MONTPELIER

The Montpelier seminary students will not have to pay the $1.00 each, assessed as the costs of the skeleton which disappeared recently from the institution. It was replaced in the cabinet some time between Saturday afternoon and yesterday morning. The students in general are glad that it has been returned, not only because of the fact that it meant a payment of a general fine, but because of its use in physiology and other studies.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Mears are at the home of Mrs. E. Mars' father, H. D. B. Dineen, for a week. Next Sunday they go to G. A. Wheelock's in Calais to work.

A class of nine took the third and fourth degrees in the grange last Wednesday evening. A larger class is already prepared to be initiated the first Wednesday evening in August.

The Village Improvement society has reason to feel highly complimented by the patronage of the public at large last Saturday evening. A crowd greeted the band, and all report an enjoyable time.

The box sale and entertainment of Friday evening was in every way a success. The prize was awarded to Miss Ruby Davis for the handsome box, and to Mrs. Hiram Wilson for the homeliest. The fare was rendered in a very pleasing manner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boudry will entertain the public in their home, next Wednesday evening. The Ladies' All society of the M. E. church will hold their annual lawn party with the Boudry's at this time. These people have proved that their home is one where the "best time" can be had, and everybody is invited to attend. Don't forget the date, June 23. Cake and ice cream will be served.

The Children's day exercises of last Sunday in both churches were worthy of mention. Great pains were taken by superintendents and teachers, and the children responded in a pleasing manner. J. A. Woodward of Cabot, a former superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school, was present at the M. E. church in the afternoon and presented B. W. Davis, the present superintendent, with four dozen beautiful carnations, each child wearing a pink. After the exercises the children gave Mr. Woodward a rising vote of thanks. Rev. Mr. Lawrence of the Congregational church gave the children a short address in the absence of their pastor, Rev. F. E. Currier.

TELEPHONE TOLLS.

Editor Barre Daily Times: The telephone company has made plans to get higher profits or dividends out of the people. It is about time for people to take this matter up and discuss it, to take out their telephones and talk about municipal ownership. The people should think, talk and do something to civilize the trusts and masters of monopoly, to reduce them to the level of the low, and deliver the country from the wolves of hunger that are living at the doors. The trusts and soulless corporations are determined to get their pound of flesh, even though they starve the people to obtain it. Let the people wake up and see, if they can pay big profits and dividends to trusts and corporations, surely they can well afford to pay it to themselves.

J. T. Callaghan.

Backache is constant day and night. Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent. The weakened kidneys need quick help. Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, backache and urinary disorders. Barre citizens prove this statement.

L. H. Hooker, retired, 101 Prospect street, Barre, Vt., says: "Since I first used Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago, I have recommended them to at least fifty people, and have heard everyone who has used this remedy give it a word of praise. I suffered for a long time from kidney complaint, and my condition finally became so bad that I was worried. My back ached most of the time and an annoying kidney weakness existed. I used every remedy that was brought to my attention, but without deriving any benefit, and I, at last, resorted to Doan's Kidney Pills. I used in all five boxes and was benefited in a wonderful manner." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. WASHINGTON

Six Children Preached Sermons at Universalist Church Sunday.

There was a very novel and interesting celebration of Children's Sunday at the Universalist church here last Sunday. Instead of the ordinary concert, consisting of songs and recitations, there were six sermons, delivered by six of the children. The sermons were written by the pastor, Rev. Irving Towlesky. Four of them were of about five minutes length each, while the other two were of about three minutes length. The pulpit was adjusted so that all the children could use it. They met for drill with the pastor and Sunday morning they acquitted themselves admirably. Alice Towlesky, the pastor's little daughter, read the scripture lesson. The preachers were, in order of delivery, Howard Nye, Homer Parkhurst, Laura Nye, Hazel Bohannon, Clyde Beaver, and George Dennison.

Nina Tillotson accompanied by her sister, Allie, was in Barre Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Cheney of Barre were at G. H. Bigelow's over Sunday.

Mrs. Fred Goodwin and little son, Merlon, were at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Tillotson, a few days last week.

Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Hutchinson went to Bradford Saturday to attend a meeting of the alumni of the doctor's graduating class of Bradford academy. They returned Sunday.

