My Uncle's Story

By A. B. SEARLE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

What a change half a century has made in methods of travel! In 1859 to reach New York from Cincinnati, then the Queen City of the West, one might go a part of the way by steamboat, another by stagecoach and the balance by canal. In such conveniences people were thrown together intimately, and lifelong friendships were often made. The passenger canalboat was the first to pass out of use, and there are few living who remember it as a method of travel.

It was in 1845 that one of these passenger canalboats was being dragged along by a horse on the towpath. There were no staterooms, only berths something like those on a modern sleeping car. Between these was the cabin, where the passengers lounged during the day and evening. At that time the professional gambler worked in the narrow channels of the period. He was on the steamboat, but did not inhabit the cabin. On this canalboat a portion of the bow had been curtained off, and in it were card tables. At one of these tables sat a professional gambler fleeing a youngster of twenty.

That youngster was my uncle, and I got the story I am about to tell from him.

He had been deputed to carry some $8,000 from Pittsburg to Harrisburg. How the gambler knew that he had the money with him he did not learn. My uncle played with the sharper till he had lost all the money that had been given him for his expenses, then began to play with his trust fund. He quit at 11 o'clock at night, having lost half of the $8,000.

The next morning was Sunday. A service was held in the cabin conducted by a clergyman slightly past middle age. My uncle was much impressed with his appearance and the fervor with which he spoke. His accent was that of the southerner. My uncle said that the clergyman attacked gambling, telling a number of interesting, many of them pathetic, incidents, in which some foolish person had been robbed of all he possessed. In these stories the speaker showed an intimate knowledge of all forms of swindling at cards. He was looking straight at my uncle while he talked and seemed to be speaking to him personally.

Then my uncle remembered that while playing with the gambler he had seen the clergyman standing among those overlooking the game. Notwithstanding that it was Sunday my uncle was eager to renew the play, hoping to win back what he had lost. He argued that to lose any part of the fund with which he had been interested would ruin him the same as if he lost the whole. Therefore Sunday afternoon he proposed to the gambler that they go to their curtained space for more play. The gambler, who knew well enough that the youngster would be after him, assented, and they were soon at play.

Of course my uncle lost steadily. His last thousand dollars was slowly melting away when who should walk in but the clergyman. He stood looking at the game for awhile, then said to my uncle: "Boy, you can't play with this man. He's a professional gambler and is playing with marked cards."

Picking up one of the cards lying on the table face down, the speaker, rubbing his thumb on it, said, "The king of clubs." Then, turning it over, his prophecy proved correct. In the same way he told the value of other cards. They were all provided with minute points that could be felt, but not easily seen. Then, turning to the gambler, he said, "Give the boy the money you have won from him."

The gambler put up a vigorous bluff. "What you got to do with this business, anyway? You're a parson and don't know any more about cards than a mule. You just get out of here or I'll find a way to put you out."

"How much has he won from you, boy?" asked the clergyman of my uncle.

"Seven thousand dollars."

"Give me what you have left. The only way I can get your loss back for you from this man is to win it at his own game. There's honor among thieves. He won't do it one way, but he will another."

My uncle turned over a few hundred dollars he had left. The clergyman sat down, a new pack of cards was brought out, and at it they went. At the end of an hour the clergyman had recovered $5,000. At the end of the second hour he had lost $500. At the end of the third hour he had regained all but $500 of my uncle's loss, and in half an hour more he had won every cent the gambler had taken. He showed his winnings over to the boy he had saved from ruin.

"There's only one man that can get the better of me on any game of cards," said the gambler, "and I haven't seen him for eighteen years." "Warren Phillips?"

"Yes."

"That's my name." The gambler looked at him in astonishment.

"Yes! I was one of the professionals in those days, though I never played any but a fair game. But I quit it and now look upon it with horror. I ran for years on the Prairie Belle and won a lot of money. It's all now in church-ans."

And that's the way my uncle was saved.

THE ADAM'S APPLE.

An Important Organ That Helps to Protect the Brain.

One of the most remarkable pieces of mechanism in the human system, a device which anticipated several of our modern patents, is the Adam's apple, which for ages physicians considered a sort of freak of nature without any material use in the human economy. But how differently this little device is considered today!

