THURSDAY, AUGUST 7, 1913.

There can be only one Wilson. Executives Henry Lane.

If your salary isn't big enough, try the "Chateaugay circuit," as the St. Johnsbury Republican puts it.

To get the proper amount of advertising, Weston ought to have reversed his trip and made it from Minneapolis to New York, instead of vice versa.

A Canadian beat ex-President Taft in an international golf match at Point Au Pic on Tuesday. But it wasn't the first time Canada has turned Taft down.

Bryan ought to be spared from his Texan friends, who have taken him at his word and are raising $50,000 to piece out his $12,500 salary. They are doing their best to make him ridiculous.

James Duncan says his obligation to the unions which have reposed their trust in him prevents him from becoming Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor of Massachusetts. Spoken like a man!

The Barre committees are doing their part toward preparing entertainment for the delegates to the National Retail Monument Dealers' association in Boston later in the month; and now it is left for the party of the second part to respond.

Opponents of the "tango" dance may be said to have gotten at the foot of the evil, now that they have attacked it from the standpoint that the peculiar dance ruins the feet. Opposition on the ground of the immoral side of the dance figure failed to make great progress against the "tango."

Ex-Gov. John Lind of Minnesota says that under no circumstances would he accept the post of United States ambassador to Mexico. Being ambassador to Mexico would be child's play as compared with the work which Wilson has called upon him to perform before any Mexican government is recognized.

If a real invading fleet should experience as little difficulty in capturing islands, bays and promontories on the southern New England coast as the "Black" fleet of the United States navy has experienced in the mimic warfare now being conducted, it would be a sorry time for the little old city of New York; but there is a suspicion that a real invading fleet would run afoul of quite a number of obstacles which the "Blacks" dodged as they skipped along the coast.

In the distribution of Carnegie medals for the present summer, that incident at Swanton in which a young man saved a companion in the Missisquoi river, ought not to be overlooked. It was a brave act which Mark Hubbard did in swimming out and holding Harmon Clough's head above water until another young man, Chaire Gleason, could come in a boat so that both the rescuer and the drowning youth were saved. It was a display of courage splendidly directed.

The robbery at the Fairbanks museum in St. Johnsbury last Monday night, in which thousands of dollars of jewels was taken, is the most serious outcropping of crime that nature in Vermont for a long time. Jewelers and dealers in that sort of goods ought to be warned at once to be on the lookout for persons who may attempt to transfer the ill-gotten gains into money. That seems to be the best clue inasmuch as the robber or robbers left no clue in the museum except burned matches.

RAISING APPLES IN VERMONT.
An Iowa man with experience in apple cultivation has come to Vermont, bought a large farm in Rutland county and set out 12,000 apple trees, thereby showing greater faith in Vermont than many residents do if one were to judge by their failure to go into the apple raising business on a large scale and under the proper methods. But perhaps that statement is unfair to the residents of Vermont who haven't done anything in the line of increasing their output of apples; they have the faith in Vermont and the conviction that Vermont's climate and soil are particularly well adapted to this kind of fruit cultivation, but they simply have been content to let well enough alone and to leave the hustling to someone else. The result is that Vermont's splendid chances to develop a very lucrative form of farming have been allowed to go to waste and a few hustlers, like the Iowa man and some others, have been allowed to go ahead and develop the business as well as the efforts of a few scattered farmers can do. Those who are already well established in the business are making money off their apples as they are producing monster crops and finding a ready market for all they can raise.

We hope the Iowa man will meet with similar success in recompense for his faith in Vermont's apple growing possibilities. There surely is a market for him and for a great many other farmers in Vermont. It is merely left for him and the prospective pomologists to devote themselves assiduously to the business of developing their orchards in order to produce the fruit.

The Bethel granite industry seems to be experiencing difficulties much similar to those which came to the granite industry in Barre about the time that the Tenney company took over the various electrical properties in and about Barre and Montpelier. These stoppages of work are very serious inasmuch as the granite quarrying and manufacturing firms frequently have contracts requiring the completion of work at stipulated times and, moreover, they deprive the workmen of steady employment from week end to week end. In the case of the Barre granite industry, the Tenney company came to its aid promptly with the erection of an auxiliary steam plant in addition to the one already operated at the "Pioneer"; and that is the only course to be pursued at Bethel inasmuch as the water supply in the White river had been dwindling for some time until now it fails utterly at times to meet the requirements of the industry. However, such an auxiliary plant cannot be completed until long after the present crisis in power shortage is passing, so the Bethel industry will have to worry along on part time just as Barre was compelled to do last year.

The annual basket picnic of the Congregational Sunday school will be held Friday of this week at the home of H. B. Partridge. The start will be made from the church at 8:30 o'clock. Vehicles will be in readiness to carry the crowd.

Martin Lucia, of the Lucia Granite Co., spent several days this week at Woodbury pond.

McAllister Bros.' automobile truck carried a large load of household goods to Burlington the first of this week.

