

THE BARRE DAILY TIMES

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1910.

Entered at the post office at Barre as second-class matter.

Published every week-day afternoon. Subscriptions: One year, $3.00; one month, 25 cents; single copy, 1 cent.

Frank E. Langley, Publisher.

Of course you cleared your sidewalk to-day!

Lorimer, as well as Ballinger, emerges from the whitewash pit.

State's Attorney Carver is certainly making a busy beginning of his term of office.

Burlington doesn't need any more advertising schemes; Mayor Burke is an ever-on-the-job agent of publicity.

The close competition between the construction of the Montpelier city hall and the Panama canal is still undecided, but the indications favor the former.

Lack of sand was the fundamental cause of New York's recent disaster. The lack of "sand" has likewise caused many other disasters.

President Dan R. Sortwell of the Montpelier & Wells River railroad also says he isn't getting $50,000 a year for "salary." Let the man who declared it come forward.

If that explosion had occurred in a little country place in New England, rather than in New York City, the specialists on determining the causes would have laid it to rank incompetency, but under the conditions it was only an oversight.

Congressman Butler Ames, who aspired to Senator Lodge's seat, has been busy lately trying to make sure of his own seat in the lower branch of the national assembly. Lodge has found that the best defense is setting a backfire on his opponent's preserve.

Hattie LeBlanc has gone home, the judge who presided at her trial has finished peddling his opinions of the trial through the columns of the newspapers, and Mrs. Glover denies she is going to marry a Washington doctor. If this were the Thanksgiving season, we should raise our voice in one exultant shout of thankfulness.

If the headquarters of the Granite Cutters' International association is to be moved from Quincy, Mass., where it has been established so long, it would be natural to have the headquarters located in Barre, since the Barre branch is the largest in the association and, therefore, the most powerful, not to mention being one of the oldest.

John D. Rockefeller's "single and final gift" of ten millions to Chicago university does not mean that he has got to the toe of the stocking, but that Chicago university has. The Chicago institution has been so long a pampered hot-house educational flower that it will be interesting to watch the course of events from this time forth, but it ought to have "salted away" enough of Rockefeller's total contribution of $35,000,000 to be ready for several rainy days.

Each one of 1,479 voters in North Adams, Mass., is to-day announcing that it was his vote which turned the city in favor of no-license; and it was quite a distinction, since results like that are rarely noted in such large elections. There were nearly three thousand votes cast yesterday, and there was but a single vote margin. The outcome will probably be that Bennington will become a popular objective point for a year.

Judge Hale of the United States circuit court, who sentenced William J. Kellier to eighteen years for aiding and abetting George W. Coleman in misapplying the funds of the National City Bank of Cambridge, Mass., has not lost sight of the enormity of that looting, although the public mind had long since turned to contemplation of fresh thrills furnished by criminals. The looting of the Cambridge bank will constitute one of the most interesting chapters of criminal history later on, while the characters in the drama are getting their just deserts.

THE BARRE HOSPITAL.

Three bequests during the year and increased co-operation on the part of the general public are indications enough that the Barre City hospital is proving itself worthy of the faith pinned to the

Current Comment

The Type Got Spilled.

The Barre Times tells us that "a milk rebuke is given the Central Vermont Railway company by the Vermont public service commission for the accident which happened near West Berlin Aug. 21." Most of the rebuke given by this commission are part milk and part water.—Brattleboro Reformer.

The Meat of the Nut.

The fact that the Central Vermont Railway company has given up its attitude of apparent indifference toward the proposed Boston & Maine extensions, and begun active opposition against the charter providing for this improvement, affects in no way the feelings of Brattleboro people in the matter. To a man the residents of this town are in favor of giving the Boston & Maine system the right to extend its tracks from Brattleboro to South Vernon. No cry of consternation on the part of the Central Vermont can distract attention from the main facts in this controversy. What that road is fighting for is to save and perpetuate a monopoly that for years has been a source of immense profit, much of which Brattleboro people have paid. While claiming to protest against being forced to give up valuable land the C. V. management is actually fighting against competition.

Proposed New Railroad.

Montpelier will take a lively interest in the railroad project designed to open the asbestos region, because it promises to develop an important Vermont industry and because it promises to form part of a new line from Newport to Rutland by way of this city. Such a road would be of great advantage to this city.—Montpelier Journal.

Both Winners.

They were to be married on the morrow. "But," said the young man, nervously, "suppose our marriage doesn't prove a success—then what?" "Oh, in that case," answered the near-bride, "we can divide the presents."—Chicago News.

to be hoped that the road will be built. Any railroad that can get a living is of advantage to the community. A road that will help to develop our undeveloped industries is one that should have the special aid and countenance of everybody.—Burlington News.

Sister's Problem.

She's got things for the babies, And she's bought a gift for me, She's got a toy for all the kids To grace the Christmas tree. She has presents for her uncles And her aunts, but doesn't know A single solitary thing To give unto her beau.

Life is ever full of problems, Problems grave that sore perplex; Old and young face situations That arise, it seems to vex. Sleepless nights and hours of tossing Every one of us must know. She is losing sleep this season On the gift to hand her beau. —Detroit Free Press.

The Battle of the Pipes.

'Twas midnight when I heard a shriek, The crash of blade on blade, As though two knights fought jowl by cheek, O'er some poor frightened-maid.

I heard the war-axe bite on shield, The short sword striking crest, A guttural cry for one to yield, The moans of one hard pressed.

And then one mighty warrior fell, Came armor crashing low; The whole house shook for quite a spell— His gurgling breath went slow.

All covered close I lay in dread, Afraid to move or speak, There, in the presence of the dead, My flesh was cold and weak.

And all night long the victor lay Near by, but wounded sore, Death rattled in his throat till day, His blood dripped on the floor.

With daylight I grew strong and bold And dared to look about Instead of warrior stark and cold The furnace fire was out!

Came from the pipes those mighty blows, Some water dripped upon my clothes— The fire alone had died! —Puck.

A Country Advantage.

Mrs. Crawford—How is it you get more rest since you live in the suburbs? Mrs. Crabshaw—I don't have to sit up all night for my husband. When he doesn't arrive by the last train, I know he won't be home till the next day.—Judge.
