In Reids' trained bull dogs, the Pavilion has an attraction that is bound to prove a winner. The acts consist of eight highly trained bull dogs and bull terriers. In many respects this act differs from all other trained dog acts. It is in reality a small circus, in which dogs are the performers. They do all the tricks known to human performers, such as somersaults, while leaping over chairs, flip flaps, high dives, backward somersaults, etc. Even the clown is there with his funny tricks, who also helps lower the curtain at the end of the performance. The act is said to be one of the best of its kind in existence. The three Livlys, a very clever singing, dancing and talking act, is another feature that comes to the Pavilion today, which, with the above act and the new pictures that come to-day, will no doubt make one of the best programs ever seen at this popular little theatre.
