There is in the window of a jewelry store in Swanton an exact model of a Japanese naval machine gun built by W. F. Gearing of that place from the scraps of gun parts used in the construction of pieces for the Japanese government. Mr. Gearing, who is now employed in the shops of the Robin Hood Powder company, Swanton, worked in the English arsenal at the time of the Russian war, when the company was turning out guns for the Japanese, and he used his spare time in making this model. It is complete and in proportion in all its details, and the owner has often discharged the piece.