If we had no Adam's apple there would have been more deaths from apoplexy and brain disorder than ever chronicled in history. Instead of being a useless organ this article serves as an important storage system to protect the brain.

For instance, when we are excited or too animated the heart pumps the blood up to the brain a little too fast, and if it could not be stopped by some automatic device death or brain disease would follow. The Adam's apple is the blood storage system which intercepts the rapid flow and holds the surplus blood.

Again, if the supply from the heart runs short and the brain is likely to suffer from an insufficient supply the storage system gives up its surplus of blood. Thus this organ acts automatically to check and increase the flow of the blood to the brain, protecting that organ from damage through our temporary excesses.—Pearson's Weekly.

SUCCESSES FOR ALBANIANS

Two Important Passes Have Been Captured

TURKS ARE THREATENED

Great Skill Is Shown by the Rebels. The Leaders Are Believed to Be Abdul Hamid's Body Guard.

Constantinople, April 27.—The Albanian rising has again become serious and the government has decided to dispatch two brigades of reinforcements, equal to sixteen full battalions to the affected districts from Smyrna and Saloniki. Owing to the seizure of the telegraph lines, details of the trouble are slow in arriving, but according to latest reports, Albanians attacked eight Turkish battalions near Shtimya, in northern Albania, and successfully prevented the Turkish occupation of Dulla Pass. The Albanians then captured Kachanik Pass and seized a military train conveyed by 150 Turkish soldiers who were disarmed and sent back to Uskub, a distance of fifteen miles. The capture of Kachanik Pass endangers communications with Uskub, and threatens complete isolation of the Turkish army in Kosovo plain, in upper Albania. The Albanians are displaying such strategic skill as to lead to the belief here that their leaders probably include some of the members of the old body guard of the deposed Sultan Abdul Hamid. Unconfirmed reports make reference to heavy casualties in the fighting.

KNEE TO AWKLE A MASS OF HUMOR

Suffering Simply Indescribable—Had to Scratch Till Blood Ran—Health Undermined from Lack of Sleep—Gave Up Hope but

CUTICURA FREED HIM FROM SKIN-TORMENT

"About seven years ago a small abrasion appeared on my right leg just above my ankle. It irritated me so that I began to scratch and it began to spread until my leg from my ankle to the knee was one solid mass of humor. The irritation was always worse at night and would not allow me to sleep, or my wife either, and it was completely undermining our health. I lost fifty pounds in weight and was almost out of my mind with pain and chagrin as no matter where the irritation came, at work, on the street or in the presence of company, I would have to scratch it until I had the blood running down into my shoe. I simply cannot describe my suffering during those seven years. The pain, morbid, excruciating, drove me to the point where I was simply indescribable on paper and one has to experience it to know what it is.

"I tried all kinds of doctors and remedies but I might as well have thrown my money down a sewer. They would dry it up for a little while and fill me with hope only to break out again just as bad if not worse. I had given up hope of ever being cured when I was introduced by my wife to the Cuticura Remedies for a little while I began to see a change and after taking a dozen bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, in conjunction with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, the trouble had entirely disappeared and my leg was as firm as the day I was born. Now after a lapse of six months with no signs of a recurrence I feel perfectly safe in extending to you my heartfelt thanks for the good the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I shall always recommend them to my friends W. H. White, 312 E. Canal St., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 and Apr. 13, 1909."

When Judge Lawler indicated that there had been collusion between the defense and the district attorney's office, Fickert denounced the court. Judge Lawler declared the district attorney would be given an opportunity to improve the case before the court, and the case went over for trial until July 14.

In Paris, however, he was unable to receive the treatment for arterio-sclerosis from which he was suffering, but, notwithstanding this, he showed marked improvement for a time, due to his wonderful vitality. Again last February, his death was expected momentarily, but the crisis passed, leaving him less able to withstand the next attack. Last week it was apparent that he could not hold out much longer.

THE TRIAL OF HEINZE

Copper Man Called Upon to Answer Numerous

CHARGES AGAINST HIM

Selecting the Jurymen Has Begun—Many Questions Are Asked by the Counsel for the Man Under Indictment.

