

Danderine

GROWS HAIR and we can PROVE IT!

Beautiful Hair at Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether mis-understood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grows, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions).

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities. One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

Household Economy

How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. If you take one pint of granulated sugar, add 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir about 2 minutes, you have as good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents worth) in a pint bottle, and fill it up with the sugar syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready-made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly.

And you will find it the best cough syrup you ever used—even in whooping cough. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the most severe cough in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good taste and is pleasant. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

It is a splendid remedy, too, for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, etc. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in gualitol and all the healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and sugar syrup is now used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has often been imitated, but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A Momentous Decision. Former United States Senator Frank J. Cannon of Utah tells in the Christmas Everybody's how he went to persuade Elbert F. Sanford to accept the position of chief justice of Utah, and how Justice Sanford had the wisdom to consult his wife. He writes:—

"Our talk warmed into a very intimate discussion of the lives of the Mormon people, but I supposed that which I moved only by a curiosity to which I was accustomed. I took advantage of her curiosity to lead up to an explanation of how the proscription of polygamy was driving young Mormons into the practice, instead of frightening them from it. And so I arrived at another recollection of the miserable condition which I had come to ask her husband help us relieve; and I made my appeal again, to her both with something of despair, because of my failure with him, and perhaps with greater effect because of my despair. She listened thoughtfully, her hands clasped.

"I did not seem that I had reached her—until she turned to him, and said unexpectedly: 'It seems to me that this is an opportunity—a large opportunity than any I see here—to do a great deal of good.'"

"He did not appear as surprised as I was. He made some joking reference to his income and asked her if she would be willing to live on a salary of—how much was the salary of the chief justice of Utah?"

"I thought it was about $3,000 a year. 'Two hundred and fifty dollars a month,' he said. 'How many bonnets will that buy?'"

"No," she retorted, 'you can't put all the blame on my millinery bill. If that's been the cause of your hesitation, I'll agree to dress as becomes the wife of a poor but upright judge.'"

"In such a happy spirit of good-natured rivalry, my petition was provisionally entertained till I could see the president; and it is one of the curiosities of experience, as I look back upon it now, that a decision so momentous in the history of Utah owed its induction to the wisdom of a woman and was confirmed with a domestic pleasurable."

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," Al W. Martin's, Coming Next Tuesday.

If press opinions count for anything, Mr. Al W. Martin's production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which will be seen at the opera house next Tuesday, December 5, has caught the public fancy. The theatres where the offering has been made are said to have been crowded at every performance, and no reasonable doubt remains that business of the season will reach a figure that will astonish the dramatic world. For a play holding the stage over fifty years, within which period not a single season has elapsed during which it was entirely absent from the theatre, Uncle Tom's Cabin still exhibits wonderful vitality. Scorned, ridiculed and rejected of the elect in the more important theatres a few years ago, it is now ennobled in the very homes of art, and thousands are weeping and laughing over its various incidents nightly. I doubt whether there has ever been so lavish and adequate a production of this play as that which Mr. Martin will bring to our city. The scenes which are displayed could not easily be improved. Each picture the reality as closely as paint and canvas will permit, and the stage perspective is so deep that effect is exceptionally pleasing. The company is also worthy of its environment. So many actors of pleasing reputation have never before been engaged together in this play. It is a decided novelty and at all points Mr. Martin has made plain what brains, money and energy can accomplish.

Keep Young With Your Children.

Do you—the you-to-day means mothers and fathers—ever romp with your children?

I don't mean just play with them in dignified fashion, or walk or talk with them, but really romp—throw aside your dignity and become one of them in a glorious car-splashing riot of nonsense!

If you don't, I think you are missing one of your greatest opportunities to bind your children to you.

"I don't think I'll ever forget one Christmas afternoon," I heard a man say the other day when a group of us were discussing the Christmases of our childhood. "It stands out from all the rest because of a great time we children had with father. Just after breakfast father told us all to be in the living room at 3 o'clock, because there was going to be an entertainment there. He wouldn't tell us any more than that, and you can imagine how excited we got over it. Well, at 3 o'clock, we were all there, you can just bet, and father came in and started the most glorious romp we ever had. He got right down on his hands and knees and played with us and made faces and said funny things until we laughed so we were almost sick."

"The pater has been dead—twenty Christmases now, but ever since there was passed but I think of that afternoon." Most of us have some such memory, I think.

Look back over your childhood and see if the high light doesn't fall on some such occasion, some gala day when father or mother, or both, came back down the years to be just children with you.

