Some of the signs of worms are: Dizziness, headache, nervousness, increased thirst, acid or heavy breath, spasms, enlarged abdomen, varied bowel action, pale face of children, thin, bluish rings around eyes, itching of nostrils, languor, irritability, disturbed sleep, grinding of teeth, irregularity of pulse. COST OF WORLD'S SERIES.

Estimated That Over a Million Dollars Was Spent in Various Ways.

Not far short of a million and a quarter of dollars was the cost of the recent world's baseball series to the American public. While this amount may be taken as a fair estimate of money directly expended, there are many items that might be added to the expense list which are indirectly traceable to the craze for baseball. It is perhaps the most remarkable tribute to the popularity of baseball, when more than 150,000 persons will attend five games and pour into the treasuries of the hotels, railroads, theatres, ticket speculators, club owners and players and various other beneficiaries, sums totaling more than $1,000,000. Patrons of baseball have stamped themselves as liberal spenders during their favorite pastime is concerned.

Lord Northcliffe, during his recent visit, expressed surprise that the attendance was not better at the baseball contests which settled the world's supremacy. He called attention to the fact that the first tie in the English association football championship at the Crystal Palace, near London, attracted 120,000 enthusiastic spectators. But as a matter of fact, the average price at a football game in England is not much more than a quarter, which makes the total receipts about $35,000 for the game. This is about one half of the receipts at a world's game in New York.

According to the report of the national commission, which had charge of the series, 158,992 persons paid admission to the five games played. The gate receipts totaled $325,080. To this amount must be added the "fees," which were easily $100,000. A conservative estimate places the daily reserved seats and 82 tickets in the hands of spectators at 3,000. Many of these were sold at an advance of from 20 to 50 for tickets good for three games. Therefore with five games 100,000 is not too much to charge to the spectators' column.

Hotels benefited largely by the series. During the week the hotels were benefited to the extent of 250,000. Railroads came in for their share of the receipts. Many special trains were run from the south, west and New England states. Add to these the daily trips between Philadelphia and New York and $175,000 of $200,000 is easily accounted for. It is doubtful whether more taxicabs and automobiles were ever seen at an event than at the polo grounds and Shibe park. The receipts from this source aggregated $25,000, while the subway and elevated carried 30,000 daily to the games in New York and 20,000 traveled to Shibe park daily in street cars. This item alone foots up to nearly $10,000. Theatres were not neglected, and the box receipts were probably increased $25,000 by the series. Many visitors spent their early morning hours visiting department stores, and these derived material financial benefits from the games in New York and $20,000 probably was spent in the stores.

It is a difficult matter to estimate the money bet on the series. Many thousands of dollars were wagered on the single games and series, and a safe guess at the amount lost on the series is $250,000. This, together with other chances through which many other big sums were spent, easily foots up a million and a quarter dollars.

MANGANESE ALLOYS INCREASE.

Uncle Sam Is Distributing Report Describing the Many Deposits.

The fact that the output of the manganese alloys, ferromanganese and spiegel, from American mines last year was 227,039 long tons, against 178,714 in this branch of the mining industry in 1912, is the main item in a report, in addition, more than 100,000 tons were imported. This gives timely interest to a 200 page report, by E. C. Harler, of the United States Geological Survey, published as bulletin 427, describing the many manganese and manganese deposits in the United States as well as the uses of manganese and manganese alloys. As indicated by the large amount of ore consumed, manganese is a very important alloy and has many uses. Manganese steels are hard but not brittle and are malleable, though they offer great resistance to cutting tools. These properties make manganese steels highly useful in the manufacture of such articles as gears, pins, sprockets, sprocket chains, railroad frogs and switches, and the faces and digging parts of pulverizing and crushing machinery used in mining, etc. For making some of these articles manganese is practically the only alloy available. Manganese bronze is produced by alloying manganese with copper, and silver bronze by alloying manganese with aluminum, zinc, and copper. Oxides of manganese are used in glass manufacture, in dry batteries, as a drier of varnishes and paints, and in the making of disinfectants. As a coloring material manganese is used for coloring glass, pottery, tiles, and bricks, in calico printing and dyeing and in paint manufacture. It also has many other uses.

