Perhaps Kent came back to claim that $50 reward.

Sister Arizona is rather peevish about the judiciary recall.

We have the time—June 18; the place—Chicago; and now was the man.

R-o-o-s-e-v-e-l-t was the handwriting on the Republican national committee's wall, so they say. Who is big enough to wash it out?

It's bearding the lion in his den for the Boston & Maine to establish a shipping station in St. Albans, the home of the Central Vermont. But then, there's no telling what audacious things this Mr. Mellen is willing to do.

Not at all surprising that vegetation should mistake the season of the year and come peeping forth. A year ago the mercury was running down twenty degrees below zero, while to-day it was soaring near the summer heat mark. Nevertheless, winter will be welcome.

Reports from the state grange meeting in Montpelier show that the organization has been making progress in Vermont during the past year, having added many subordinate granges. The advancement of the grange reveals as much as anything else the virility of the old state, for a decadent state is not engaged in progressive thought along agricultural lines, or in any other lines. Therefore, the progress of the grange is pleasing to all.

All the display of the durbar at India was perhaps designed to properly impress upon the Indians the splendid supremacy of their rulers; but to most other people it amounts to a gaudy show gathered about a simple ceremony. In fact, all regal ostentation savors of the same characteristic when viewed by the ordinary person possessed of the freedom of independent and controlling citizenship. There are indications, too, that the people of India are seeing through the thin disguise.

It ought not to have been necessary for Chairman Redmond of the public service commission to warn railroad men to live up to the rules of railroading, as he did at the hearing in Montpelier yesterday, but the case they were engaged on was such as to reveal the necessity for his words of warning. A railroad employe had admitted that he did not obey a simple regulation relating to flagging trains, having gone back a distance of only a dozen telegraph poles, when he should have gone back three times that number. Therefore, Chairman Redmond's words were none too strong.

The immediate publicity which Supt. Grout of the state insane asylum gave to the escape of an inmate of doubtful disposition yesterday would have prevented an extended flight by the man, even though it was not responsible for the voluntary return of the fugitive after a day of liberty. Within a short time towns and cities within a near and a wide radius of Waterbury were acquainted with the description of the man, and officers and people were on the lookout for the wanderer, so that it would have been difficult for Fred Kent to remain long at liberty. That publicity is very desirable in cases of this nature will be generally conceded; and the promptness of Supt. Grout in giving a start to that publicity in this case is appreciated by everyone. The experience with Elroy Kent was enough.

BARRE'S APPRECIATION.

"The latest indications are that the Central Vermont railroad places a high valuation on the Barre granite business, so high, in fact, that it is worth building a railroad to keep."—Barre Times.

And undoubtedly the granite men appreciate the Central's unapproached rapid through service to the West.—St. Albans Messenger.

Without doubt they do. The putting on of the special granite train to the Port Huron region was an evidence of progressive management on the part of the Central Vermont railroad, which was appreciated very much by the granite manufacturers of Barre and vicinity. Doubtless, too, they have shown their appreciation by liberal patronage of the special trains. Indeed, Barre men are prompt to meet, half-way, the public service corporations which show a spirit of energy and desire to merit added patronage. Some corporations, other than railroads, might put themselves in the position to merit the same appreciative response.

CURRENT COMMENT

"Pore Old Johndee."

The announcement of the retirement of John D. Rockefeller from the presidency of the Standard Oil company is received by our vehement pen and picture writers with strange mildness. The world-slingers fired a few explosive adjectives and the cartoonists refurbish the old hypocritical face with the artificial halo. But the old zest is absent. We are not telling Jawndee what is thought of him with the old energy.

Looking around for an explanation of this unexpected reserve, nothing plausible is discoverable except that the noble company of Rockefeller's roasters apparently feel that to smite now parades the nature of hitting a man when he is down. Something akin to mercy toward and pity for the "old man" is discernible. No one has gone so far as to hint that, after all, he may be no worse than the rest of us, and merely has done on a large scale what several million of his fellow citizens are doing on a small scale; nevertheless, there is a distinct change in the atmosphere of Rockefeller denunciation.

