THE THIN AND WEAK

Easy Way for Them to Get Strong and Fat. Samsone is not an ordinary medicine; it is a flesh-forming food that is adapted to the most delicate. Its tonic effect gives strength and health, so that after its use for a short time all the flesh and fat-producing elements in the food will be easily assimilated and retained by the body. The large sale druggist Davis has had on Samsone since he first introduced it in Barre and the wonderful results following its use have made him such an enthusiastic believer in its great merits that he gives his personal guarantee to refund the money if Samsone does not make thin people fat and restore strength and health. When a gain in weight is noticed after Samsone has been used for a week or ten days, and health has improved and you notice yourself growing stronger, you certainly should feel more satisfied with what you have received from the small cost of 50c.

Mrs. Walter E. Granger has had as summer boarders, two sisters from Welleley, Mass., very pleasant, intelligent ladies. They greatly enjoy Vermont for their summer outings. They are now on their way home, carrying, we hope, pleasant memories of our town. It is told us that worthy townsman, J. S. Hopkins, will soon be going to close his work in the P. A. Devens store, and that he will likely spend the winter in the West. We hope there may be no plans of coming that will very long keep him away from us.

The address at the Congregational church last Thursday evening, by Miss Olive Gibson, relative to her work in Albuquerque, New Mexico, proved very interesting. She is a delightfully bright speaker, and had something to say well worth the hearing. We suppose other towns in Vermont will have opportunities to hear her. If so they should not fail to improve them. "We have an ear to the ground" for the new of any and all the triumphs of Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire, in getting towards the chair of the governor of that state, as our town was the birthplace of his father, Perkins Bass, and of his grandfather, Joel Bass. Bass it was long the home of his great grandfather, Joel Bass, sr., and having as we personally do, a great admiration for the many sterling "Bass traits," that we have seen and known so much of, we think New Hampshire will not go amiss in electing him governor now.

HOW TO SWINDLE A BANK.

All You Need, Says Rotbarth, is a Presentable Address. New York, Sept. 17.—A formula for obtaining the complete confidence of the most cautious bank president was stated Thursday by Adolph Rotbarth, the hop merchant, who confessed that in the last three years he victimized New York banks for more than $100,000. He would be free to-day if he had not grown careless and submitted conflicting statements to two banks, from one of which he sought to borrow to repay the other. The credit man compared and caught him. "All you need," he said from his cell in the Tombs, "is a presentable address, respectable clothes, a good letterhead and a statement of assets." "When I first went to the bank for money, I told them that I might need as much as $50,000. They told me to go ahead and submit a statement of assets, and they would lend me all I wanted. So I submitted a false statement. Anyone else could have done the same." By letterhead Rotbarth meant not only the printed stationery, but the right to use it. The European firm of Rotbarth & Co., for which the firm of Martin Rotbarth & Co., of which Adolph was a member, were agents in this country, was known to be a large concern and held a position of confidence. The prisoner surprised the district attorney's office Thursday by a refusal to accept bail. "I haven't a cent," he said. "I don't want any. I am willing to take my medicine. All I want is a quick trial and to have the public let the grass grow over my memory."

NO MORE DISTRESS FROM THE STOMACH

All Misery from Dyspepsia, Gas, Indigestion and Heartburn Vanishes and You Will Feel Fine in Five Minutes. Every family here ought to keep some Diapain in the house, as any one of you may have an attack of indigestion or stomach trouble at any time, day or night. This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a distressed, out-of-order stomach in minutes afterwards. If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or you lay like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion. Ask your pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapain and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors. Pape's Diapain is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there. Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery at any drug store, waiting for you. These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to cure almost any chronic case of dyspepsia, indigestion or any other stomach trouble.

PRaises Wife Who Left Him.

Poverty Stricken Minister Says She Was Too Fine for Surroundings. Washington, D. C., Sept. 17.—Driven to the verge of nervous prostration, and forced to abandon for a while his clerical career and accept a position in the Congressional library, because of his marital troubles, the Rev. George Brodthage, whose wife Tuesday got a divorce at Reno, retains nothing but love and affection for the woman who followed him 18 years ago. Dr. Brodthage, for years pastor of St. John's Lutheran church of this city, was not recalled when his contract expired last August. He is now employed in the catalogue division of the Congressional library. He lives in two rooms on the top floor of a boarding house, where he cooks his own meals and does his light housekeeping, so that his 17-year-old son may finish a university education in his father's home city, Berlin.