Kimball Cooney carried a fishing party to Williamstown, Monday of this week. Joe Bisson is taking an enforced vacation on account of a broken arm. The fracture is an unusual one inasmuch as Joe continued at his duties in the stone shed for about two months before he learned the true nature of the injury. An X-ray photograph taken about a week ago revealed the fact that both bones of the forearm were fractured.

Miss Emma Downing is visiting with friends in Orange for a few days. Miss Laura Wellington is spending a few days in Washington, with her aunt, Mrs. W. C. Nye.

CURRENT COMMENT

That Telephone Report.

The report of Governor Fletcher's special telephone commission is just what might be expected when a member entering a complaint is placed upon a commission to act as a judge and jury on evidence coming before his court which he himself formulates. The verdict could not be otherwise than biased. It seems to us Governor Fletcher made a mistake in appointing this commission. It was not called for, for we have a public service commission fully competent to take up this matter and before which the report of the special commission must come. Insofar as it was not called for it becomes a needless expense and money wasted. Our knowledge of this question is from a local standpoint, and the charges made by this special committee certainly do not apply to this section. The New England telephone service here is first-class, the rentals moderate and the tolls reasonable.

It may be a monopoly as charged, but if so it is one of the greatest needs the public and private life of to-day demands. A company of such magnitude giving service to all parts of the country presents a difficult problem to manage and pay fair returns on the large capital invested. That it is able to do so on its present rates shows a business management of shrewd discernment and great capacity.

The service of the New England system cannot be justly compared with the People's lines except in the local field. In that field the two systems are necessary and will remain so long as they will give the public what they need at a reasonable rate. For long distance service there is but one system in Vermont and that is the New England, and surely these tolls are reasonable.

If the independent companies could force the New England out they, the independents, could not give the long distance service except they built up a system similar to the New England and if this should come to pass would the public have any assurance of a better service or more reasonable rates?—Grot-on Times.

"A Minister's Daughter."
To what extent the marrying of a minister's daughter is a palliating circumstance in cases of official misconduct seems likely to be determined before the present administration has proceeded much further. The customs of Alabama, reinforcing the traditions of the past, also come into play. The local newspaper explained that the articles which might serve to furnish his house could afterwards be carried home as souvenirs, etc. The hours for the show were named.

On the appointed day San Juan turned out. The Porto Ricans never missed a bet like that. In solemn procession they trooped into his new home, bearing all sorts of gifts. The donors included most of the lawyers of the town—always a liberal body of men—and it is asserted, some litigants as well.

The story reached Washington. After a journey through the circumlocution office, it was brought to the judge's attention. His next friend spoke for him. Nothing wrong was intended. The judge had married a minister's daughter, and she was used to donation parties. Moreover, these were very common in Alabama where the happy couple had come from. This may be a trifling affair! But pity poor Arebhold who was impeached and found guilty on less distinct charges of official misconduct.

"LUCKY BLUEBIRD" BROOCH PINS FOR THE LADIES
Handsome Novelty Being Given This Week with Lord Salisbury Cigarettes by Local Dealers.

Maeterlinck, the great Belgian philosopher, says: "The bluebird for happiness." Certainly the artistic enameled "Lucky Bluebird" pin, given free with Lord Salisbury cigarettes, will make happy every woman to whom it finds its way. This dainty pin is in remarkably good taste. It is in fact real ornament which every woman will find pleasure in wearing. It is proving so popular that dealers say the supply will be quickly depleted.

The manufacturers of Lord Salisbury state that this brand requires only a trial to find favor with smokers, and that they are therefore justified in the expense of giving away the "Bluebird" pins. Experienced smokers easily recognize in Lord Salisbury cigarettes the smoothness which goes only with the most carefully selected Turkish tobacco, and especially commend its unusual mildness and fragrance. On the whole it seems as though this method of getting smokers acquainted with a brand would win out here.—Adv.

duct. And he never thought to plead such extenuating circumstances as these. But will the Porto Ricans, to whom we owe at least a good example, fully comprehend the force of these exceptional circumstances?—Boston Herald.

JINGLES AND JESTS

Account of Stock.

Four four entire hours had the lady remained in the shop. She had visited every department and worried the majority of the salesmen without spending a penny.

Toward the close of the afternoon one of the salesmen, feeling somewhat exasperated, ventured to make a mild protest.

"Madam," he asked sweetly, "are you shopping here?"

The lady looked surprised, but not by any means annoyed.

"Certainly," she replied. "But what else should I be doing?"

"Well, madam, I thought perhaps you might be taking an inventory."

Then the lady melted away among the shadows of the door.—National Food Magazine.

On the Face of It.
The information editor received this letter from a fresh youth:

"Kindly tell me why a girl always closes her eyes when a fellow kisses her."

The editor replied:
"If you will send us your photograph we may be able to tell you the reason."—Ladies Home Journal.

Plain Talk From Home.
"I ought to be supremely happy," the youth wrote to the home people. "I don't see much business ahead, but I have my diploma and my books."

Whereupon the "old man" wrote him:
"Put the diploma in a frame, make a pillow of the books, then rise up early and hit some good hard licks for three square meals a day."—Atlanta Constitution.

What's the Answer?
Here's a bit of humor related by Henry Miller.

