That some of the best comedians the world has ever produced were Scotchmen is well known. Billy McRobbie, the comedian who is making the big hit this week at the Pavilion, is a good example of the American-born Scotchman on the stage. This comedian has been forced to take four and five encores nightly, and even after talking and singing his entire repertoire of comedy has been forced to take two and three bows. Mr. McRobbie's parents were born at Perth, Scotland, and came to this country when the comedian was an infant. At the age of five years, the present Billy McRobbie, comedian, took first prize at a Scottish tournament as the best dressed Highlander's son wearing the McGregor plaid, the judges being the well-known Duncan C. Ross, the famous Scottish athlete and broadswordman, and Donald Deemie, the famous Scotch shot putter and cable thrower.
