SIGNALS OF DISTRESS

Barre People Should Know How to Read and Give Them.

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment.

Passages are frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is constant day and night. Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help. Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, backache and urinary disorders.

Barre evidence proves this statement.

H. H. Nichols retired 101 Prospect street, Barre, Vt., says: "Since I first used Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago, I have recommended them to at least fifty people, and have heard every one who has used this remedy give it a word of praise."

I suffered for a long time from kidney complaint and my condition finally became so bad that I was worried. My back ached most of the time and an annoying kidney weakness existed. I used every remedy that was brought to my attention, but without deriving any benefit, and I, at last, resorted to Doan's Kidney Pills. I used in all five boxes and was benefited in a wonderful manner."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"PARSIVAL"

Coming to Montpelier Opera House Next Monday.

One of the most promising signs of late years in connection with the drama, is the greatly increased interest shown by the better class of theatre goers in dramatic productions of a semi-religious and religious nature.

Among the more notable of this class of plays may be mentioned "The Eternity City," "John The Baptist," "Sign of the Cross," "Mary of Magdala," "Ben Hur" and "The Shepherd King." Each of these dramas has met with distinct favor, not only occasioned by the beauty and depth of the various themes presented, but because, also, there is no greater or more graphically dramatic material to be gained from any source than that of the Bible.

The latest and most successful of all religious dramas seen in this country, although for years past it has been witnessed in Europe, is Richard Wagner's magnificent spectacle, "Parsifal." While there is not a biblical character seen in the production, it is essentially a grand religious work. It is true there are some sacred subjects dealt with, but they are used only as a means to an end, and to attain the purpose the author desired, without in any way violating Christian truths or treading upon one's Christian susceptibility. It is simply a great moral drama, conceived and written by a Christian genius. In the effort to reproduce the reverential atmosphere of the original surroundings and in other details, the tradition of Parsifal will be observed during the engagement at the Blanchard opera house, Monday, May 17, except in the commencing time, which has been slightly changed. Formerly the time of commencement was 7:30, and a two-hour intermission was given for dinner. This long intermission has been done away with, which permits of commencing the first act at 7:45; the performance concluding at 11 o'clock. The public is most earnestly requested to subscribe to the rule that everybody should be seated before the house is darkened and the first act begins. It will be impossible to seat anyone at this juncture. Ample warning will be given before the rise of the curtain on each act by a company of trumpeters, who will sound a "Parsifal" motif in the theatre lobby.

TUFTS SENIORS DISTRESSED.

Because Smart 14 Years Old Boy Has Seat With Them.

Medford, Mass., May 12.—The members of the Tufts senior class are up in arms over the location of the seat at morning chapel of Norbert Wiener, the 14-year-old student who will receive his degree from the college this morning.

Wiener entered the college with the class of '10, now juniors, and has previously been enrolled with that class, sitting in the junior section in the balcony. By his ability, however, Wiener has been allowed to take a course of studies which will enable him to graduate in three instead of four years and with the '09 class.

A week ago the seniors donned cap and gown and young Wiener appeared among them in the same regard. On that same morning, considering himself a full-fledged senior and entitled to all privileges, the 14-year-old student, with short trousers protruding from the folds of his gown, calmly strode from his balcony seat to the senior section and seated himself in a vacant pew.

The act was distasteful to some of the last year men seated near and Wiener was forced to retire to the junior section.

The next morning, however, he again endeavored to gain a seat amongst the graduating class and with the same result. For the next four mornings, indeed, the lower classes and faculty viewed the youngster vainly attempting to force his way into one of the desired seats, and always being unceremoniously ejected just before the services began.

These chapels came to such a point that after chapel yesterday morning Pres. Hamilton addressed the senior men and sprang a genuine sensation among them when he announced that Wiener had been granted a seat in the senior section and that his rights must be respected. The president paid a high tribute to the boy's ability and roundly scolded the attempts of certain members to keep him from the seats.

Sentiment among the seniors differed in regard to the matter, but the general opinion seems to be that Wiener is not a member of the 1909 class, in that he did not enter with them, has not participated in any of their affairs, has not paid the class assessments and will not share in the class day celebration.

Promenade and dance by the Senior class of W. H. S., in Grange hall on the 22nd. Particulars later.

Though somewhat out of season there has been harvested quite a crop of corn from the old brush place during the past few days.

Old and young folks' dance in the new Grange hall tomorrow (Friday) evening; don't forget it. The lady members of the Grange are requested to bring cake and doughnuts, or both.

The eight year old son of Ralph Spencer, who is seriously ill, was a little more comfortable last evening.

