Putting the "Cleave" in Cleaveland.

They're busy, just now, putting the "cleave" in "Cleaveland"—to use the old spelling of the sixth city's name. Not the "cleave" that means to cut asunder, but the intransitive "cleave" that means to stick together.

Briefly stated, the new Cleaveland Federation for Charity and Philanthropy is an alliance of 53 of the city's social organizations to collect all funds for the current expenses of the 53 institutions by means of one central board rather than through individual organizations; to put into use each year the $30,000 to $60,000 which is now spent in making 53 collections, where heretofore only one will be necessary; to enable officers of organizations to devote to actual work-time now devoted to securing funds; to free benevolent donors, by one collection, the annoyance of incessant demands for small amounts; to double or triple, through educational campaigns, the number of the city's givers to charity; and to cause 53 little skirmishing bands of outfighters to bury their differences, unite their interests and sympathies, and present a solid front to the problems of the community.

This plan for "benevolence by co-operation in place of benevolence by competition" was set afoot when 300 social workers carried on a brisk, week-long "giver-getting campaign" from June 2 to 9, going from house to house explaining the purposes of the federation and inspiring gifts.

As a result, the number of gifts made to charity through the federation is 3,300. The number of people who ordinarily give to Cleveland's charities each year is 6,000. This means that in the brief four months of its existence the federation has already secured half as many donors as have before been contributing annually. In four months it has done a half year's job.

More than that, the donations that have so far been made to the federation total $250,000, and the annual amount that Cleveland people have been giving to charities in past years averages $500,000. Here, too, then, the federation has reached the half-way place in less than half a year.—The Survey.

A Dog Should Pick a Good Boy and Stick To Him.

In the July American Magazine, Don Marquis writes a dog story entitled "Dogs and Boys," an extract from which follows:

"If you are a dog of any sense, you will pick out a pretty good sort of a boy and stick to him. These dogs that are always adopting one boy after another get a bad name among the humans in the end. And you'd better keep in with the humans, especially the grown-up ones. Getting your scraps off a plate at the back door two or three times a day beats hunting rabbits and ground-squirrels for a living.

"What a dog wants is a boy anywhere from about 9 to 16 years old. A boy under 9 hasn't enough sense, as a rule, to be any company for an intelligent dog. And along about 16 they begin to dress up and try to run with the girls, and carry on in a way to make a dog tired. There are exceptions of course—one of the worst mistakes some dogs make is to suppose that all boys are alike. That isn't true; you'll find just as much individuality among boys as there is among us dogs, if you're patient enough to look for it and have a knack for making friends with animals. But you must remember to be kind to a boy if you're going to teach him anything; and you must be careful not to frighten him."

MARSHFIELD

Death of Hubbard C. Hadlock Occurred Saturday Evening.

Hubbard E. Hadlock, who has been ill with pneumonia for the past week, died Saturday afternoon about 6 o'clock, aged sixty-eight years. Funeral services were held from his late home this (Monday) afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mr. Hadlock was a carpenter by trade and had been a resident of this town for a good many years. He was one of the few surviving veterans of the Civil war. He leaves a wife and an adopted daughter to mourn his loss.

Mrs. Warner Smith and two sons of Massachusetts are visiting at C. D. Smith's. Joseph Bullock is quite ill with heart trouble. Mrs. Bullock is also in very poor health from a complication of diseases.

OPENED ASSAULT ON TARIFF.

Senator McCumber Defended the Farmers To-day.

Washington, D. C., July 14.—Senator McCumber of North Dakota, opened the Republican assault on the Democratic tariff revision bill in the Senate to-day, defending the farmers of the country against the free listing or great reduction in tariff rates on agricultural products, and charging the Democratic party with deliberately "kicking the American farmer into the gutter."

"In this year 1913," said Senator McCumber, addressing the Democrats, "you are about to commit a greater crime against the American farmer than has ever been perpetrated by any political party against any class of people during any period of recorded history."

"With violent hands you are about to strip him of every advantage which the changed conditions of home supply and demand were about to yield to him. You have declared that he is an outcast in the land which he has made, the only one of all the classes of American people who is not entitled to any consideration at your hands. You have insulted his sense of fairness, slapped him in the face and kicked him into the gutter."

The tariff bill, Senator McCumber declared, seemed to have been "conceived in animosity against every American industry that needed protection" with the American farmer as the "special object of his cholera and hate."

"It is because of his past political affiliation that you are heapng upon him the vengeance for all your previous defeats? Or do you consider yourself to be the instrument through which Providence is to work its punishment because in the last political campaign he forgot the faith of his fathers and went chasing after a strange god, with cloven hoofs and branching antlers? If he is to be punished for his heresy, are you the proper person to inflict the punishment? You are the beneficiary of the farmer's infidelity to his own party last fall. And for you now to be his executioner for the offense of being misled by you strikes me as being one of the most cold-blooded propositions I have ever heard of."

It was the Democrats, Senator McCumber declared, who told the farmer that he had been wronged by Mr. Taft, because the former president sought to "trade off his protection for reciprocal tariff reductions by Canada" and it was the Democrats who tried to convince the farmer that the Republican party was not to be trusted and that they, instead, should be entrusted with his interests. The reciprocity proposition, the senator argued, had one virtue, in that it proposed to get something for surrendering nothing, while the Democrats proposed to trade away the farmer's interest in everything "for absolute nothing."

Funeral services for Benjamin T. Burrell, whose death occurred at the City hospital Wednesday night, after a two weeks' illness, were held at home of his daughter, Mrs. Albert Paschal, 34 Bridge street, Cambridge, Mass., Saturday forenoon at 10 o'clock. The remains were taken in the afternoon to Brookline for burial beside Mrs. Burrell, whose death occurred several years ago.

Saturday afternoon about fifty members of the Sunday school classes of the Swedish mission congregated at Benjamin Falls, where the annual picnic was held. In addition to the members of the Sunday school classes there was a representative number of adherents of the Mission. The outing took the form of a basket picnic. During the afternoon various sporting events took place. The affair was called one of the most successful ever held by the mission. Rev. Mr. Bjork of the Swedish mission had charge of the outing.

While Manuel Gomez was on his way to this city from Montpelier, he learned from the running board of a trolley car leaving its capital city about 10 o'clock last evening, to wave farewell to friends left behind, and struck a telephone pole at the corner of Granite and Barre streets with such force as to render him unconscious. His head was somewhat bruised, but a physician who attended him could find no other injuries. He was carried into a nearby house to recover from the shock.

Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets

are recognized throughout the world for their leadership in corset fashions. They are the product of designers who have the resources and knowledge necessary to produce corsets ideally suited to the woman who is particular about her figure, her health, comfort and appearance. Thin double boning gives easy flexibility to the garment. Double interlinings prevent the boning from punching through and tearing the cloth; and the fabrics themselves are light and soft, but so strongly woven that they will not stretch or shrink. A Warner's Corset once fitted to your figure will always keep its shape.

We invite your inspection of the styles we carry, or an order by mail will receive our prompt attention. We further guarantee that every pair of Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets sold at our counters will not rust, break or tear.
