

EDWARD LIES IN ST. GEORGE'S

Great Funeral of British King Held Today

NINE ROYAL HEADS ATTEND

Crowd of 2,500,000 People Watched Parade from Westminster to Paddington, When Train Was Taken to Windsor.

London, May 20.—The body of King Edward was today laid at rest in St. George's chapel at Windsor, where seven other British kings have been buried. Nearly 2,500,000 people saw the funeral procession, in which nine kings rode, and which left Westminster hall at 9:50 o'clock.

The nine kings rode on horseback right after the gun-carriage bearing the body of the dead monarch. The first was King George of Great Britain, in a general's uniform. Then came Kaiser Wilhelm and the duke of Connaught in field marshal's uniforms.

The procession, which was well guarded, was followed by a long line of military bands, and the procession closed with a rear guard of fire and police brigades.

The Burial at Windsor

Before the procession began, Alexandra and King George were alone beside the bier for a few moments. It took two hours and seven minutes for the procession to pass from Westminster hall to the addition station, where the coffin was transferred from the gun-carriage to a funeral car, in which the run to Windsor was made in half an hour, arriving there at 12:34.

The Procession

Black was the keynote of the entire scene; excepting the uniforms of the soldiers and of many of the royal representatives, hardly a speck of color was visible. In the throng of spectators, from the aristocrat to the humblest workman, everyone was clad in the same sombre hue. Most of them had waited many hours before the procession began to file slowly from the main Westminster hall gate.

Advances guard of the sovereign's escort of white Life Guards, in brass helmets, white plumes, steel cuirasses, white breeches and huge jackboots.

Among them scarlet-coated Grenadiers, Essex, Colchester and Irish Guards, with huge black bearskin headgear, helmeted infantrymen, blue and gold artillerymen, blue and white and blue and red Lancers, blue and gold Hussars, brass helmeted Dragoons and Dragon Guards, cuirassed Life Guards, cuirassed Horse Guards, green-clad Riflemen, killed Highlanders and khaki-clad Territorials.

Detachments of the royal navy, including the Royal Marine Light Infantry, Royal Marine Infantry and companies of blue-jackets from various ships.

Foreign military detachments representing practically every European power.

Staff of the royal household, judges of the high courts in wig and ermine-trimmed scarlet robes, and members of the privy council in all kinds of uniforms, official and court dress.

Group of foreign military attaches gorgeously uniformed and plumed.

Headquarters staff of the British army, equally magnificent. Included in this group were four men who attracted more than usual attention, admiration and respectful scrutiny, for they wore the scarlet tunics, gold-leaf epaulettes, broad blue sashes and parti-colored plumed hats and carried the batons which proclaimed them British field marshals—Lord Roberts or "Little Bobs," Lord Kitchener or the "Iron Man," Sir George White and Sir Charles Brownlow, a quartet of the most famous soldiers in the world.

Admirals Sir Arthur Wilson, Lord Fisher and Sir E. Seymour.

Bands of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, massed Guards regiments, Royal Engineers and Royal Artillery.

The duke of Norfolk, earl marshal of England.

White Staves—Lord Beler, the duke of Buccleuch and the Earl Waldegrave.

Lord Chamberlain, Lord Capington and Lord Steward, Earl Beauchamp, each with six aides-de-camp.

Gun carriage drawn by 100 sailors bearing coffin with a bare party on either side of non-commissioned officers of the Guards and Household Cavalry. Outside these, lines of honorary pal-bearers, including several of the best "down men" in England, hedging both groups around, a detachment of relics of a bygone age—the Yeomen of the Guard, in magnificent scarlet and gold Tudor uniforms.

Four-year-old Son of Dr. G. E. London Caused Excitement—Some Damage

Burlington, May 20.—A small fire occurred yesterday afternoon at the home of Dr. G. E. London of 190 South Union street, this city, when his small son, aged four years, attempted experiments with a lighted candle.

The boy was sent to his room on the third floor for his usual afternoon nap, but not feeling sleepy, procured a candle from another room, lighted it and proceeded to look for something he had lost under the couch.

Closing the door, after his hunt, he extinguished the candle and returned it to the place from which he had taken it. Soon after, Charles Bernard, who was working next door, saw flames burst from the windows and rang in a fire alarm.

The candle flame had communicated with something in the room to start the blaze, but the father, who was on the lower floor, supposed his boy to be asleep, and knew nothing of the fire until Mr. Bernard informed him, when he hastened to the room to get him. By this time the interior of the room was in flames, and Dr. London's hair, eyebrows and moustache were badly singed, the boy coming in from another room in the midst of the excitement.

