Benjamin-Shipman Wedding Last Evening at Bride's Home.

Miss Charlotte Keith Shipman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Shipman, was married at 8 o'clock last evening to Charles Wilbur Benjamin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Benjamin. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride, Rev. V. F. Hendee officiating and using the ring service. The bride's gown was of white messaline and she wore the orange blossoms which her mother wore at her marriage. She was attended by her sister, Miss Florence Shipman, and the groom by his brother, Clinton E. Benjamin. Miss Ruth Dillingham was flower girl and Keith Bullard of Norwich, Mass., was ring bearer, while Misses Louise and Sylvia Howland acted as guides. Before and after the service, Miss Katherine Gutcheil rendered musical selections. An informal reception followed the ceremony, refreshments being served by Miss Eva Fuller, Mrs. John Bone of Wells River, Mrs. C. D. Birtell and Mrs. Edward Slayton. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin left at once for a few days' trip and upon their return will live at the Shipman home. The national prison convention, just closed at Omaha, was unanimous in stating that nowhere else in America today is there a man who is doing the work with prisoners which Sheriff Tracy is doing right here in Montpelier. J. N. Burs, superintendent of the state industrial school at Vergennes, and a delegate from Vermont, with Sheriff Tracy, to the convention, looked into the matter thoroughly and got this answer: "We know of no one anywhere who is doing work like that. While there are some states which are partially organized in an effort of this kind, I make bold to say that Vermont can well afford to be proud of a man who is, without question, a leader in America today in a unique, and up to the present time, most successful attempt to solve what is considered the most troublesome question in penal reform, namely, the handling of a county jail."

AMUSEMENT NOTES

"Naughty Marietta" Coming Friday Night, Well Recommended.

"The Lowell, Mass., Courier-Citizen of October 16 has the following to say about "Naughty Marietta," which comes to the Barre opera house next Friday evening:

"Victor Herbert's delightful little comic opera, 'Naughty Marietta,' was nightly well presented at the Lowell opera house last Saturday afternoon and evening by a company which, if not the equal of its metropolitan production in all respects, was still a company which could give this dainty little opera a production quite worthy of it. So many of the companies sent on the road with some big metropolitan success, prove such a disappointment to those having seen the initial production or have gone to see it because of its having been one of the 'hits,' that the production given this little opera proved a most delightful surprise.

"One of the most noticeable things in the personnel of this company was that everyone knew how to sing, and the majority knew how to act, a truly remarkable condition of affairs in a comic opera. Miss Florence Webber in the title role was extremely well suited to the 'Marietta,' which the book by Rida Johnson Young called for. She was very dainty and charming with being quite-like, had a very delightful and quite appropriate French accent, and both acted and sang her part extremely well. Juan Cardo in the role of Capt. Dick, although a little inclined at times to let his self-restraint and dignity slip over into pomposity of the Italian light opera style, could sing well and acted his part very creditably. Blanche E. Lattel in the role of Lizette and Sid Barham in that of Silas did some good acting and gave some good comedy, and their singing, while nothing to brag of, was sufficient." Edmund Cook as "Hime Grandet" was easily the best of the male roles, singing and acting his role well. Cara Crendell as Adah was inclined to be mediocre, although she tried hard to fill a role to which she was entirely unsuited.

"Altogether, 'Naughty Marietta' was a charming little comic opera well presented, and one which those who saw it would be glad to see again."

IN BOSTON MARKETS

Butter Prices Advancing, But Eggs Remain the Same.

Boston, Oct. 25.—The local butter market is once more headed upward, as receipts show a considerable shrinkage, while strong advices from outside markets, with the New York market one-half to one cent higher than it left off last week, make buyers more ready to take hold. Late last week, 32 cents was about as much as dealers could expect to obtain for fancy northern creamery, but there are now few who will sell at that place, and most of them are asking 32 1/2 cents. The market is about one-half cent higher. The demand for cheese is still rather slow, but the steadiness of the primary markets makes dealers a little less eager to sell and a somewhat firmer feeling is evident. Prices of fresh eggs are no higher than they were last week, but the supply is short and any immediate change is likely to be upward.