"Pore old John D.—I'm honestly sorry for him," said one of our park bench leisure citizens yesterday, as he looked up from the headlines.

The richest man in the world, and yet as his career draws near its close it somehow does not seem altogether a glorious and successful one. A business man pursues wealth because of the power it will bring him—perchance for the respect that riches are supposed to receive. And the richest man in the world does not seem conspicuously to have power. As to respect, he gets about as much of it as a man in a pillory. It would seem necessary to revise the opinion that the American is a lover of the possessor of money and not disposed to ask questions as to the getting thereof.—New York Globe.

JINGLES AND JESTS

A Handy Helper.

When you want to rhyme "ever" with "river,"

Why, dialect's right at your hand. With scarcely a quiver you write it as "e-ver."

(That's "fisher" talk, understand). If you want to chime "splashing" and "fashion"

It's easy as ever can be; For "splashing" and "fashion," and "crashing" and "passion,"

Will rhyme if you cut out the "g."

If you want to rhyme "pillow" with "miller,"

It's really dead easy to do; Convert it to "piller" and willow to "willer."

And there are your verses for you. You can always chime "yellow" with "teller,"

Or "enn" very nicely with "spin," Or "ought to" with "water" and "daughter," and "slaughter,"

For that's where the "patois" comes in!

So dialect's lovely for poets. It lets them use many near-rhymes. Like "narrer" for narrow, and "sparrer" for sparrow,

And such orthographical crimes. Yes, dialect's handy for rhymesters Wherever they wander or roam. If speech were correct many rhymes would be wrecked—

And I couldn't have written this "pome!" —Puck.

PEACE MEETING

SCENE OF DISORDER

When Attempt Was Made To Adopt Resolutions Urging Senate to Ratify the France and England Treaties.

New York, Dec. 13.—A riotous outbreak interrupted a large mass meeting held at Carnegie hall last night in support of the arbitration treaties which President Taft has proposed with England and France. Twenty-eight reserve policemen were hurried to the hall and eight persons were forcibly ejected.

The outbreak occurred after Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, had read resolutions urging the Senate to ratify the treaties, and Alfonso G. Koebbe, of the German-American Citizens' League of the State of New York, stepped to the front of the platform and moved that the majority resolution of the United States Senate committee on foreign relations be adopted as a substitute for the declarations contained in the Butler resolution.

"This declaration is not a promoter of peace, but a breeder of war," he exclaimed, and the words were scarcely out of his mouth when men jumped to either side of the stage and raised their hands in an apparent signal, whereupon pandemonium was let loose in the upper galleries.

Cat calls, yells, groans and hisses made it impossible for Chairman Joseph H. Choate to proceed with the meeting. Four hundred prominent men were seated on the platform and they were astounded at the outbreak. A large group of them held conferences for more than ten minutes while pandemonium still reigned. One man on the platform jumped up and shouted as loud as he could: "That packed gallery is composed of a lot of cowards."

At this the shouts in the gallery became louder and megaphones were brought into use. Women in evening dress in the boxes jumped to their feet in fright. In the midst of the noise, Chairman Choate announced that the Butler resolutions had been unanimously adopted. The persons in the main part of the auditorium took this as a signal for a counter demonstration, jumped to their feet, shouted their approval and waved their handkerchiefs and hats.

Andrew Carnegie was down on the program as the next speaker, but he sat in apparent amazement at the demonstration and, in his place, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise asked for a hearing. He was met with such cries as "shut up" and "throw him out," from the galleries. Above it all he shouted "I warn you people in the gallery that no people in the world will feel so badly at the result of this meeting to-night as the Irish leaders in the English parliament."