"For a whole solid hour the captain had been lecturing his men on 'The Duties of a Soldier,' and he thought that now the time had come for him to test the results of his discourse.

"Casting his eye around the room, he fixed on Priv. Murphy as his first victim.

"Priv. Murphy," he asked, "why should a soldier be ready to die for his country?"

"The Irishman scratched his head for a while, then an anguishing and enlightened smile flitted across his face. "Sure, captain," he said pleasantly, "you are quite right. Why should he?"—Young's Magazine.

SPORTING NOTES

Connerly, the big St. Louis Card scout and one of the best in the West, says that the trouble with the Cards is that they have got but one pitcher in their personnel and that is Slim Sallee. Connerly spoke right ones. Sallee is the only pitcher of more than mediocre minor league ability on the Cards' payroll. It is the prevailing opinion in the Mount City that the Cards will end the season in last position. Huggins has started every means possible to strengthen his team for 1914. The little man is even going so far as to offer some of his best stars in efforts to make trades that he thinks will better his club. In the other league, the American, it would not be surprising if the Browns finished the season in last place.

Tim Keefe, a member of the New York Giants in 1888, and Rube Marquard of the present day Giants hold the record for consecutive won games jointly. Each pitcher reached a total of 19 straight. Keefe pitched his games, 19 of them all in a row, while Marquard was on the mound for many victories in which he relieved other twirlers. When Keefe was pitching he stood but fit feet at the most from the plate, while the present da regulations require that a heavier stand 60 feet, 6 inches.

Ohaf Hendrickson, the wonderful little utility man of the Red Sox, has been obliged to submit to another operation. Some time ago Hendrickson underwent an operation for appendicitis. This time he was operated on for intestinal trouble and underwent his operation at Boston. He is expected to be about in about wot or three weeks.

Of the 1912 world's baseball champions there are several faces missing this season. Among this of missing faces are found Sthl, Pape, O'Brien, Ball, Krug and Bradley.

Honck, the Mackman pitcher, has a fault. He cannot last a full nine inning game. Connie Mack thinks that he would be a star if it was not for this fault of petering out in about six or seven innings. Although in this time he can twirl a game with the best of them in the league.

Pipp, the former Catholic university player, who was with Detroit after the close of school in June, and who has been playing with Providence for the past few weeks, has been turned over to Scranton, of the Tri-State league.

Fred Gibbs, the former Athol, Mass., high school pitcher, who was wanted by Connie Mack, is now playing with Bangor in the Maine-New Brunswick league.

Boehling, the Worcester lad who recently completed a series of eleven consecutive victories on the mound for Washington, will not last long in major league ball, says Frank Chance. The Fearless Leader says that Boehling throws four curves out of every five balls pitched and no matter how strong the youngster is he cannot stand the pace. Chance avers that he has seen many of this same type break into the big leagues and every time their careers have been short. He says that Griffith had better use him all he can for two years as he will not be any good after that.

In the August America Magazine, George Fitch, the famous Peoria funny man, writes an amusing piece entitled "Homeburg's Two Four-Hundredths," in which he presents the activities of those in a small town who put on airs. The two families in Homeburg that feel that superiority are the Payleys and Singers. Following is an extract from the article:

"The Payleys and Singers still continued to compete, but we declined to fight and bleed for them and amused ourselves instead of watching them from the sidelines. Mrs. Payley joined the "When I was in Europe" brigade, and the Singers got the first automobile in town. It kept the Singers so busy supporting it that the Payleys were able to build the first modern house with a sleeping porch and individual bathrooms—and about the time the Singers came back with a two-story bungalow full of chopped wood furniture. Mrs. Payley went abroad again and began to say, "The last time I was in Europe." It was nip and tuck, year in and year out, between the two and we all enjoyed it a lot.

"But it wasn't until the Payley and Singer children came home from college and formed a tight little circle with their backs out, that we began to reap the benefits of really haughty society."

"The Payley and Singer children had absorbed all their families had to offer, and then they went off to school in the East and laid in a complete stock of the latest styles of superiority. They were all finished in the same spring and shipped back to Homeburg—magnificent specimens of college art with even their names done over—and when they realized that they had to live forever in the old town, where no one spoke their language or could even understand their clothes, the family feud was forgotten and the four rushed together for mutual protection and formed a real smart set.

"It's just like your bigger crowd. It doesn't have anything to do with us in particular. And we are just like you are. You open your Sunday papers and read reams about the plumbing and pajamas and pet dogs and love affairs of your first families, and I guess nothing that Sallie Singer or Sarah Payley ever did got past the scornful but lynx-eyed Homeburgers. When Sarah was getting letters on expensive stationery from Kansas City the whole town discussed the probable character of a man who would put blue sealing wax on his envelopes, and when Sallie made her pa put an addition on the Singer home, we knew what color she was going to do her bonjour in three months in advance. But we are prouder than your people. Your hire down-trodden reporters to go and abase themselves to get the information, while we wouldn't even lower ourselves enough to ask even by proxy. We just let the sewing women and hired girls tell us."