She was too fine a lady for her surroundings here," said Dr. Brodthage last night. "She was from high court circles in Berlin, well educated and of refined and artistic tastes. She didn't like America. She said the people she met were ignorant and had nothing in common with her. She had not the opportunity to view and discuss art and music, level and studied in the fatherland. She was always homesick. "She wanted to get a divorce long ago and I said to her, 'Marie, if you can name me a man who will marry you and take care of you I will let you get a divorce. You are my wife and I can't let you go unless some man who loves you and whom you love will marry you and make you happy.' "My wife never loved any other man. She was always true to me. She is a noble woman with a noble character. She will return to Germany as soon as possible. "My son will probably live in Berlin with his mother. I will not interfere, despite the consent of the Nevada court, that the boy remain with me. He is now living with my father there. As there will be no breach between his father's family if he desires. Of course I will have nominal supervision over him, but I have every confidence in my wife's tastes and ideas for his education and bringing up. I will continue to support him." Dr. Brodthage was educated in the University of Berlin. He is an accomplished linguist, and is well known for his writings on various subjects. Mrs. Brodthage is the daughter of the famous German architect, Schinkel, who designed certain government buildings and the Apollo theatre in Berlin.

MORE ON SUGAR FRAUDS.

Testimony That Arbuckle Brothers Paid Gratuities to Government Weighers. New York, Sept. 17.—That the firm of Arbuckle Brothers, sugar and coffee importers, had a fixed scale of gratuities which were paid regularly to United States custom weighers, was the testimony advanced Thursday in the trial of George E. Doyle and other former weighers on charges of sharing in a conspiracy to defraud the government by underweighing imports. Thomas S. Doyle, who was assistant dock superintendent for the Arbuckles in 1898, when they began a fight against the so-called sugar trust, was the witness who connected the payments to government employes. Arbuckle Brothers some time ago settled the case against them by a cash payment of $885,000. Doyle testified that his company at first paid the federal weighers a regular monthly salary of $100. Later this was reduced to $50. Minor government employes connected with the weighing of sugar received lesser sums, usually about $10, for each entry they handled. Doyle said the payments to weighers were made by him. All efforts by the government attorneys to make him admit that the gratuities were given for underweighing of sugar were futile, however. I understand that through payment of Arbuckle Brothers were to receive every kind of accommodation," was his reply to all questions.

NUGGETS OF GOLD

Some of the Largest Ever Struck Were Found by Chance. THE OLIVER MARTIN CHUNK. It Was Turned Up by a Miner Who Was Digging a Grave For His Drowned Comrade—A Starving Miner Unearthed the "Welcome Stranger."

Nowhere does fortune indulge her love of the dramatic and the sensational more fully than in the gold fields. Take, for instance, the story of the discovery of the world famous "Blanche Barkley" nugget in the early days of Australian gold mining, which sent a thrill around the world. Samuel Napier, a sailor, with his brother Charles and one Robert Ambrose, their cook and general handy man, had been digging for gold for six months at Kingover, about forty miles from Bendigo, without discovering as much of the precious metal as would pay their living expenses, when one August day, to tell the story in Napier's own words: "We had dug down about fourteen feet to the pipe-clay stratum and were shuffling around in the bottom of the shaft more dead than alive from the heat. Old Ambrose lit his pipe and leaned against the side of the hole to rest. Just then I struck something with my pick. I turned it up so the light could strike it, and, by Jove, it was a chunk of gold as big as a Hubbard's shank!" The nugget sold for $35,000.

Among the thousands who flocked to the Victorian gold fields in the early fifties were two Cornish miners, John Deason and Richard Oates, who staked a claim near the village of Mollaque. They set to work with vigor, confident that in a few months they would be able to retire to their native Cornwall rich men, but their expectations were doomed to cruel disappointment. Not only months, but many years, passed and found them still as far removed from fortune as at the beginning, and by 1860, fifteen years after they began their search for gold, they were reduced to the last straits. Starvation stared them in the face. In despair the miner seized his pick and wandered away to the outskirts of the gold field, and as he wandered, downcast and heavy hearted, he noticed a gleam of yellow in a rut made by a peddler's cart. Lifting his pick, with a few frantic blows he brought to light an enormous nugget, which, with all his strength, he could barely raise an inch from the ground. The nugget, which was soon known the world over as the "Welcome Stranger," actually weighed two hundredweight and was sold for nearly $50,000.

