A week for the fattening.

The Boston & Maine railroad is eating sheep's eyes at Vermont.

The New York taxi strike has reached the Stone Age—the stone-throwing age.

Last night's eclipse would have been more appropriate a week ago Tuesday night.

Ex-Governor Prouty would make a good advance agent of Vermont prosperity.

Fortunate, isn't it, that the food prices are falling just before Thanksgiving? Praise be.

We are surprised that Boston calls it an "anti-spitting" campaign. One would have expected to hear about the anti-expectation campaign.

The Democrats in the Vermont legislature entertained one Republican at their banquet last night, evidently thinking that Speaker Howe was enough to leaven the loaf.

THE BENEFIT OF A STATE BOARD OF TRADE.

There can be little doubt on the part of anyone that there is need for just such an organization as was projected at a meeting in Montpelier last night. The state of Vermont suffers in competition with its sister states, because of the lack of proper publicity methods. As ex-Governor Prouty remarked last night, people outside the state and not very far outside, either, know nothing about the advantages of Vermont for both business and pleasure, looking upon the region as a series of mountains and valleys, with side-hill ploughing as steep as the side of a house and with valleys so speckled with rocks that cultivation is difficult. They need to be told that those rocks, many of them, are full of potential value, that many of the mountains are mines of wealth, that along with the narrow valleys are broad stretches of the best farming land in the country, that as a summer resort Vermont stands on an even footing with New Hampshire, that there are splendid natural advantages in undeveloped water power and numerous other reasons why they should cast their lot in the Green Mountain state.

To correct the wrong impressions which have gone forth about the conditions in Vermont will be, then, the work of the state board of trade as soon as the permanent organization shall have been formed. The projectors of the movement have the ruins of another organization, the Vermont Improvement society, which was formed only four years ago and which has failed to come up to expectations,—they have the ruins of that organization to guide them into correct channels of activity. Various reasons have been advanced to account for the failure of the Vermont Improvement society, but probably the most powerful reason was that the movement lacked an abiding enthusiasm as a sustaining power, without which no public-spirited enterprise of this sort can hope to be successful. Therefore, it behooves the entire state to get back of the new project and lend it ample encouragement.

FOOTBALL AS TEACHER OF GENTLEMENLY TACTICS.

The game of football will bring out, it is said, the qualities of a gentleman and also the qualities of the mucker more than any other of the great sports of the time because the provocations for the display of muckerism are greater than in any other game. Down in the heats of men during a rush and the defense there are chances a-plenty for the paying of old scores and the settling of supposed grievances; and the officials, no matter how watchful they may be, cannot see all that is going on. The very fierce nature of the game itself leads to the encouragement of display of temper, with players knocked this way and that in the course of the plays and with the border line between clean football and unnecessary roughness almost obliterated in the heat of the encounter. The player with the mucker instincts finds a chance to display his temper and his tendencies, but not for long in the well-regulated games, for no college team of self-respecting men will permit any of their players to bring disrespect on the college by resort to ungentlemanly tactics, and no coach and captain will allow the mucker to continue on the team, while the officials, when infractions of the rules are brought to their notice, will at once rule the dirty players from the field. Thus, while the conditions of the game may be conducive to the display of mucker instincts, all the other tendencies are in the opposite direction; and the game, therefore, furnishes a schooling for those who may be tempted to give free rein to their more brutal nature. Thus it is that we rarely hear of fighting and brawling on the football fields where the games are properly regulated, so that such incidents as developed in a recent game at Wheeling, W. Va., in which a player was killed, stand out in great contrast and consequently raise a great hue and cry about the game. But the very infrequency of such displays goes to show that the game is developing gentlemen, as well as athletes.

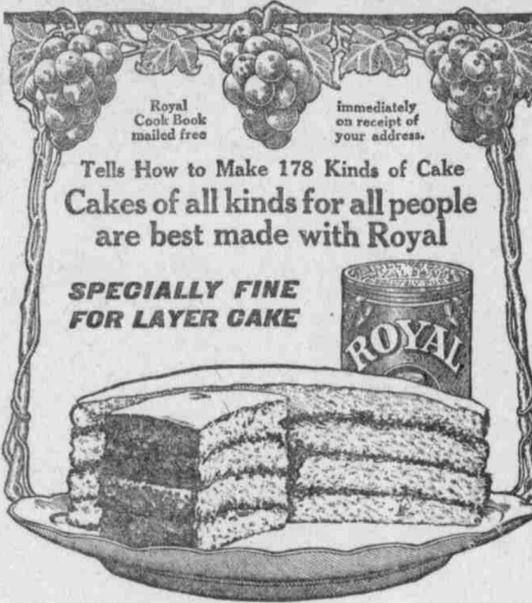

Current Comment

Sky Battles.

It has been alleged that an expert aeroplane operator, from a great height, can drop a bomb upon a target the size and shape of a battleship with a considerable degree of accuracy. One of the recognized authorities on high explosives is Elton Maximo and he takes a very different view of the situation. To do a vital or even great amount of damage it would be necessary to land a bomb in a confined space, otherwise it would waste its energy upward in the air. On the surface of a street, the impact would not be particularly formidable. Should it find its way into the smoke-stack, its expanding force, seeking escape, would be very destructive, but such a vital spot would be found only by accident. The sharp shooters of the clouds would hardly claim skill enough to hit such a small mark intentionally once in a thousand times.

