This piece of steel, half an inch thick, came from a pillar of the viaduct underneath which the dynamite had been placed. WANTS $800 FROM RAILROAD

Addison County Shipper Sues Boston & Maine R. R.

ON VARIOUS GROUNDS

Judgment of Lower Court in Myron Kelsey vs. James A. Graves Case Was Affirmed To-day—Attorney Too Ill to Hear Opinion.

In the Vermont supreme court at Montpelier to-day judgment was affirmed in the case of Myron Kelsey vs. James A. Graves, an Addison county case, in which the plaintiff was awarded a verdict of $50 and costs in the lower court. The plaintiff's attorney, W. A. Atwell, sent word to the State House this forenoon before the opening of court that he had met with a mishap and that he would be unable to attend court. Attorney Atwell participated in an involuntary bath last night when he tried to get into the house of his cousin, Henry Thornton, in the Cross block.

Not being able to get in the front door, he went around by the back way and not knowing how the land lay he walked off the bank into the North Branch, falling fifteen feet and landing in about three feet of water. He floundered about and cried loudly for help, being then pulled out by passersby who ran to his assistance. He was much bruised but was able to walk. To-day he was not in shape to attend court and so sent word that he couldn't be there to receive the opinion of the court in the case, in which he was an attorney, which, as it turned out, was in his favor. Mr. Atwell had not been in Montpelier for seventeen years and did not know there was a back back of his cousin's house.

Two hearings were held before supreme court this forenoon, both being from Addison county. In the first, A. T. Newsham is the plaintiff against the Boston & Maine railroad, claiming $900 damages on a shipment of two carloads of cattle to Boston. He claims that the cars were broken, that the train was delayed in transit, that the cattle were over-fed and over-watered and that they missed the market in Boston. Therefore, he wants damages from the railroad.

Lewis Morris has sued Andrew Treado, both being employes of the city of Vergennes. While they were engaged in their work in that city, Treado's horse ran away and smashed into Morris, inflicting injuries which he thinks are sufficient to merit damages.

LUMBER CASE IS STILL ON TRIAL.

Harry Daniels Is Chief Witness To-day in Case in Which He Is the Defendant in County Court.

The trial of the case of Mark Mears vs. Harry Daniels for lumber claimed to be due was continued in Washington county court today, the defendant being on the stand all day. He testified that in the agreement entered into between himself and Mr. Mears the lumber was to have been left at the mill. He was then asked by Attorney Laird what he would say as to the previous statement made by Mears on the stand that after receiving $1,000 if the deal proved a financial success, he was to receive $300 or $350 more. The witness said that this was not so and that no such understanding had been entered into. When asked whether Mr. Lambertson was a party to the arrangement, the witness answered that he was, before the attorney for the plaintiff had time to enter an objection. This answer was later ruled on by the court.

He testified that Lambertson was present at the deal and that he had told both men how many feet of lumber there was at the mill and what in his opinion it was worth. Mr. Daniels testified that $1,350 had been asked for the lumber, but that he had offered $1,000 for it. When asked if Mr. Mears had asked for more money from the witness, when he had discovered that the lumber was mislaid, the witness answered that he had not for a year after and then only the day before he had brought the suit.

PROBATE JUDGES AGREE.

To Conform Their Commitments of Insane With New Ruling.

The probate judges of Vermont met in Montpelier yesterday afternoon and last evening for their annual meeting. Judge F. J. Martin of Barre was elected chairman in place of Judge Hiram Carleton, deceased. The other officers hold over.

The time was spent in discussing questions of interest in probate courts and measures that ought to be brought before the legislature of 1910.

The opinion handed down Tuesday in supreme court which declares unconstitutional the law, whereby judges of probate have for many years committed insane paupers to the state hospital for the insane at Waterbury, came in for a good deal of discussion, but most of those present were inclined to agree with the supreme court decision.
