TUESDAY, JULY 6, 1909.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

5,125

Friends in Burlington are friends indeed this week.

Many a fond father glazes over the sight of a whole "Little Willie" to-day.

Taken altogether, Barre's celebration of Independence day was safe and sane.

President Taft didn't say "De-slighted" when he saw his new summer home at Beverly, but he meant it, just the same.

A great many people will date the remainder of their life stories from "when I saw President Taft in Burlington in 1909."

The village of Hardwick must have felt itself in a state of siege when twenty-nine sheriffs descended on the place last Saturday and raided sixteen places for contraband liquor. State's Attorney Simonds of Caledonia county has a great deal of work cut out for himself to keep down illegal sale of liquor, and he is doing a land-office business. It should be remembered also that Hardwick, as well as the county of Caledonia, is nominally dry as a bone, so far as liquor is concerned.

As is oftentimes—too often—the case, a revolting crime in which a nationality foreign to our own is implicated is followed by rigorous and unjust persecution of the single nationality in the United States. In the Elsie Sigel case in New York City, because a Chinese is suspected of having committed the murder, the sons of that Oriental nation are being hounded in a great many of the large cities of the country for an alleged crime and another. We haven't fully learned yet to distinguish between individuals and races and because a suspect belongs to a certain race we are suspicious of the whole race. There may be one or two good, decent Chinese in the United States. Who knows?

BARRE AND MONTPELIER CO-OPERATE.

With Barre and Montpelier joining hands through their respective boards of trade in a protest over the new rate schedule of the New England company as respects the toll charges between the two cities, there will be a strong statement presented to the Vermont public service commission in case the petition for a hearing is granted, as is expected. At their meeting last Friday, the directors of the Montpelier board of trade voted to operate with the directors of the Barre organization. That the two boards of trade will have the support of the majority, or, even stronger, practically all, of the users of the New England company goes without saying.

Here at last the two cities have something over which they find that they really have a common interest, although it is probable that there are many occasions when they might profitably join hands to work to a common end. It has been said frequently that Barre and Montpelier, lying so close together and with their interests allied in great measure, should co-operate more than they do and that the results would be to their mutual advantage. Let's put shoulder to shoulder in this matter of telephone toils and see if we don't find the results worthy of the union of forces.

CURRENT COMMENT

Gen. Bingham's Administration.

The new head of the police department on taking office yesterday afternoon said: "Commissioner Bingham left the department in fine shape, and we start in right." Mr. Baker's knowledge of the force is extensive and peculiar, so this is no empty compliment. The people of this town will watch with interest for any signs of deterioration in the department, especially where it was improved by Gen. Bingham. General discipline was tightened. The men came to look better, having lost the slovenly appearance that they once had. The last parade was admitted on all sides to have been an eye-opener. The daily comfort and safety of those using the streets of this crowded, busy island were promoted by the extension of the traffic squad idea. We have now a body of policemen engaged on the work of street regulation that is second to none, and the mounted men have a special place in the hearts of the public. Gen. Bingham is responsible to a large extent for what has been done in the matter. And it is safe to say that if there were any falling off here, life in New York would become intolerable. To a soldier's sense of duty, Gen. Bingham united a soldier's contempt for meanness and trickiness. He worked hard for the city which he served well for four years. He was respected by the best of those under him. An honest man but tactless.—New York Evening Sun.

On The Domestic Side.

Mr. Bryan is likely to have some opposition in what is left of the Democratic party in the next Presidential canvass. Governor Johnson of Minnesota has apparently realized his mistake last year in not entering the race earlier, and a Johnson bureau is said to be already at work in promoting his candidacy. A great dinner is to be held at Columbus, Ohio, July 15, to formally laud the man of Governor Harmon. Governor Johnson represents the modern tendencies of the party; Governor Harmon stands for the old school democracy and against most "modern improvements." Governor Harmon is a man of high ability, but perhaps lacking in the personal popularity of the Minnesota candidate, who is a self-made man of the best type and a man of great personal magnetism. Bryan will run, of course. He has contrived the habit, and can not shake it off. Besides, he has grown rich from running for office, and his bank account grows larger and larger with each campaign. He is the first man to use presidential aspirations for the making of money, and the first man to insist on running after repeated defeats had shown that the people would have none of him. His defeat in the convention by almost anyone he would welcome to the country at large.—Burlington News.