The ladies of the "Aid Society" of the Congregational church are planning to serve ice cream on Decoration day as has been their custom for several years.

Keep thinking about the maintenance of a band in town; talk to others about it, ask your friends and acquaintances who are musicians, or who may be musically inclined, to attend the meeting in the band room at the Town hall next Monday evening. We must maintain a band in town, and we will keep talking about it until it is assured. Now let every body interested in this musical matter come to the meeting on the 17th inst. A few new members are needed.

How He Found Sleep.

By SALLIE MENDEEM. (Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

The way I got out of the burglar line was this: I had mighty good nerve and wasn't afraid of any one. I seemed to know what kind of a crib to crack and how to do it without waking anybody up and getting away between midnight and dawn, when the cops are most drowsy. While I was doing a job I thought of nothing except my work and was both cool and watchful. I wasn't one of those blokes who scare people to death or who are ready if necessary to add murder to robbery. The truth is I never liked the prospect of facing either charge.

As I was saying, while engaged at my work, however dangerous, I was steady as a monument, but when danger had passed and I had nothing to do but think I went downhill very fast. What bothered me most was that I couldn't sleep nights—that is, when comfortably stowed away in bed. I once took a nap in a gentleman's parlor and was only awakened by the sun coming up and shining in my eyes. I just got out in time to save myself. But when lying on a soft mattress, with warm covers and no chance of being disturbed, sleep wouldn't come to me. I lay awake thinking of the time when I would hear prison doors clank behind me. The thought was dreadful. I'm afraid I was too fine grained for the business.

Month after month my hours of sleep grew less till I feared insanity. One night I woke up at midnight after having slept two hours and knew there would be no more slumber for me till the next time I went to bed. I was so desperate that I got up with the intention of going into some house where I had no right and there snatch another couple of hours' sleep. I had a crib in view, a small house with not much in it. But I was looking for sleep, not plunder. I went there, took out a pane of glass, entered and went upstairs to find a place to settle down. I stood in a dark hall looking into a room where a night lamp was burning. In the room a woman was in bed with a child, both asleep. The child was sleeping on the front of the bed, very near the edge. He was a boy and, I think, about five years old.

On a narrow lower bed, close beside the other, slept another child, a girl of about three. She was sleeping in the center of her bed on her side and had her chubby feet up against her fat cheek. It was hot summer weather, and none of them except the woman had any covers whatever.

What interested me was that the boy's head was hanging over the side of his bed and so much of his body, too, that it looked to me as if he was about to fall. He was restless, and I knew he would be over very soon. Somehow I wanted to see him fall, though I kept in the dark so that he wouldn't see me if he woke up. The next tick he made sent him over. He fell a couple of feet, but didn't wake up. He landed partly on the little girl, but she didn't wake up either. I expected she would, as she moaned once or twice in her sleep and turned over, but finally she slept as peacefully as before.

It was such a delightful picture to one suffering from insomnia that I kept on watching the children. The boy continued his kicking and crowded the girl, pushing her with every move to the front edge of her bed. It must have been half an hour that he kept this up, when there was a thump, and the girl lay on the floor. But she seemed to be as comfortable there as on her bed. At any rate, she showed not the least sign of waking.

Meanwhile I heard the muttering of distant thunder, and while I was looking at them all there came one terrific crash loud enough to wake the dead. The mother turned over, but neither of the children moved. Then followed one crash after another, and I expected that at least the mother would wake up and take a look at her children. But she slept on. She must have been very tired or had lost a lot of sleep or she couldn't have slept through those terrible bolts. Never had I heard such thunder before.

The only effect the storm had on any of them was to increase the restlessness of the boy. He rolled and tumbled in his sleep like a ship tossed by the waves, sometimes lying for a few minutes close against his mother's bed, then rolling over to the outer edge of his own. I was sure he'd in time tumble out of this bed, as he had out of the other, and I was bound to see him do it. Sure enough, before I expected it he gave a lurch and landed plumb on top of his sister.

Neither of them awoke. I reckon women know in their sleep what's going on with their children, for, now that the storm was over and everything was still as the tomb, the mother sat up in bed, glanced at her children, got up and put them in their proper places. Then she went back to bed herself and was asleep in a moment.

"Well," I said to myself, "if that's what a clear conscience will furnish I'm going to have a clear conscience." I went back to my room resolved never to enter any man's house again but my own, at least not for plunder. I went to bed and slept like a top for twenty-four hours.

I kept my resolution, found honorable employment and prospered. But I didn't forget the family that converted me. The mother was a widow, and, having a hard time to get on, I made her acquaintance and married her.

But none of my family know that I had been a burglar or how I came to know them.