His reference brought forth an even stronger combination of groans and howls. Koebbe, whose resolution had precipitated the riot, called to the people in the gallery to show spirit of fair play, but his appeal was in vain. Bellowing from megaphones continued and both Koebbe and Wise gave up the attempt to speak. Chairman Choate was equally unsuccessful. The police reserves reached the gallery by this time and ejected the leaders of the disturbing element, but no arrests were made. Chairman Choate announced that the meeting would be adjourned. A dozen men on the platform tried to assist him in restoring order. He said:

"The action of the gallery here to-night has done more to cause the ratification of these peace treaties than all the peace speeches that could be made during the evening. In virtue of my authority as chairman of this meeting, I declare the meeting adjourned without the audience listening to the speeches of the other two gentlemen."

STOLEN GOODS RETURNED.

Officer Polley of Fair Haven Solves Two Recent Burglaries.

Rutland, Dec. 13.—The solution of two recent breaks in this county and the return of the stolen goods is the record made by Deputy Sheriff John S. Polley of Fair Haven. Yesterday afternoon he placed under arrest, Edward Clayton, at one time held as a suspect in the burglary of the jewelry store at Poultney. He is now charged with breaking into the Mount cottage on Lake Bomoseen and stealing numerous articles. The property was found by the officer at the home of George Marshall of Poultney.

Yesterday with the aid of a search warrant, Officer Polley visited the Marshall house at Poultney. At the front windows were hanging the curtains stolen from the Mount cottage and within the house were found most of the cottage furniture. The Marshalls, who have both served time in the house of correction, claimed that the goods were left there by Clayton. Polley then made his way to South Poultney, where he found Clayton. The man was brought to Fair Haven and he will be taken to Castleton for a hearing. He denies the theft.

Sheriff Polley has also solved the recent burglary at West Pawlet. The furs worth $50 stolen from the store there have been returned to the owners. Directly following the arrest of John Carriek, who was found in a jewelry store in Fair Haven about three weeks ago while attempting to rob the store, Sheriff Polley obtained a clue which led him to believe that Carriek was the same man that robbed the store of Merritt Nelson in West Pawlet on the night of November 25. When the prisoner was brought to this city from Fair Haven, he was closely questioned and at last told the story of robbing the store and of selling the skins to a man in Fair Haven.

NEW INDUSTRY FOR BARRE.

The Barber Medicine Company Enters Advertising Field to Exploit Its Veterinary Remedies.

The Barber Medicine company is a Barre institution. It has just entered the advertising field to further familiarize the public with its veterinary remedies.

Dr. C. N. Barber, the creator of the many veterinary remedies prepared by the Barber Medicine company, has for 30 years been a successful veterinary practitioner. He is a resident of Barre and well known throughout Vermont. During this period his remedies have had an increasing sale annually and so great have these sales increased it became necessary to build a modern laboratory. This building, which is used exclusively for the preparation of the remedies, is located near the doctor's home, and he personally superintends their manufacture.

Up to a year ago no special effort had been made to establish organized salesmanship. Orders for the remedies had come voluntarily from local dealers and stockmen until the business had grown beyond the capacity of the doctor's office. This necessitated the building of the laboratory.

So great were the benefits received by the use of the Barber veterinary remedies and so many were the voluntary letters of recommendation sent to the doctor that he decided to expand the business and this decision brought about the organization of the Barber Medicine company. Agencies the past year have been established throughout Vermont and in sections of adjoining states. The work of extending agencies is now going on in southern New Hampshire and Maine, and the purpose of the company is to make the remedies known in every state of the Union. There are thirty distinct and separate remedies put up by the company—remedies for the treatment of all the common diseases of horses and other stock. They are all labelled and boxed attractively.

A "Counsel Book for Horsemen and Stockmen" has been published by the company. This will be mailed to any address. A postal card request will bring it.

Dr. Barber's many years' experience as a veterinarian should gain him the confidence of all men who own stock and establish for the Barber company an extensive sale.
