The Perry Automobile Co., has been advised that the New York fire department has just ordered 10 Ford model T cars for the use of its division chiefs. The motor car has come into very popular favor with the heads of police and fire departments throughout the country, and this official recognition of the automobile has laid particular stress upon the efficiency to be derived from light cars. It is estimated that there are close to 1,000 Ford model T's in use by various fire and police departments throughout the country. "Their flexibility and freedom from fire troubles, on account of their light weight, make them peculiarly adaptable for fire chiefs and police officers. Its popularity with that class of users is enormous," says Mr. Perry.