And these were but a few of the many similar blocks of gold discovered in Australia under equally dramatic conditions. While a native shepherd named Kerr was tending his sheep one day his attention was attracted by a yellow rock projecting a few inches above the soil. In his excitement at the discovery, he ran to fetch his master. The rock was unearthed and proved to be a nugget of two hundredweight, from which 100 pounds of pure gold were extracted. A few years later another monster nugget made its appearance at Ballarat. A party of miners had worked a claim to a depth of sixty yards when one of them struck with his pickaxe a hard, irregularly shaped mass, which on being unearthed proved to be a block of almost pure gold twenty inches long, a foot wide and seven inches deep. Its weight was almost one hundredweight and a quarter and its value $46,825.

It was the periodical discovery at Ballarat of these monster nuggets which first fired the blood of the entire world in the faraway fifties. But even Ballarat has no other romance to rival that of the discovery of two huge nuggets within a few days in the same claim. The story runs that four miners had worked their claim down to about sixty feet when one of them thought to light a nugget weighing nearly one hundredweight and worth $27,500. In their joy at such a rich treasure trove the men abandoned the diggings and took their nugget with them to England. They had scarcely left Ballarat when their successors in the claim, with almost the first stroke of a pick, turned over another nugget heavier than the first and valued at more than $35,000.

Of all the romantic stories told of gold discoveries in California not one is more remarkable than that of which Oliver Martin was the hero. For months Martin and a companion named Flower had been prospecting for gold to no purpose. Worn out by hardships and half dead from starvation, they were on the point of abandoning the quest in despair when fate administered her last crushing blow. They were overtaken by a terrible storm, in which Flower was drowned. Martin, weak though he was, set to work to dig his fallen comrade's grave at the foot of a tree and had dug down barely two feet when his spade struck a hard, unyielding substance, which, to his amazement and delight, proved to be an enormous nugget, the largest ever found on the American continent. The "Oliver Martin Chunk," as it came to be known the whole world over, weighed 151 pounds 6 ounces and was the nucleus of a fortune of a million dollars which Martin accumulated in later years.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

Nothing More to Be Said. "My wife always lets me have the last word," remarked the meek looking man. "Indeed!" exclaimed his friend in tones which implied a doubt of the other's veracity. "She does, really. Whenever I say 'Yes, my dear, you are quite right,' she stops talking immediately."

FALLING BODIES.

Their Velocity Varies According to the Force of Gravity. A man falling from a three story building in New Orleans will not fall as fast as he would if he were in New York city. In fact, in hardly any two places will he fall with the same speed. This is because as we go toward the equator the force of gravity gets less and less, and consequently the acceleration of a falling body becomes less, and the force of impact is therefore less. While it does not make very much difference in the injury to a person falling from a height, it does make a difference in other things. Take a rifle and fire it exactly horizontally, and if the gun is sixteen feet above the ground, say, at New York the bullet fired from such a rifle will strike the ground in exactly one second after it leaves the rifle. If the bullet has a horizontal velocity of 1,000 feet per second it will strike the earth exactly 1,000 feet away. Let us take the same rifle to a place where the force of gravity is not the same as at New York, but a good deal smaller, say two-thirds smaller. We find that if the gun is placed sixteen feet above the ground, as before, and absolutely horizontal the bullet will not fall the sixteen feet in one second, but will take over one and a half seconds to fall, thus enabling the bullet to be in the air during that length of time. Therefore it will strike the ground about 1,600 feet away. Thus it is seen that the range of a rifle is increased as it is taken toward the equator.

Of course there is no place on the earth where the force of gravity is two-thirds smaller than at New York, but there are many places where the difference is considerable enough to affect slightly the range of rifles.—Harper's Weekly.

Man thinks and at once becomes the master of beings that do not think.—Buffon.
