of one of his college boys, Chitto Harjo, who was strung up by the determined deputies until nearly dead. Then he gasped out that his father was in command; named the Indians who killed the deputies; told the officers how to trail the band, and did everything which a devoted red man is supposed not to do when in the hands of enemies.

Crazy Snake's men number about 200, all armed with modern rifles and plentifully supplied with ammunition. They had prepared for two months for this, their final stand against lawful authority. They defiantly sent out word yesterday that they would fight to the death. The militiamen's officers declared that they would shoot to kill from the first.

Crazy Snake's band strongly entrenched itself early in the day, and was reinforced from time to time by roving companies which were scared away from Henrietta by the approach of the troops. At dawn the special officers began firing on the main band of Indians. Several Indians are reported wounded. This engagement was near Pierce, and off the railroad about 20 miles southwest of Checotah.

A second engagement occurred near Stedman at 9 o'clock this morning, in which 50 shots were exchanged, and one Indian was seriously wounded. Several of the Indians' horses were captured.

Both the Indians and the negroes took their wounded into the hills, and this made it impossible to learn definitely what the casualties were.

When young Harjo was strung up he was compelled to give the names of all the Indians who were in his father's house Saturday night when Marshal Edward Baum and Deputy Sheriff Odum were killed. Another Indian, supposed to be a member of Snake's light horse guards, was also captured at the same time.

A posse went to the scene of Saturday's fighting and removed the bodies of Baum and Odum. The bodies were taken to Eufaula. There was evidence that Crazy Snake and the members of his family had left hurriedly. The officers captured a number of the chief's horses and saddles and a large quantity of ammunition.

CABINET WILL BE WATCHDOG.

Taft and His Advisers to Prune Bureau Estimates. Washington, March 29.—Economy in the administrative departments of the government is to be insisted upon by President Taft and the members of the cabinet. At the first cabinet meeting after Mr. Taft's inauguration the question was discussed and an agreement reached that the members of the cabinet were to constitute themselves a budget committee which, through a sub-committee, should carefully scrutinize each item of the estimates of appropriations submitted to Congress by the several bureau chiefs and other administrative officers with a view to eliminating every item not necessary to the efficient working of the government machinery.

This plan received the hearty endorsement of all the members of the cabinet, but the credit for taking the initiative in putting it into effect belongs to Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh.

SON IS RELEASED.

Not Held Responsible for the Death of Malsowski. Brattleboro, March 29.—George Malsowski, son of Maksym Malsowski, the Brattleboro retreat farmer who died mysteriously nearly a week ago, was discharged from the Newfane jail Saturday night by order of state's attorney Charles H. Williams.

This was done after the officials at the state laboratory had communicated with Mr. Williams. This action deepens the mystery surrounding the death of Malsowski.

Mr. Williams said yesterday the communication was not an official report, but that it was such as to cause him to think no good end would be served by holding the boy.

Another development came yesterday, when the board of police and Frank Mulcahey, for whom the police have been looking since a week ago yesterday, arrived in Holyoke from Springfield, and were arrested by the Holyoke police. They were detained until information came from Vermont that the couple was not wanted and they were released.

About 3 o'clock on Sunday morning the fire broke out anew and destroyed the house completely and also burned the barn, which was near. The stock in the barn was saved. The house was of brick. HAS NOT LOST HER NERVE.

Mrs. Boyle Predicts She Will Be Acquitted. Mercer, Penn., March 29.—After a week intense with movement and excitement, James H. Boyle, and Mrs. Boyle, or McDermott, Thurston, or whatever her real name may be, have had one real day of rest.

The brilliant woman has never lost her nerve. She had lost her appetite but yesterday was well on the way to recovery. The man had lost both nerve and appetite. Last evening, however, he was in good condition and talks of making a fight for his liberty.

The woman is indifferent to the proceedings and again yesterday protested her absolute innocence and her conviction that she would ultimately be acquitted. Boyle is rather nervous and wished the hearing here rather than at Sharon.

It is the opinion here that there are more accomplices to be arrested and it was reported last night that efforts have begun to locate them in this State as well as in Ohio. District Attorney J. M. Linger yesterday said he had no information to give out on this point at present.

Former Judge Samuel H. Miller, probably will defend Boyle at the April quarter session court. As yet his woman companion has secured no attorney.