The fire spread rapidly to the partitions, some of which had to be torn out before the blaze was entirely extinguished. Chemicals were used, but failed to quench the flames, and considerable damage was done by water, which the fire department found it necessary to use. The loss has not been accurately estimated, but includes damage which will necessitate the entire refitting of one room, some loss of furniture and damage on the lower floors by water.

STARBED HIS WIFE

Charles Pincio Arrested at Concord, N. H., on Charge

Concord, N. H., May 20.—Charles Pincio, aged 23, a brakeman on the southern division of the Boston and Maine, charged with aggravated assault on his young wife, and possibly with attempt to kill, was arrested last night by City Marshal Kimball and Policeman Woodard after a considerable hunt in the railroad yard, where he had taken refuge.

Shortly after 6 o'clock some domestic trouble Pincio and his wife had been having culminated in his losing complete control of his temper and seizing a large pocket jackknife, he stabbed her in the back. Seeing the flow of blood following the withdrawal of the knife, and with his wife's screams arousing the neighborhood, he fled from the house and made his way to the railroad yard, a few hundred yards away.

Neighbors, summoned by the cries of Mrs. Pincio, notified the police and called a physician, who examined the wound and dressed it. Although somewhat deep and jagged no serious results are expected unless blood poison or some other untoward development sets in.

The policeman on the beat throughout the city were quickly notified to be on the lookout for Pincio and Marshal Kimball, in charge of a squad of men, started a systematic search of the railroad yard. Pincio when found made no attempt to resist arrest, and accompanied the officers to the station quietly enough.

Fight Pictures at Opera House

On Saturday at the opera house will be shown the moving pictures of the greatest exhibition of the maul art that was ever demonstrated in this country to wit the Wolpact-Nelson pictures. The interest in this exhibition is tremendous and every one desires to see the vivid reproduction of this greeling contest as shown by the camera. The pictures themselves are wonderful portrayals of the art of the picture industry, showing as they do the continuation of the contest long after gun down, something that has not previously been successful in the taking of pictures. The contest was one long to be remembered as it proved conclusively that both Wolpact and Nelson were two of the greatest exponents of the maul art this country has ever produced, not alone in their cleverness as fighters, but as to their ability to withstand punishment and courage in the face of defeat, which seemed imminent to each of the fighters at different stages of the contest. These pictures will be seen afternoon and evening Saturday, next.

MAY BUILD A CAR LINE

Burlington Traction Company Buys Water Rights in Vergennes

Burlington, May 20.—The Burlington Traction company has purchased the water rights of the Otter creek in Vergennes, according to a statement made last evening by J. J. Flynn, a director of that company. The deed to the property has not been made yet and Mr. Flynn stated that he did not wish to make known the purchase price.

The water rights purchased comprises the principal power of the falls, it containing all the water in the creek during the summer time when the water is low. This fall probably has been utilized longer for manufacturing purposes than any other waterfall in Vermont.

When asked concerning the proposed extension of the electric line to Vergennes, Mr. Flynn stated that he did not know as yet when the line would be extended. No surveys have been made, but last fall there was much talk of such a line. The purchase of the new water right will make an electric line to Vergennes possible whenever the directors see fit to build one.

Defeated Joe Thomas in 16th Round Last Night

San Francisco, May 20.—Joe Thomas' attempt to re-establish himself as a middle-weight champion received a rude setback in his fight last night at Dreamland rink with Billy Pakpe of Illinois. It took Pakpe 16 rounds to knock out the Californian.

A right swing to the body sent Thomas to the mat. This was followed by several rights delivered with crashing force which flustered Thomas for the count.

WILL EXAMINE SARTORELLI

To See if He Is Just Right in His Mind, Case Put Over

The intoxication case against Michael Sartorelli, which was set for a hearing in city court this morning, was again continued until next Monday morning, and in the meantime, at the request of Judge Scott, Sartorelli will be examined as to his sanity. Sartorelli is the man who, Joseph Desobocher, claims, pulled a revolver on him last Sunday evening, following a quarrel at the Cleary boarding-house. At 11 o'clock that evening, Sartorelli was arrested by officer Carle and locked up in the police station.

He was arraigned in court Monday morning on the charge of being intoxicated and pleading not guilty. He tried all his attorneys in the city to defend him, but was unsuccessful, and this morning he told the court that he wanted time to send to Boston for a lawyer. He claims that the officers stole his watch and some rings, which he claimed he had on his hands when arrested, and he told the grand jury that the officers would settle for them, and for tearing his coat, too. When arrested, he put up a fight, and officer Carle says that if he had any rings or a watch they must have been lost in the scuffle, as he did not have them when he was searched at the station.

Judge Scott stated today that he was of the opinion that the man was not right mentally, and he did not wish to try him until he had been examined by physicians. Alderman Even, chairman of the charity committee of the board of aldermen, was notified to have the man examined by the city physician.