BIG APPLE CROP THIS YEAR

Yield of 30,000,000 Barrels in the United States Estimated.

Apple orcharding is in better shape this fall than for some time past, the New England Homestead of October 28 will say, with more merchantable fruit in sight for storage and winter markets and reasonably good prices prevailing. In this final report of the apple crop of the United States, it is possible to show a total considerably larger than the average of recent years. Summarizing the returns from investigations at first hand, made by the New England Homestead, the 1911 crop of apples is placed at a total of 30,000,000 barrels, or a fifth larger than that of 1910 or 1909. This total is by no means a bumper crop; but that is seldom realized. The yields in some of the larger producing states this year compared with 1910 are as follows: New York, 5,200,000, against 3,000,000; Pennsylvania, 3,200,000, against 2,000,000; Ohio, 2,400,000, against 1,250,000; Michigan, 2,000,000, against 1,200,000; Maine, 1,500,000, against 900,000. Taking New England as a whole, the production will aggregate 3,150,000, against 2,850,000 in 1910. In the middle states, the yield is 14,000,000, against 8,750,000 a year ago; while in the central West, the yield is 2,950,000, compared with 1,775,000 in 1910.

A general improvement over a year ago is shown throughout the central West, in the middle and Northwest sections, and in New England. Colorado has a good crop, but further west and northwest there is no material improvement over last year; while in the middle South, where the earlier maturing prevented the gains through autumn rains, the yield is only fair, but includes many choice apples for local markets, particularly in such important states as the Virginia.

DEFECTS OF AVERAGE ORCHARD

Are Too Large, and Too Little Attention Is Paid to Varieties.

The summer of 1911 brought out very plainly the serious defect of the average farm orchard; no fruit one year and a surplus the next. In 1910 there was a very general failure of apples, and the farmer went without any, rather than pay the high store prices. In 1911 every orchard bore so heavily that some farmers had huge crops which they could not give away at 10 cents a bushel. As a result, more than one lot of hogs had a season of royal feasts, says the Country Gentleman.

Most farm orchards are too large, and not enough attention is paid to the varieties.

eties planted. The farmer has neither the time nor, often, the necessary knowledge, nor the inclination to take care of his trees. About an acre will be planted to crabapples, to summer and fall varieties, and to a scattering few winter sorts. A fence is placed about the orchard and the trees are then left to care for themselves. No cultivation is given them, and the ground is allowed to form a sod of June grass and reedtop. A pruning knife is never used, and a spray pump is not thought of.

This condition of affairs may easily be avoided. Plant a few trees on some of your very best land, and treat them as you would your best friend. Coat them into a good vigorous growth; do not make them fight with the weeds and grasses for a living; prune meticulously, and spray more than once. A few trees are more easily protected against frost than a large orchard. Should the frost prove fatal, you cannot get any less fruit than you would from four times the number of trees. When you do get fruit you will not have much more than you will require for home use, but it will be absolutely of the best quality. It will not be a worm-eaten windfall. If you are particular to plant some winter varieties, proper care will yield several barrels of choice fruit for the cold weather. When apples have to be bought, not so many will be eaten, yet they are good food. Have fewer trees, and take good care of them, if you wish your farm orchard not to be an object of reproach.

"Beating" the Batter.
"The Right and Wrong of Baseball," in the October American Magazine, Hugh S. Fullerton gives an interesting account of what is considered sportsmanship and what cheating in the national game. He writes:

"The best batters are those who 'crowd the plate,' that is, who stand as near the plate as the rules or the umpire will permit and lean over the corner of the rubber to make it difficult for the pitcher to pitch across that corner without taking a chance of hitting the batter.

"The players recognize the fact that the lines of the batter's position are obliterated within a few minutes after a game starts and that the umpires practically are helpless to enforce the rules or to tell, while watching the course of a pitched ball, whether or not the batter steps over the line. So it has become part of the unwritten law of the game that the pitcher may 'bean' (that is, pitch at the 'bean' or head) any batter who 'crowds' in order to drive him back from the plate. It is ethical under the players' code to hit and to injure any player who persists in encroaching upon the forbidden ground, and the batters themselves recognize this danger and accept it as part of the game."
