The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending last Saturday was

5,700

King George gave his people a lesson in punctuality.

The playground in the North End was intended for the use of young children under competent supervision, and the trespassing by older people in the nighttime will not be allowed.

The ancient and honorable town of Theford will recall many sons and daughters to its 150th anniversary next August as the celebration will be an "old home week" on an enlarged scale. It will do the wanderers good to get back on the old soil once more.

The White River Junction Landmark is authority for the statement that "many Barre families" are coming into its territory to live. If the families are able to infuse a little "ginger" into the section, they will be pardoned for leaving a real, live region for the time being.

We read that four Americans not of official rank were privileged to witness the coronation in Westminster Abbey. Two of them were J. Pierpont Young-know-the-rest and Charlie P., brother of the president of U. S. They are two illustrious examples of Americans with a "pull."

Although he had just been visiting New England, President Taft last night expressed his conviction that reciprocity with Canada will pass the Senate. New England's reported opposition doesn't count much, then, against the support which the remainder of the country is giving to the proposal.

In one thing at least, there is reciprocity between the United States and Great Britain; and that is in the kindest wishes, as brought out by the cablegrams of President Taft and King George. No two nations stand more closely together than do these two great English-speaking powers.

Mountain lovers will find delight in the most recent number of The Vermonter, which is largely devoted to the Green Mountain club of Vermont. An article on the purposes and projects of the club is beautifully illustrated with views of Camel's Hump, Mount Mansfield and the peaks in the southern part of the Green Mountain range. The number is well worth one's while.

Burlington has added herself to the cities favoring a safe and sane "Fourth." Little by little the pop is being taken out of Independence day.—Burlington Clipper.

Having secured a safe and sane Fourth, Burlington ought to turn its attention to safe and sane fifths, sixths, sevenths, eighths, nines—and all the other days of the month. There's too much popping on those extra days in Burlington.

The United States census bureau's analysis of Vermont's population, as published in another column to-day, shows that Chittenden is the most densely populated county in the state; but the average for the entire state is only thirty-nine people to the square mile. Thus there is plenty of room in Vermont. All those who are tired of having their neighbor's elbows jabbed in their ribs should come to Vermont and enjoy life.

The Security of Your Bank Account has been the subject of the serious consideration of the Federal Government for years, and to-day the "National Bank Act", with its amendments, represents the ideals of governmental authority and supervision over banking institutions for the good of the people.

the country for the betterment of the highways, according to the bill which was introduced by him in the Senate yesterday, Senator Simmons of North Carolina is considerably behind Vermont, which has been levying an automobile license for highway improvement for several years, now putting as much as $40,000 or $50,000 into the roads of the state each year. If the other states of the Union should adopt the same plan they might easily raise one million dollars each year to make better roads. However, it looks more like a work for the individual states than collective action through the United States Congress.

SENATOR BAILEY'S EGO.

One who has been reading accounts of Senator Bailey's penchant for introducing the "ego" might readily appreciate the characteristic by reading a debate in the Senate, as printed by the Congressional Record, in which the Texan was given to interrupting Senator Dillingham. A few lines of the report will serve to illustrate:

(Senator Dillingham.)
"In 1907 we adopted a law forbidding national banks and other corporations deriving their powers from the national government to make campaign contributions—
"Mr. Bailey, I supported it."
"Mr. Dillingham, Yes; of course."

"Mr. Bailey, It was reported on my motion."
"Mr. Dillingham, Prohibiting corporations, of whatever nature, from making contributions to what may be briefly termed national elections."
"Mr. Bailey. That was reported on my motion."
With that we leave Senator Bailey with his claims, appreciating fully the accuracy of recent portrayals.

RANDOLPH.

Mrs. L. J. Labounty underwent a serious operation at the sanatorium Tuesday for the removal of a tumor.
W. L. Cook is again in town after an absence of several months, and is now at work for W. E. Lamson.
Miss Mary Lamson has finished a year of special study at the New England conservatory of music, and is now at home.
Randolph village is one of three places selected by the post office department for the establishment of a postal savings bank, and such an institution will be opened here about the first of July.

The Only Thing.

Guest (after a particularly bad lunch)—
There is one thing on your table which is unsurpassed in the finest hotel in London.
Seaside Hotel Proprietor—Very kind of you to say so, sir. May I ask what you refer to?
Guest—The salt!—London Opinion.
