Eggs may break records but nary a shell shall we break.

Possibly Huerta never heard there is such a place as the United States.

What Editor Pindell thinks about J. Ham. Lewis might not look well in print.

Hooray! Vardon says Americans are learning golf—a thought perhaps set going by a certain young person he met last summer.

If the newspaper reports are to be believed implicitly, Theodore Roosevelt has been unanimously elected president of the Argentine republic.

Perhaps there is no significance in the fact that the captain of the Indian football team is named Welch, but it is a curious study in nomenclature.

By way of Portsmouth, N. H., comes the "news" that a Mexican city is about to fall before the rebels. Next we shall hear via the north pole that Huerta still is on the job.

Governor Foss was about two weeks late in bringing out his Thanksgiving day proclamation, but he finally concluded that the people of Massachusetts have something to be thankful for, even though he was defeated for re-election.

The Y. M. & W. C. A. clock in New York City is lagging sadly on the latter half of the proposed $4,000,000 fund for the erection of new buildings in the great city. If New York fails to raise this sum, it will be a serious reflection on the generosity of the people there, for such an amount for the great and rich city is like a few thousand to small cities.

That section of the town of Waterbury, designated as "Blush hill," takes on a deeper tinge of pride over the fact that a retired officer of the New York City police department has picked one of its farms for a permanent home. The newcomer is very welcome. Moreover, let it be stated that there are many farms scattered through Vermont which are waiting for tenants who will devote their energies to increased cultivation. The coming of the New York policeman from New York ought to be followed by many other determined men who are looking for an independent life away from the distractions and perplexities of metropolitan turmoil.

It is rather unusual that western Vermont should be furnishing power for industrial activities as far away as towns in New Hampshire, yet it is a fact that power generated in Rutland county is being sent to Claremont and vicinity to aid in the industrial development of that section. That western Vermont has more power than it can use in its own industries should be borne in mind by those other sections of Vermont which have not enough to meet their increasing needs, for the power could be sent as readily to those sections as to Claremont. Rutland county is particularly fortunate in having this over-supply of electrical energy.

The people of Orange, Windsor and Washington counties ought to turn out well for the annual meeting of the Vermont State Horticultural society next week in recognition of the selection of Randolph as the meeting-place of the convention. It isn't often that the smaller communities of the state are favored with a chance to have conventions of state bodies, and although the State Horticultural society is not one of the largest conventions, it nevertheless is one of the most important and one full of even greater possibilities for the advancement of Vermont. Therefore, the people of the central-eastern side of the state should make an effort to attend the public meetings and hear something to their advantage about the raising of fruit. The dates of the convention are Nov. 19, 20, and 21.

BENEFITS OF BUSINESS MEN'S GET TOGETHERS.

Like Burlington, Rutland has decided that the way to progress is through the stomach and, in consequence, it is holding weekly get-together dinners which are attended by the business men of the city. The former city has been indulging in that sort of thing for several months and the dinners seem to be well patronized and successful as far as the casual observer might judge. There is no doubt that such informal get-together gatherings once each week, with an address by some well-posted person on a subject of direct interest, can serve to bring the business interests of a community into closer and less suspicious relationship. One great trouble with the usual business life of the average Vermont community is that the men engaged in the various activities are not brought into closer touch with each other than is possible under a system of an annual banquet or so of some of the leading organizations of the community.

In this connection perhaps one paragraph from the address of Judge Frank L. Fish of the superior court of Vermont in Rutland on Thursday best presents the possibilities of such co-operation. Judge Fish said:

"You business men represent the greatest force in Rutland. With you is the fate of this city. It is for you to say whether new and better things, or the old, be the lot of Rutland. This organization can bring about anything it sees fit in this city. You men should touch elbows all the week and through all honorable, fair and just means, work to make Rutland what it is designed to be: The best possible rural city in New England."

In those words of Judge Fish, while applied particularly to Rutland, there is something which all the larger communities of Vermont may take home to themselves. They can all derive a spirit of optimism when they get together and recount the advantages which they have and discount the disadvantages; and such optimism must inevitably result in some measure of progress. Therein lies the value of the weekly dinners of the business men of Burlington and Rutland; optimism is uppermost; pessimism is driven out of doors.

CURRENT COMMENT

The "Seizure" of Panama.

There are a lot of people in the United States who are displeased with the course of President Roosevelt at the time of the Panama revolution. They say that he incited the revolution and then recognized the newly hatched republic before its feathers were dry. And Colombia is still grieved because of failed to drive the hard bargain with us for the canal rights on the isthmus. It is now trying to persuade President Wilson to atone for what it regards as the wrongs done to it by President Roosevelt. And we have been told that all South America feels outraged because of the "despoiling" of Colombia. The address, therefore, of a former Argentine foreign minister on Monday when an honorary degree was conferred on Col. Roosevelt in Buenos Ayres is worth noting at this time. The Argentine statesman congratulated the former president for his alertness in the Panama crisis and defended his course and said that if the United States did not dominate in the Caribbean the republics would ask European countries to come to their assistance. The speaker professed that the Monroe doctrine should be preserved as a live principle of American international law rather than that that there should be European intervention of any kind, and he regarded the interference in Panama as a righteous application of the Monroe doctrine. It is probable that other South American statesmen hold the same view.