New York, April 27.—The banking relations of Charles W. Morse and F. Augustus Heinze figured in the proceedings at the very outset of Heinze's trial, begun yesterday in earnest in the United States circuit court, on charges of misappropriation of the funds of the Mercantile National bank and over-certification of checks drawn upon it. Seven counts in the indictments against Heinze were on Monday quashed by Judge Hough and 38 were left upon which to try him and the government attorneys expressed their readiness to proceed.

When court opened yesterday, 12 men were tentatively selected as a jury from the talenans selected, and the process of elimination begun. Julian R. Stanchfield, counsel for Heinze, had many suggestive questions to ask the jurymen. One of the first was if they would be prejudiced against Heinze because Charles W. Morse was chairman of the executive committee of the Mercantile National bank during the period covered by the indictments against Heinze.

Morse is now serving a prison term on conviction of violation of the banking laws.

Even more interesting ground was touched when Mr. Stanchfield asked the jurors:

"Have you any connection with the Standard Oil company, or have you read of the long series of suits Heinze had with the Standard Oil?"

United States District Attorney Fickert objected to this question, and Judge Hough sustained him. Mr. Stanchfield also wanted to know of the jurors if they had known H. H. Rogers or R. H. Rogers, jr., and if they owned copper stocks.

Anson F. Robinson, financial secretary to F. S. Flower & company, bankers, was one of the jurors tentatively put in. Mr. Stanchfield asked him: "Is your employer known in the street as the Standard Oil company?"

Mr. Robinson said he preferred not to answer. Mr. Stanchfield challenged him for cause, and Robinson was excused.

"I want it to appear on record," said Mr. Stanchfield, "that Mr. Heinze has been fighting the Standard Oil for 15 or 20 years in the state of Montana, and secured up that state by litigation, as well as in Nebraska. The interests of one defendant and the Standard Oil are diametrically opposed, as are his interests and those associated with Amalgamated Copper. There has been a constant warfare between them."

One man was excused when he said that he had talked with Morse about the case. Heinze's lawyer was particular to ask each man if he was his lawyer, and those associated with Amalgamated Copper. There has been a constant warfare between them."

When recess was taken, the government will still to pass upon the jurymen tentatively picked and accepted by the defense.

$100,000 MOSS JEWELS FOUND IN SECRET VAULT

Gems Were Supposed to Have Been Stolen After Death of Woman, Who Had Made Mystery of Hiding Place.

New York, April 27.—The disappearance of $100,000 worth of jewels of the late Mrs. Theodore Octavia Moss, widow of the late theatrical manager, has been cleared up by a freak of chance. The missing jewel collection was revealed, it was learned yesterday, by the accidental striking of a foot on a secret spring which released a door in a pedestal in the home of Mrs. Moss on Madison avenue. Mrs. Moss was a wealthy woman, and took no one into her confidence. She made numerous purchases of all manner of wares and stored them away unopened. Last January Mrs. Moss died, and as her jewels were not found it was thought she had sold them. A few days ago when Beverly Kator, a student at Columbia university and grandson of Mrs. Moss, went through one of the rooms he happened to stumble against a pedestal that supported a work of art. Instantly a secret door in the pedestal flew open. There, in the recess, was a dazzling array of gems—all the trinkets and jewels that had been famous during the life of his grandmother. Enough of the sparkling hoard was revealed to stock a modern jewelry store.

DEAN OF SWINDLERS TAKEN.

"Chappy" Moran, Who in His Time Has Made a Million, Arrested.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Charles Moran, better known as "Chappy" Moran, alleged by Post Office Inspector Sturtout of Chicago and Inspector J. T. Cortelyou of Philadelphia to be the dean of American swindlers, is under arrest awaiting removal to Philadelphia.

In the last twenty years, Moran's alleged illegal gains are said to aggregate close to a million dollars. He never operated on a small scale. When operatives Moore and Elston of Chicago found Moran, he was occupying an expensive suite of three rooms in an aristocratic hotel. A valet attended him and had plenty to do caring for his master's extensive wardrobe.

Moran is said to be known on both sides of the Atlantic, having in his earlier days plied the profession of gaming on the big liners. Later he became known as a daring and successful wire tapper. His picture is said by inspectors Stuart and Cortelyou to be in every roguish gallery in this country and Europe. There has been a standing order in New York