THE RANSOM.

Story of an American's Experience in Italy. By F. A. MITCHELL. (Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

Rowland Hill, a young American, was walking one morning on the Via Caracciolo at Naples. On one hand was the park, teeming with tropical plants, statuary and fountains. On the other were the waves of the Mediterranean, splashing against the sea wall that protects the street from their encroachment. Far out on the bay the sun was shining on the haze enveloped island of Capri, casting a white light on the water directly beneath it, causing it to appear as if resting on a sea of silver.

But Rowland Hill, though an artist, thought nothing of this. His mind was occupied with a misfortune which had happened him several years before and which had separated him from the girl he loved. His head was bowed, and he did not notice either the beautiful scene or the people he met. But suddenly one of those strange mental influences for which we cannot account caused him to look up. His eyes met those of a man he immediately recognized and who recognized him. Hill started; the man scowled. Hill advanced a step, and the man put his hand under his coat as if for a weapon, then said in Italian: "If you inform the police you die!"

On the other side of the street two men in cocked hats (such as the great Napoleon wore) and long military cloaks emerged from the park. They were government policemen. Hill made a dash for them, and as soon as his opponent took in the situation he, too, ran like a deer. He was too late. Hill pointed to him, the officers gave chase, and he was captured. "Who is he?" asked his captor. "Luigi Binetti!"

What was the surprise of the government officials when they learned that the most desperate bandit that had ever infested the environs of Naples had ventured into the city, had been recognized and arrested. His capture was most interesting to the man who had brought it about. Rowland Hill five years before had gone from America to Florence to study art. His father had recently left him $30,000. In Florence the young man had met Signorina Bianca Favari of an aristocratic family, dwelling on the Parco Margherita, which climbs the cliffs back of Naples. To Naples he followed her, proposed and was accepted.

Hill was fond of roaming and one day while walking on a lonely road near the village of Casoria, not far from Naples, was taken by the bandit, Luigi Binetti, carried to the neighboring mountains and held a prisoner. Meanwhile the bandit went to Naples, learned the exact amount of his captive's fortune and gave him the choice between turning it in as a ransom or death. Hill arranged for the conversion of his property into gold and its transfer to the bandit. He returned to Naples a free man, but he had lost not only his fortune, but his love. Signorina Favari declined to permit his daughter to marry a penniless man.

From that day till he met his captor on the Via Caracciolo the American lived a wretched life, and though he did not know it, Bianca was equally miserable. The bandit was executed. But this only satisfied Hill's craving for revenge. Before the execution Luigi Binetti told his father that he had hidden in the cliffs behind Castellammare, some fifteen miles south of Naples, a treasure that he would give him provided he would secure him a pardon. The father did not believe his story, but passed it on to Hill later on.

Now, when Hill had been liberated by the bandit a bandage was taken from his eyes, and he found himself on the high rocks overlooking Castellammare from the south. The description of the place where the robber had claimed he had hidden the treasure corresponded with the spot where Hill had been kept a captive. He had walked or been carried blindfolded for half a day from the place before being liberated. He believed that the hidden treasure was his own gold and that it was located in the neighborhood of Castellammare.

Hill searched the heights about Castellammare for weeks, when one morning in a gulch some distance behind and far above the town he came to an excavation in the rock partly built up in its front that he judged might have once been a Roman peasant's abode. Like a flash it came to him that it had been the place of his captivity. With him he found scratched on the rocky wall a rude drawing of an arrow, from which pointed an arrow in a north-easterly direction and the figures 100. Seizing at once the idea that this was a key to the hiding place of the treasure, he proceeded—the distance was 100 paces—to a rock which bore some resemblance to the drawing. Digging at its base, he soon came to a flat stone beneath which glittered every dollar of his ransom.

Returning to Naples, he reported his find to Signor Favari, who withdrew his opposition to the match between the young American and his daughter, and there was a brilliant wedding up on the Parco Margherita, at which the best citizens were present. The story of Rowland Hill's achievement teaching the ears of the king of Italy, the American was invited to reorganize the detective system of the kingdom on the American plan, but declined. He did not have confidence in the mental construction of the Italian race producing American results.
