The chemical apparatus was called out at 9:40 this forenoon in response to a still alarm for a chimney fire in the house on Elm street owned by Mrs. Helen Camp and occupied by the family of G. Parks. Although the house was filled with smoke, there was no blaze, and the trouble was remedied with little difficulty by altering a stovepipe.

If anyone had been in line of the rock which flew from a blast in the riverbed over the top of the Blanchard building and landed in front of the library on Washington street this forenoon—if anyone had been in the line of it, he would have been a dead one. The rock was almost big enough to fill a coalhod and was splintered when it struck the ground. Fortunately, no one was near.

It's a new program of vaudeville at the Pavilion to-day, one act being a Dutch comedy offering, in which a very novel pianoforte is given. This team is known as Fyne and Dale, and Mrs. Fyne is a nephew of the well-known Joe Webber, who is undoubtedly the greatest Dutch comedian the world has ever seen. All the material used in the act done by Fyne and Dale was written by Mr. Webber, who, after writing it, placed the act under his direction to play the big William Morris theatres, where they were a decided hit. Allie Johnson, the other act, is a colored comedian, doing comedy stunts on a slack wire. The act is said to be one of the best comedy novelty offerings in New England. The program of Biograph pictures, which came yesterday, was fine and will be used to-day also.

From the committee on street railways. An act to incorporate the Taconic Valley railroad. Provides for construction of a railway from Bennington through Clatsbury, Shaftsbury, Arlington, Sunderland, Manchester and Dorset.

By Mr. Ames of Brighton, in amendment of section 5095 of the P. S., relating to homicide. Penalty for murder in the first degree shall be death or imprisonment for life, as the jury may determine; in the second degree, for life or such term as the court may fix. If jury shall find respondent guilty of murder in the first degree, the punishment shall be for life unless the jury add to the verdict, "with capital punishment."

Senate Works 15 Minutes.

The Senate held a 15-minute session this morning, but it was sufficient to dispose of all the business on hand. The bills relating to the protection of the purity of registered stock and creating a state fair commission of 15 members were passed in concurrence.

A bill was introduced by Senator Seaver cutting down the rate of mileage for members of the general assembly from 10 to 5 cents a mile. An important bill was introduced from the commission on public health, providing for a more stringent inspection of milk and cream sold from house to house. It provides that all such dealers must be licensed by the local boards of health.

Battell Bill May Fail.

The Senate committee gave a hearing last evening on Col. Joseph Battell's bill closing to automobiles the so-called Texton road, leading from East Middlebury to Ripton. This is the bill Col. Battell got through the House by the threat of withholding a proposed gift to Middlebury college of a valuable timber tract, reached by the road, unless the state would exclude automobiles from the road. Neither the colonel's threat nor his arguments in favor of the bill seemed to have much influence on the committee and, although there is to be a further hearing, an unfavorable report is looked for. Indeed, it is probable that the bill would never have been passed by the House if it had not been thought that the Senate would kill it.

J. M. Boutwell appeared in opposition to the bill. When this road was once closed by the selectman to automobiles, Mr. Boutwell deliberately drove over it to make a test case. Mr. Boutwell told the committee last night that if the bill passed, he would be the first man to run an automobile over it to test the law.

The central normal school project was thrashed out at great length at a meeting of the Farmers' club last evening. These meetings are usually held in the cloak room, but the attendance last night was so large that the meeting was held in the hall of the House. Superintendent Stone spoke for and hour and a half in favor of the central normal school and in opposition to the present normal schools. He was followed by others whose remarks were not particularly anxious, but still the audience remained waiting patiently for the main act of the show. They were not disappointed, for when ex-Lieut. Gov. Stearns was allowed to speak, he got after the state superintendent in a way that apparently pleased a large proportion of those present. The meeting was evidently arranged to counteract the effect of a previous hearing, when the state superintendent was present and said not a word in favor of the central school bill. It is doubtful if any friends were made for the bill by last night's meeting and as the matter now stands, it is doubtful if the bill passes the House.

Practically all of yesterday afternoon's sessions in both branches was given up to referring bills to committees, although in the House about thirty bills were reported favorably and ordered to a third reading. Among these was the bill to appropriate $20,000 for a criminal ward in the state insane asylum, also the "administration measure" licensing dogs.

The House also killed six bills, one of them a Senate measure relating to investigation of divorce cases. The others were, altering the line between Mt. Tabor and Danby, relating to the apportionment of expense of alteration or removal of grade crossings, relating to the location of licensed places, relating to the marking of ballots, relating to the transmission of electric power out of the state.

The movement to secure another tuberculosis hospital for Vermont was given a push along yesterday afternoon when the Senate adopted in concurrence the resolution calling for the appointment by the governor of a commission to investigate the state's needs for an institution at which people in advanced stages of tuberculosis shall be taken.