The Romance of Making Money.

In the November American Magazine E. Albert Apple writes a story entitled "Andy Ryan Succumbs to Failure," in which he makes the following comment on the romance of making money: "Year by year, the romance of making money in America is creeping farther west. Already it has crossed the Mississippi, and wealth-corralling in the East is a coldly analytical game of cost systems, efficiency experts, advertising campaigns, and the charts of business forecasts.

"But the search for romance in business has developed the typical American—a roving entrepreneur. Time was when a hundred-mile trip meant county gossip; but now a coast-to-coast jaunt occasions a mere elevating of the brows and a request for picture postals.

"The oil country was the last to lose its fairyland enchantment. The oil man is the most picturesque and discontented of all the sorrowful procession of romance seekers—his home is on wheels and in a suit case and he jumps a thousand miles at a time. Occasionally one meets an old-time oil producer who suggests days of plank roads and border rustlings; but he will shake his head and claim that oil country romance died when artificial maps and 26 Broadway maps came into existence.

"Pit Hale, the world's first oil town, where 20,000 boomers built a mushroom city, of which nothing remains today but tradition and one house; Co-d Oil Johnny, the first great get-rich-quick, plunger, and spendthrift; and Pipe Line Don O'Day, who ran the pipe line through the country. All these have been taken from him. The individual producer has been nearly blotted out by Standard Oil. Oil is a corporation proposition; and the only person who sees romance around a corporation is the stenographer."

Attacks Hurt Stability of Business and Injure Confidence of Capital.

Chicago, October 25.—Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, in an address yesterday to the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron & Steel institute declared that the stability of business has been interfered with and the confidence of capital shaken by "unreasonable and uncalled for agitation and attack." In spite of the country's wrath and resources, foreign capitalists wonder why we are not more continuously prosperous, he said.

"There are exceptional cases," declared Judge Gary, "in which mismanagement has caused distrust or dissatisfaction on the part of foreign and domestic capitalists; but this is not the principal reason for hesitancy at the present time on the part of these capitalists in making investments in our securities. They wonder why it is that with our great and growing wealth and resources and our superior advantages we are not more continuously prosperous; why we are not more stable in prices and values and in general conditions; why there is ever any disposition on the part of any one to interfere with the normal and natural progress in the development of our country and its industries. Every one who travels extensively abroad is confronted with these inquiries by foreigners friendly to and interested in our commercial and financial conditions and success; and we assembled in this room are asking ourselves the same question.

"I venture the assertion that it is largely because of such unnecessary agitation and ill-considered criticism by those who have not the nation's best interests at heart. There is too much demagoguery, too much mud-slinging. The man out of office criticizes the one in office and the one in office in turn seeks to advance his own interests regardless of the effect upon all others. In many public speeches and in magazine articles the author is influenced by motives of selfishness or cupidity. Appeals are made for the purpose of creating a feeling of dissatisfaction and unrest when this is unnecessary and unjustified. Fortunately this is partially offset by the conservative attitude of some of the leading journals; and the number is increasing.

"It is not uncommon in public discussion to treat success as an offense; to consider the possession of wealth, however honestly acquired, as wrong. Legislation calculated to create classes is urged persistently; also laws to impose unnecessary and unreasonable burdens; to forcibly take from one something which he has and is entitled to have, and turn it over to another; to prevent or to lessen the success of legitimate enterprise and endeavor.

"Capital, always timid, has been seriously affected by this unreasonable and uncalled for agitation and attack. Indeed, it is becoming frightened. Confidence has been shaken. It is becoming almost impossible to secure on fair terms, on good security and at a reasonable rate of interest, the necessary capital to equip or liberally maintain going and successful properties, to say nothing of the additions and extensions which the interests of this great and growing country demand.