He is, therefore, not much concerned over the prospect which seems so certain in some that ships of the sea will be fought and overcome by ships of the air, but he does anticipate that aerial warfare will be an actual and sensational feature of the next international struggle. Should his forecast prove correct it might bring back again the days of individual prowess. The expert of the patent office, having most to do with passing on new types of aerial machines, says that the success of aerial flight depends ten per cent, on the machine, fifteen per cent, on the motor and seventy-five per cent on the man. The aerial fleet must rely upon numbers rather than bulk and each individual unit would be required to have not a seventy-five but a hundred per cent man at the helm and behind the guns.—Boston Transcript.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

WOULD PATCH UP PEACE

The exact amount of the expense was not stated to the committee, as some of the papers necessary had not been brought by the representatives of the road; but it is understood to be around $6,000. A further hearing is to be given in the matter this afternoon, when the road will produce witnesses who will testify to the acts of violence of the strikers that made this police protection necessary. The road claims that it was not able to obtain this protection from the state and was obliged to provide it itself.

Another attempt is to be made to wipe out the hotel license at South Vernon, which is so much desired by the authorities of the Moody school in Northfield, Massachusetts. A bill to do this, which put a two-mile dry belt around the state, has been introduced in the House. Mr. Howard of Whiting came forward yesterday with a bill to accomplish the same end and a bill introduced in the Senate will also bring it about if it passes. The proprietor of the South Vernon hotel, that is so much objected to, is Mr. Alderman, who represents the town of Vernon.

The Senate is of the opinion that it scored a point yesterday in the trustee process law fight between the two houses by refusing to concur in the House proposal of amendment to the Cushman bill and then referring the House bill a third reading. This leaves the Cushman bill the only one that can be considered by a conference committee. The vote on the proposal of amendment shows that there has been no change in the line-up of the Senate in the matter, the 20 supporters of the Cushman bill standing firm.

The influx of bills has made committee meetings so thick that they are being held in all sorts of corners, as there are not nearly enough rooms to accommodate them all. Even the offices of the state officers are invaded, and every place that can afford seats and a little privacy is being utilized. The bills are, in some cases where committees have a lot of work, getting scant hearing, and those who desire a hearing have to be around or the report is made without waiting for them. The House is just getting into the swing of the work and is turning it off in a large volume. It is thought by some that the Thanksgiving recess will interrupt this and that it will be some days when the legislature returns before it strikes the gait again.

Residents of the Ottaquechee river valley who are opposed to giving a franchise to the paper trust to live long down that river went home in high spirits yesterday morning over the poor showing, as they looked at it, that the company made at the hearing the previous evening. They are certainly much exercised over the matter and that their fighting blood is up is shown by their retaining such lawyers as John H. Senter and W. A. Lord to fight the bill. On the other hand, the company must regard the franchise as valuable, for they are sparing no efforts to get it, having as their attorneys W. B. C. Stickney of Bethel, Colchester C. H. Darling of Burlington and Wade Keyes of Boston. Their representative, Mr. Chedel of White River Junction, has been here since the opening of the session, quietly working up sentiment in favor of the bill. The opposition is so strenuous that the bill will probably stand no show of passage unless some of its provisions are greatly modified.

Senator Lyford of Washington, who has been supporting the Cushman bill in the Senate, was not present at the roll-call on the question of ordering the House trustee bill to a third reading. Mr. Lyford's lot has not been exactly a happy one since he lined up in opposition to the other Washington county senators on this question, and a great deal of pressure has been brought to bear on him to induce him to change his views. He has been plainly told that he never could have been nominated if there had been any question of his attitude toward this party pledge, and it is not surprising that he does not relish the roll-calls that are insisted upon every time the question comes up in the Senate.

Senator Taplin of Orleans, who in his younger days used to teach a singing school, amused the Senate occasionally, when they are not in session by breaking out into song. He also hums a little in the corridors, and it is a safe bet when sounds of music are heard around the State House that Senator Taplin is not far away.

Most all of the members are preparing to leave town Friday, and it is thought likely that the morning session of the House on Saturday will be called to order at 8 o'clock, with the speaker and clerk and Mr. Corry of Montpelier in attendance.

Upon Mr. Corry will devolve the making of the motion to adjourn, the speaker will put it and Mr. Corry will vote aye, the clerk will record it, and this will constitute the Saturday session that will cost the state some $1,500.

The House yesterday afternoon passed the bill making Columbus day a legal holiday, the vote standing 121 to 95.

A total of 31 bills were introduced in the House yesterday afternoon, chief among which was one by Mr. Barbit of Rockingham, providing for an innkeepers' license to sell liquor. It provides that in towns voting against license the selectmen shall grant an eighth-class license on petition of ten per cent of the legal voters; licensees can be served guests, but not over a bar; hotel must have at least 20 sleeping rooms; fee not less than $10 and not more than $100.

The bill creating a state board of agriculture passed the House yesterday afternoon.

Representative Case of Barre introduced four bills in the legislature yesterday afternoon, one amending the charter of the Quarry Savings Bank and Trust company, one amending the charter of the Orange County Electric railroad, one (by request) relating to commitment to the Vermont industrial school and one amending the charter of the Granite Manufacturers' association.

The school supervision bill, which was passed by the Senate in concurrence on Tuesday with a proposal of amendment, proposed to take away from the union superintendent the power to nominate all teachers and allow him simply to advise with the board of directors in the selection of teachers.

Priest's Advice Led to Their Recovery

Thin, weak, or frail people—those who "take cold easily" and sufferers of Bronchitis and Asthma, should be prepared with Eckman's Alternative in the House. Remarkable cures of even Tubercular (Consumptive) persons are often accomplished by the use of Eckman's Alternative. "On June 2, 1907, I was operated upon for Tubercular Peritonitis at St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, N. Y. After the operation my physicians gave me up. I was then cured by a priest named Eckman's Alternative, which I took. My weight at the time was 72 lbs. I began to improve and steadily gained in health and strength. I now weigh 125 lbs. and am completely cured." (Signed) ALDVAIT Anna Mae McEneaney, 30 Savannah St., Rochester, N. Y.
