THE BARRE DAILY TIMES

Entered at the Post Office at Barre as Second Class Matter.

Published every week-day afternoon. Subscriptions: One year, $3; one month, 25 cents; single copy, 1 cent. Frank E. Langley, Publisher.

FRIDAY, JULY 9, 1909.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

5,125

Now let's get in the hay.

Burlington has that feeling which comes with the cold gray dawn of the morning after.

The suffragettes nearly made monkeys of themselves by appearing in New York streets with hunch-gardes.

Dr. D. K. Parsons of Chicago will get a lot of help in his efforts to die a poor man—that is, help to get rid of his last million dollars.

Hereafter the curfew will ring at 10 o'clock 'nights in Washington, D. C., and all little senators and representatives will be tucked away in their beds.

People who have been forced to drink from the common cups found in the average railway train will be very much pleased to learn that the Boston & Maine railroad is to try the experiment of individual drinking-cups, which are thrown away after once being used. A great deal of progress will thus have been made toward reducing the spread of diseases. There is perhaps no place where the common drinking-cup is so dangerous as in a railway train.

Whenever "Jack" Harris feels like "sifring up the animals," he writes a communication from Washington to some Vermont newspaper and then settles back to enjoy the fusillade of words which various Vermont newspapers hurl at him. Harris just thrives on this sort of thing and nothing pleases him more than to be the center of the attack. Who is Harris? Well, Harris is an ex-Vermont newspaper man who is now opening and shutting the Senate side door in the national capital, but who still retains a penchant for writing. He generally gets back to Danville to spend his summers, but has thus far been chained in Washington by Senator Aldrich. When he does get back to little old Vermont he runs his farm with an amateurish hand and eats the pie which mother used to make, and when it rains he loves to hear the gentle patter, pitter on the roof of his humble cottage. How do we know? Because Harris says so in his long-distance editorials in the Hardwick Gazette. But, brothers, let Harris have his little summer amusement.

CANADA AND UNITED STATES ARE CORDIAL.

One striking feature of the three hundredth anniversary celebration of the discovery of Lake Champlain is the spirit of cordial relations which it brought out between the United States and Canada. Canada joined with Vermont and New York in the celebration and her official representatives brought the felicitations of the national government. Perhaps no stronger manifestation of the good will of Canada toward the United States was made than that of Postmaster General Lemieux of the former country in his address in Burlington yesterday. He referred to the fact that here are two great nations lying side by side in a spirit of confidence and with little more than the merest formalities to indicate that there is any difference between the two. We have the customs service at the border, a few immigration restrictions and a slight policing service on the Great Lakes; and that's about all that separates Canada from Vermont, from

New York, from North Dakota, from any of the northern tier of states. The entire cordial is very marked, and the celebration this week has served to bring this more noticeably to attention, with Americans and Canadians fraternizing in a common cause.

This spirit has been so marked that the New York Sun makes the suggestion that the two countries join in celebrating the hundred years of peace between the United States and Great Britain, having worked together a year ago in celebrating the stirring events connected with Montcalm and Wolfe on the Heights of Abraham and now the discovery of Lake Champlain. Says the contemporary:

As a fitting sequel to those celebrations on both sides of the line, it has been suggested that, when the time comes, this country and Canada should jointly and officially take notice of the fact that there had been a hundred years of peace between the republic and the self-governing Dominion. It would be an event more practically significant as regards international amity than the unanimous declarations of half a dozen peace conferences.

CURRENT COMMENT

A Successful Exhibition.

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition is not so large as some which have been held in this country. It is stated, by way of illustration, that the entire Seattle fair could be housed in the great agricultural building of the St. Louis exposition, but the comparison does not mean as much as might be inferred. The agricultural building at St. Louis was a building of unusual size, and the fair at Seattle is, from all accounts, exceedingly creditable and well worth going a long way to see. What promises to be particularly remarkable about the exposition at Seattle is that it will pay. That is to say, that it will come out ahead, with all bills paid and something to spare. It is certain that it is a well planned, entertaining and instructive show, and the balance sheet for the first month shows net profits of $88,000, from an attendance amounting to nearly 700,000 and other sources of income. It will be seen that the prospects are excellent that Seattle will come out whole financially, in addition to the credit which she will deserve as the creator of a successful exposition. Chicago and St. Louis were not expected to pay—they were purposely on too large a scale for profit, and Jamestown was a hopeless financial failure. In addition to being something of a failure as an exhibition, Seattle's record is evidently to be a good one. Everything was in shape on the day that the fair opened, it gives its visitors more than their money's worth, and is in the way to be a paying investment at that.—Manchester Union.

Jack Harris' Statements.

John Harris of Washington, in a letter to the Burlington Free Press, again notifies Vermont newspapers to mind their own business and not butt in with a discussion of affairs taking place in the rarified congressional atmosphere in which Harris moves. It is evident that John himself, in his self-appointed task of censoring and regulating all Vermont editorial utterances on public questions, is in a fair way to become a victim of the "protracted and terrific mental and nervous strain" which he so pathetically describes.—Enosburg Standard.

BARRE'S PAVEMENT.

"Rock Products" Refutes Statement That There Is No Granite in Street.

The writer had his attention called recently to a paragraph in a sample copy of the journal called Stone. The article reads as follows: "For the city which claims to be the granite center of the country to be without a single yard of granite pavement does not speak well for local enterprise." This reminds the writer that about a year ago he listened patiently to the publisher of that journal while he told him (before inquiring what branch of the stone business the writer might be engaged in) that Stone was published by the only man in the business who knows anything about granite. It may be interesting to recall that during a part of this conversation the publisher of Stone was standing in the middle of Main street, in Barre, standing upon some of the best granite pavement in the United States, and that this Barre granite pavement extends over nearly all the business streets of the city. We feel impelled to say further that there are several first class firms in Barre that can furnish in short order paving blocks in almost any quantity desired. Rock Products will be pleased to furnish the names of these firms to any one who may be interested.—Rock Products.

Some Facts About Rubber Tires.

Do you fully realize the advantage of rubber tires that are fresh and new?

We do NOT buy wagons all rubber tired, the age and quality of the tires are too uncertain, but we buy new fresh rubber of the highest grade and put it on right in our store. This means more work for us but greatly increased service to our customers.
