The police are finding that the placards, which they have tacked up on poles on streets that are posted against coasting, are being torn off and destroyed by boys, and Chief Faulkner has instructed his officers to be on the lookout for the youngsters who are doing it and arrest them if caught at it. It has also come to the notice of the police that boys and girls both are laying themselves liable to arrest by sliding on posted streets.

Last Monday, just after Chief Faulkner had stopped a crowd of boys coasting on the Seminary street hill by the Catholic church, a traverse loaded with boys came down the hill and ran into a single team, driven by a woman. The sleigh was tipped over, and it was only by a fortunate circumstance that the woman was not seriously injured. Her dress caught in the sleigh and she was dragged a considerable distance before some men, who happened to be passing, could catch the horse by the head and stop it from running away. As it was, the woman was not injured and drove away. The posted streets are not to be coasted on and the officers will be obliged to make arrests if these violations continue.

A Tribute to the Late Mr. John F. MacDonald.

Editor Barre Times—Sir: I wish through your columns to express my deep regret on reading in your paper an account of the death of my late excellent countryman, Mr. John F. MacDonald. His family and mine were associated with the interest of the parish of Barre, in Inverness shire, Scotland, for generations. They were goodly, godly and respectable people, held in high esteem.

I little thought, when I saw Mr. MacDonald in New York a few short years ago, that I was never to look on his face again. The reaper, Death, hath no favorites.

My late friend was a loyal and true-hearted man, devoted to his excellent wife and family, proud of the dear old land of his birth, and true to this great land of his adoption. Far from his native health, may peace be the sentinel over his grave in the lovely green hills of Vermont.
