THE TROUBLE

bills making an appropriation of $30,000 for the soldiers' home, reimbursing J. G. Sargent and H. F. Graham for money borrowed for the state, incorporating the Waterbury Savings bank, amending the charter of West Randolph, legalizing the appraisals of Elmore and Belvidere and amending the law relating to the sale of real estate for taxes.

Senator Bardeen's publicity bill, which had been reported adversely, was on his motion recommitted to the committee, as was also Senator Archibald's bill, providing triple damages in certain dogwage cases.

The governor has signed the following House bills:—
No. 69, an act to provide for the medical inspection of public and private schools.

H. 89, an act for the prevention of blindness.

H. 110, an act to amend No. 297 of the acts of 1906, entitled, an act to amend section 2 of No. 196 of the acts of 1894, as amended by section 1 of No. 101 of the acts of 1900 and sections 3 and 5 of No. 196 of the acts of 1894, entitled, an act to incorporate the village of West Derby.

Notes of the Legislature.

With the introduction of the substitute weights and measures bill, all opposition to such a measure has ceased, and thereby hangs a tale. It seems that the original bill was drawn by the commissioner of weights and measures of another state, who, being a stockholder in a scale company, quietly slipped into the bill a little provision tending to make it hard sledding in Vermont for the principal rival of his scale company. That company was the Dayton Spring Scale company, an Ohio concern, which promptly got busy and retained three of the best lawyers in the state to look out for its interests.

The apparently innocent provision in the bill, which was to be a crack at the Ohio scale, was the provision that computing scales should show the correct money value of the commodity weighed.

It is contended that it is impossible for any scale to be made to do this absolutely accurately. This explains the presence at the public hearing last week on the measure of one of the lawyers retained by the Ohio concern, who ripped the bill full of holes in an apparently disinterested manner. It also explains the presence in Montpelier of a prominent Bennington county man, who has been looking after the interests of some manufacturers of proprietary medicines who would have been bothered by the provision in the original bill requiring all commodities not otherwise specified to be sold by weight, measure or numerical count. In the substitute bill this matter is left to the discretion of the commissioner to be appointed under the bill. All objections having been removed, Chairman Habbitt of the committee which has had the bill under consideration, hopes that it can now be passed without further trouble.

Senator Powell has hunted up in the state treasurer's report an item that shows that the state has expended directly in the past two years some $10,000 for detective work, and estimates that indirectly this work has cost the state in the vicinity of $25,000 more. So he has introduced a joint resolution, which has been adopted by the Senate and House, to have a commission appointed to investigate the matter. Senator Powell explains that the way the estimated expense of $25,000 has been caused is by the trial of cases worked up by the detectives in the employ of the state, such as the prosecution of some liquor dealers on technical charges.

The long-expected move by Supt. Ferguson of the Anti-Saloon league to further emasculate the license law made its appearance yesterday afternoon in the House, in the shape of a county option bill introduced by Mr. Hunt of New Haven. The bill prohibits the sale of liquor in any county, unless a majority of the towns and cities so vote, which would be a virtual prohibition for Vermont. This has been the favorite method of the Anti-Saloon league in other states to circumvent a local option law and has proved very effective in the South and West.

The House had a laughable debate yesterday afternoon over the bill providing for those seasons on liquid and foxes, and the outpourings of oratory would have done credit to a measure of much greater importance. But it was a matter that came right home to a great many of the members, and was a matter they could understand, so they were not afraid to talk about it, which they did almost to their heart's content.

Some of the Senate members have been justifying their attitude on the trustee process bill by saying that the man who drew the Cushman bill also wrote the platform of the Bennington county Republican convention, so that when he told them that in supporting the bill they were carrying out all the platform pledges he ought to know what he was talking about. It seems that the man, besides writing platforms and drafting bills, also runs a collection agency, and it is not considered by some that the enactment of the Cushman trustee process bill would tend to hurt the business of the collection agencies any.

The House yesterday afternoon passed in concurrence the bill to amend Barre's city charter, in relation to levying assessments for watering or oiling its streets. This is the bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Gordon.

Gov. Mead has reappointed Charles W. Gates of Franklin as state highway commissioner for two years. The appointment is well received.

Major L. M. Simonton Coming.

Captain Thorne and his co-workers have arranged to have Major L. M. Simonton, the division officer, visit Barre, and the public will be glad to know that on Saturday evening, Sunday forenoon and afternoon, the major will be in charge. He is an officer of much experience, having been in the Salvation Army some 22 years and having had commands over almost the whole country. The public is assured a very enjoyable time. There will be an opening meeting at Depot square Saturday evening, at which the meeting will adjourn to the Army hall, where the man from Hartford will give a very interesting talk. You cannot well afford to miss being there and are therefore cordially invited to attend. Come expecting to have a good time and you will not be disappointed.