Walking Now in Order.

These last days of autumn, with the spicy crisp tang in the air, are ideal for walking. The leaves are nearly all fallen from the trees, revealing great spaces from horizon to horizon and far-sweeping expanses of sunny sky. The stark limbs of the barren forest no longer invite to rest and shade, and the call of the wide galloping wind impels to vigorous use of good strong legs. The lungs, cramped by the languid summer to learn to love it. Locomotion without greater exertion than walking. But how few people know how to walk well! Much attention has been paid of late to the care of the health, and emphasis has been laid on proper methods of breathing and on the advantage of sleeping out of doors. It is in line with the same reform to urge walking in the fresh air and walking in proper form. One should learn to love it. Locomotion without greater exertion than walking. Electric cars are a great convenience, but we are inclined to make too much use of them for going short distances. The motor car is a temptation to ride instead of walking. If you have only two blocks to go on your way to work in the morning, you should enjoy each step; to do this walk erect, with head high and shoulders thrown back. Then as your lungs expand, a sense of bodily invigoration will awaken.

Take a walk every day for sheer pleasure. The spring is intensive; the autumn is expansive. In the spring we rejoice in the young blossoms and in the leaves which are beginning to shut in the prospect. In the autumn only the witch-hazel is in bloom with its fragrant yellow flowers. So few are alert to the charms of nature! It is sad to look at the hurrying throngs at the early sunset time, awkwardly pushing along with unnatural strides, looking at the ground and forgetting the glories of the sky. The majority of old men have stooping shoulders and walk as if their joints were stiff. Daily care might have prevented such deformity. There is no excuse for young men to carry themselves with a slump and a slouch. Even those that have drilled in the militia do not seem to overcome it; they too grow into stooping and stupid old men.

With the present style of skirt it is a wonder that women can walk at all. They are forced to shuffle along with tiny mincing steps like the Japanese geisha-girl seen on the stage. However, this may eventually make their walking more graceful because it curtails too long strides and prevents swinging the arms like pendulums. One ungainliness may cure another.

If all of us would only stop and take in exultant breaths of air these wonderful sunny autumn days, our back, without any artificial training, would naturally straighten up and we should walk with a quick, light step and a warm expanding heart.—Boston Herald.

St. Albans Wants Teachers' Convention.

The Burlington merchants are being urged by The Free Press to get together and make a combined effort to secure the holding of the state teachers' convention in their city next year. As the Burlington merchants have a live association and are out after all of the good things, much urging will not be necessary.

The contemporary admits frankly that Burlington is not the possessor of a suitable convention hall, but it proposes to make up this deficiency by supplying several halls where meetings of the various branches of the association might be held.

The convention this year was held in Montpelier, where the teachers were given a most hospitable reception. Private homes were thrown open to the visitors, and there was no complaint of lack of comfortable quarters. Montpelier admittedly is as well, if not better, equipped with an auditorium as any other city in the state. But it is not the custom to hold the convention twice in the same city if satisfactory arrangements can be made in another place.

It occurs to The Messenger that it would be a good thing in many ways if St. Albans could secure the convention next year. It is understood that the selection of the fortunate city has been left to the executive committee of the association. Surely St. Albans has something to offer. It has not the hotel accommodations of which Burlington can boast, but there would be no question of lack of accommodations. If the hotels were filled, as undoubtedly they would be, private homes here would be no less hospitable than they were in Montpelier.

And St. Albans could offer the same as Burlington, namely, a series of halls. There is a spacious city hall here and several other places of assembly that are of no mean size. It may be seen, then, that St. Albans could enter the field with many and weighty inducements. No harm could be done, anyhow, in the laying of the claims of this city before the teachers' executive committee. It is something in which the merchants might well interest themselves, for it is needless to point out that it would mean quite a bit in the way of increased trade were the teachers to gather here. St. Al-

St. Albans has good stores and shipping facilities, and it is permissible to consider the commercial end of it.

St. Albans unfortunately has no active board of trade or other commercial organization which can take up the work. It would be possible and feasible, however, for the merchants to get together and appoint a committee to present the city's claims. What if success did not meet their efforts this year? Some such action would put St. Albans in the running and a continual pressing of the invitation very naturally would be accorded with acceptance sometime. Good things don't always come at once, anyhow. It certainly would be worth the while of the St. Albans merchants to talk the matter over.—St. Albans Messenger.

A Near-Tragedy.

A Pittsburg millionaire stood beside his $8,000,000 automobile wondering where to go next.

A woman whom he had known rushed out of the hotel and sought to solve his problem for him in a hurry.

She shot at him, but, of course, she did not hit him. Instead, the bullet punctured the chauffeur's leg. "Great guns, that was a narrow escape!" exclaimed the millionaire. "She might have punctured a tire."—Chicago Post.
