AMUSEMENT NOTES

"The Traveling Salesman" at the Barre Opera House This Evening.

The only play that ever had the endorsement of the United Commercial Travelers of America and the Travelers Protective association, is "The Traveling Salesman," James Forbes' comedy success which Henry B. Harris will present at the opera house to-night.

Incidentally it is the only play that has ever been written that truthfully depicts the most interesting of all American characters, the commercial drummer, with positive fidelity. Written by its author for the sole purpose of entertaining, it more than makes good as evidenced by nine months of uninterrupted success at the Gaiety theatre, New York, and four months at the Park theatre in Boston, to crowded houses. Mr. Forbes, it will be remembered, is the author of "The Chorus Lady," a play that has attracted the multitude of theatergoers by reason of its collection of slang phrases of unique originality. Its success, "The Traveling Salesman," brings to light slang idioms of a character that tend to throw an audience into convulsions of laughter.

GRANITEVILLE.

"The Thief" Saturday Night. No play in the last ten years has attracted as much attention or aroused a greater interest than "The Thief," Chicago, while its career on tour has been a record-breaking one.

The play was first produced at the Renaissance theatre in Paris, then came its New York production, which was followed by one in London and in each production the woman who played Marie Louise scored the greatest success of her career. But the success of "The Thief" does not in any way depend primarily on the exertions of any of its players. The worldwide interest shown in the play has been due to the pertinence its story has to every grade of society, if not to every particular family all the world over. Women like the wife in "The Thief," men similar to the husband, and lady replicas of the boy in that play are to be found leading such lives in the smallest village as well as the large cities of the land.

The story of the play is simple enough, as a story, it is intense, compelling in interest, wonderfully human, but it is a straightaway plot without any side issues. What intensifies this interest is the ingenuity with which Bernstein has told his story. Just when he is thought to have reached his climax, he veers off and attains still another, until his resourcefulness seems without end.

The N. E. G. P., public dance Saturday evening, November 6, in Miles' hall. Harris' orchestra. General admission, 25 cents.

RITA CARLYLE IN CHAS. FROHMAN'S PRODUCTION OF "THE THIEF" AT THE BARRE OPERA HOUSE, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6.