JINGLES AND JESTS

Knew What Was Coming.

Judge—Did you witness the accident?
Witness—I did.
Judge—At what distance?
Witness—Sixty-seven feet and nine inches.
Judge—How do you know so exactly?
Witness—Well, I knew I'd be summoned and prepared myself for all the foolish questions I knew would be put to me in court.—Kansas City Journal.

Relaxation.

I always like the freakish verse.
The kind that runs down stairs;
The kind that circles round the page,
Or does its turn in squares.
It's fun to see the poet's stunts,
Helped by the typo men;
Just see the way this runs up again,
this runs down hill.
I do not think that people ought
To keep the same old gait;
They ought to break loose now and then
And keep an evening "late."
A long straight line, without a break,
Is bad for verse or men;
Up hill this runs and then
the way runs down again.
Just see —Boston Herald.

Affronted.

"I have here," said the caller to the neat young woman who had opened the door, "a very desirable little preparation to cure tan. I see you have been at the shore. Two treatments with this preparation will make you skin as dazling white."
"Go on 'way from here," responded the girl. "Can't you all prognosticate a 'spectable yaller girl from dem' gals-outs on de Boardwalk?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Tactical Tactics.

Chemist—Restore! You mean preserve, Miss. (Deal to the amount of 17s. or immediately executed.)—Tattler

Brightening Faded Frocks.

Some one may have a pink cotton or linen dress all good, but badly faded. If so, put a piece of Turkey-red cheese-cloth in water, and boil till the color is right. The desired shade may be obtained by dipping a little of the dress. It will dry a bit lighter than when wet, and will leave an even color all over. One eighth of a yard is more than enough for a dress. Navy-blue cheese-cloth may be used in the same manner to freshen the color of a light blue dress.—Woman's Home Companion for July.

An Original Optimist.

A most unusual optimist was Sophocles McCue.
"Cheer up!" had often cry. "The sky will not be always blue. The sun is warm and bright, I know, but do not mope or pine. Just think of all the gloomy days on which it cannot shine. Don't say because it doesn't rain today it won't tonight. Tomorrow may be drier and dank, although today is bright. Into each life some sun must shine. A storm's not always due."
Ah, a most unusual optimist was Sophocles McCue! —A. H. Fowler in Puck.

A Narrow Escape.

Tom—How did you come out at the church fair last night?
Jack—I came out with a nickel—just enough to pay my car fare home.—Atlanta Constitution.

Hard Luck.

"My fiancé and his best man ovarate themselves—or something like that—at his bachelor dinner."—Cleveland Leader.

Cleveland on Hearst's Nomination.

On October 9, 1908, Mr. Cleveland wrote the following letter, which is quoted in the July McClure's.
"I am dumfounded by the nomination of Hearst. If my faith in the intelligence of our people were less, I should think this nomination gave a sad impressiveness to the inquiry, 'Is the Democratic party to die?'"

Knowing What You Are Talking About.

You can get an audience almost anywhere, when you know what you are talking about. Senator Page's remarks in the Senate the other day in the discussion of free hides, were based on actual personal knowledge and caused his colleagues to sit up and take notice. —Island Pond Herald.

Plot to Blow Up an Editor's House.

When Fremont Older, a San Francisco editor, was prosecuting the grafters there they planned to blow up his cottage with dynamite. In telling of the plot in the July McClure's, Mrs. Older says:
"Already the murderers had purchased and hidden dynamite in the cottage near ours rented by them. They had entered our place, as was shown, to find the lay of the rooms. For thirty days they had lain in wait for us. At that time, fortunately, Mr. Older had been enigmatically warned by one for whom he had done a favor.
"I won't say a thing, except don't dine at the beach; don't dine at the beach. I can't tell you what I know, but keep away from there."
