Death of Charles Nowas, a Former Resident of the Town.

The following was taken from the Papillon, Nebraska, paper, concerning the death of Charles Nowas, a former resident of Marshfield, which his many friends will be interested to read. Much sympathy is felt here for the afflicted family. "The unexpected death of Charles Nowas Tuesday night, July 12, came as a shock to the people of Papillon and vicinity. Mr. Nowas was quite well Monday and went to Omaha to have an operation performed to remove the tumors that had formed in the nasal cavity. The growth started about 45 years ago, when Mr. Nowas was in Liberty prison. It started as a small adenoid growth and had been growing more acute as years went by. He had three operations performed previous to this time, but the surgeons failed to get the growth and after a time it returned. He was very anxious to have the difficulty removed completely this time and the operation Monday was the fourth of a series performed within the past ten days. He returned Monday evening in apparently good health, but seemed somewhat restless, and about three o'clock Tuesday morning the doctor was called to offer some relief. He became unconscious about ten o'clock and remained so until his death, fourteen hours later. The tumors removed were called polyp tumors, and there were enough of them to fill a common cup. The close cutting probably caused inflammation, that extended into the brain cavity. Apoplexy seemed to have been the immediate cause of his death. "Mr. Nowas was born in Marshfield, Vt., in 1843, and in 1861 he enlisted in Co. C, 1st Vermont cavalry, and remained with the regiment during forty-three important battles in which the regiment participated from the time it was organized to the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, except a number of months he spent in Libby prison, where his brother, George, died. His regiment was at the second battle of Bull Run, Cedar mountain, Gettysburg, Knaptrick's raid around Richmond, with McClellan in the Peninsula campaign, with Sheridan in the Shenandoah valley at Appomattox and passed in the grand review at Washington at the close of the war. "These important battles and many others marked the record of one of the most valiant soldiers of the war of the rebellion. He lived a life of honor, conscious of noble acts, and performed his duty as a citizen with the same zeal as he fought as a soldier. He took an active part in politics and filled a number of important offices, being sergeant-at-arms of the House, clerk of the Senate, and for a number of years was trustee of the schools, greatly interested in horticulture, and his home was surrounded with scrubbery and flowers. "He leaves a wife, whom he married in Marshfield, Vt., in 1865, Pella Jane Clark, and three years later they came to Iowa. He also leaves six children, five sons and one daughter; also one brother, B. B. Nowas, and one sister, Mrs. Nancy Simpson, in Vermont."

WHERE SHALL JILL FIND JACK?

Social Conditions Compel Women to Extend Their Field of Work. "Every Jack has his Jill." It is a tender twilight thought, and it more or less settles Jill. When the census man was at work in 1900, however, he went about and counted 2,200,000 American women who were more than twenty-five years old and who were still unmarried.

The Cause of Sunstroke.

During the summer months each year heat prostrations occur and often terminate fatally. These accidents have a physiological cause, classified by medical science as "sunstroke"; the victims most susceptible being people careless of their physical well-being, the debilitated, the old and the intemperate. A French physician who has studied "sunstroke" has come to the conclusion that the trouble is due not to an increase of bodily heat, but to the action of hemoglobin, the substance that forms the dry constituents of the red blood corpuscles, which spreads through the physical tissues with all the effect of a powerful poison.

Man and His Ways.

Stefano Inchiostro is the name of the pope's cook. He has recently been relating his experiences in The Veneto, from which it is seen that his post is a veritable sinecure. For twenty-seven years he was the cook in the seminary or the patriarch of Venice, the dignity held by the pope before his call to the chair of St. Peter, and consequently was well known to his holiness. On June 23, 1903, Stefano received a summons from his old master to repair to the Vatican. He went and was conducted to the presence of the pope, and it was only the geniality of the pontiff that placed the cook at his ease, for he was greatly moved. The cook enables us to have a glimpse of the daily life of his venerable master, who is an example of Horace's saying that change of place does not alter the man. After celebrating mass, the pontiff takes a little coffee. Precisely at noon, he lunches in company with Mgr. Pescini and Mgr. Brosson. They are always served by a particular valet de chambre. The repast is modest in the extreme. Some soup, a little meat from the soup, and rarely there is a roasted joint. At 9 o'clock at night, the pope takes his supper, more frugal, if possible, than the midday meal. Vegetables and a little meat is the night repast. In winter, the pope takes more soup than in summer, made from dried vegetables. His holiness is very fond of the "potentilla" (soupe de maïs) made as it was in the days past in Venice, and it is generally accompanied by some fish sent from Civita Vecchia or Venice.—The Bits.