You like to dwell on that day, don't you?

Then why not make such memories as numerous as possible for the youngsters about you that are going to reach that point so sadly soon, when they, too, shall begin to look back on their childhood?

Orison Sweet Marden, the new thought writer, advocates fun as one of the important elements in child training.

"Fun is the cheapest and best medicine in the world for your children as well as for yourself," he says. "It will not only save your doctor's bills, but it will also help to make your children happier, and will improve their chances in life. The first duty we owe a child is to teach it to fling out its inborn gladness and joy with the same freedom and abandon as the bobolink does when it makes the meadow joyous with its song."

"There is an irrepressible longing for amusement, for rolling fun, in young people, and if those longings were more fully met in the home, it would not be so difficult to keep the boy and girl under the parental roof. I always think there is something wrong when the father or the children are so uneasy to get out of the house at night and to go off 'somewhere' where they will have a good time. A happy, joyous home is a powerful magnet to child and man."

"Sounds pretty reasonable, doesn't it?" —Exchange. Dorothy Dexter.

In Woman's Realm.

If the house plants become pale and sickly, a few drops of ammonia in water will revive them like magic.

The best fluid to use in washing muslin dresses of delicate color is rice water. This will prevent fading.

A strip of emery cloth, tacked to a small square board, will be found useful for quickly sharpening the carving knife.

A housewife who makes her own table linen and towels has hit on a trick to lessen the labor. She adjusts a small hemmer and a fine needle on her sewing machine, removes the thread from the upright and runs the napkin or whatever it is, previously cut by the drawn threads through the hemmer. This simple method of turning the hem and pricking the stitch holes make the hand work very easy. Running the cloth through the machine, too, takes out the stiffness.

Telephone Girl Knows It.

The telephone girl sits still in her chair and listens to voices from everywhere. She hears all gossip, she hears all the news, she knows who is happy and who has the blues. She knows of our troubles and she knows of our strife, she knows every man who is mean to his wife. She knows every time we are out with the boys, she hears the excuses each fellow employs. In fact there's a secret "beath each saucy curl of that quiet, demure-looking, telephone girl. If the telephone girl told all that she knows, it would turn our friends into bitterest foes. She could get all our churches mixed up in a fight and turn all our days into sorrowing night; in fact she could keep the whole town in a stew if she'd tip a tenth part of the things that she knew.

Sleighbells jingled merrily and the earth itself, the heavily laden trees covered with draperies of the purest white, was a vision of loveliness yesterday when the world waked from its night's repose. Man has harnessed the mighty powers of the world, has invented greater things than any would have dared prophesy, and yet, in the face of the changing seasons, with their corresponding beauties, what is man? Powerful as his mind may be, it dwindles into nothingness before the omnipotent power which rules all and holdeth the earth as in the hollow of His hand. Can anyone be so bound up in the material things of life as to forget the source from whence all these beautiful winter days before us will come?

A Sure Cure.

A haggard looking woman, speaking with a strong Irish brogue, walked into a West side drug store in New York the other day and asked for a bottle of Mr. Quack's Consumption Cure. While the clerk was wrapping the package, she conversed volubly of Mike, her husband, who was sick with consumption. She said one of her neighbors, Mrs. Casey, had told her that the bottle of medicine she held in her hands would surely restore Mike to health. So she had saved .50 cents from the scanty earnings she made over the wash-tub in order that her husband might have a chance. As she turned to go away, her eye was attracted by a sign upon the wall which was wrapped in big red letters: "Buy Red Cross Christmas Seal, and Help Cure Consumption. A Penny for a Seal."

From the few cents in the palm of her hand, the woman drew out a nickel and holding it to the clerk, said, "O'ill take five of them. Sure, with this bottle of medicine, and thim things stuck on Mike, he'll be well in a wike."

Temporary Heat Quickly
Did you ever stop to think of the many ways in which a perfect oil heater is of value? If you want to sleep with your window open in winter, you can get sufficient heat from an oil heater while you undress at night, and then turn it off. Apply a match in the morning, when you get out of bed, and you have heat while you dress. Those who have to eat an early breakfast before the stove is radiating heat can get immediate warmth from an oil heater, and then turn it off. The girl who practices on the piano in a cold room in the morning can have warmth from an oil heater while she plays, and then turn it off. The member of the family who has to walk the floor on a cold winter's night with a restless baby can get temporary heat with an oil heater, and then turn it off. The
