FRANK E. LANGLEY, Publisher

Governor Fletcher is the head of a not entirely happy official family.

With 2,066 barrels of beer inside of her, no wonder the Waterland got cranky.

Appropriately enough, Barre's clean-up week begins on "wash day." Remember it.

It was a complete rout for the Yankees at Sandwich, England. We still have something to learn about golf.

Oyster Bay is not the mud spec when it hells about Roosevelt; it can make more noise than the other fellow.

It is easy to see that Roosevelt is not just satisfied with the present administration. Nor, for that matter, Taft.

The inmate who fled from the state prison at Windsor naturally went in the direction of "Paradise"—whether regained or not remains to be seen.

The young woman, for love of whom a rich young man shot another, announces that she is devoted to her son. Without infringing on the work of her press agent, we should say she ought to be.

While Senator Gallinger's determination to run for re-election in New Hampshire was made before the Pennsylvania primaries, no doubt it has been encouraged very markedly by the results in the Keystone state. Things look brighter to Gallinger now than they did.

It was no doubting Thomas that expressed his faith in the future of Vermont in an address before the Vermont Congregationalists at Rutland on Thursday. The president of Middlebury college sees big things for the state, only the people must be awakened to them.

Splendid training some of our young men in society are getting! For instance, that wealthy young man of Baltimore who rolled three miles along a dirty pavement in order to win a wager of $800. Next thing we know they actually will be going to work to turn an honest penny.

The long projected and much needed railroad to the asbestos mines in Lamoille county is uppermost in the talk of that section again. Not till the railroad is in operation will Vermont's splendid resources of this sort be realized upon; up till that time the industry will be tremendously handicapped. It is one of Vermont's most needed transportation lines, ranking well up in importance with the cross-state railroad that is still in the discussion stage.

After a youth has been killed because he was foolish enough to let a woman shoot at a potato on his head, in the so-called "William Tell act," the authorities have awakened to the realization that such a performance ought never to have been allowed. The instance is like a great many others that are constantly being allowed to go on because of the lethargy of the public and of the public's agents; we never know enough to stop the fool-killer until the fool has been killed. Then we raise a great hue and cry, as we are doing in the present instance at Lynn, Mass. A fine time to get aroused after the damage is done!

BARRE'S COMING POSSIBILITIES AS CONVENTION CITY.

One of the 1915 conventions to be held in Barre will be that of the Vermont Congregationalists. By 1915 it is expected that Barre will be in far better position to entertain conventions of various kinds than to-day, although the public spirit of its citizens has enabled the city to entertain large companies and will enable it to do so again when the association of New England cemetery superintendents comes to Barre later in the present year. The proposed new hotel, added to the hotel accommodations of the present time, will give the community fairly adequate facilities for taking care of good sized gatherings. In the case of the state convention of the Congregationalists next year, most of the visitors will probably be entertained in private homes, following the usual custom of church conventions; but in conventions of different nature, which Barre will proceed to make bids for also, the delegates will resort more generally to the hotels. But whether the visitors are to be entertained in private homes or at hotels, Barre will be pleased to entertain the conventions. The Congregationalists will be very welcome. We expect to note that other state and county organizations are making plans to hold their conventions in Barre under the encouragement offered by the promise of increased hotel facilities.

Shingles That Last.

Nobody can complain that too much money has been expended on the roof of this noble mansion. The first shingle roof lasted from the time of its building in 1743 until 1785, when it was renewed. Forty-two years is a long life for a shingle roof, but those originals were solid and strong, handmade of cypress and applied with the zeal of the craftsman-patriot. That second roof must have been a good one, too, for it was made to last until 1860—seventy-five years—a record roof, we should say. And now, fifty-five years later, Mount Vernon's roof is to be renewed again. The shingles for this fourth roof have been made to conform to the originals, long and smooth, of the same size and with rounded ends, of cypress wood from North Carolina, as tenacious as Secretary Dan-

He himself and calculated to keep Mount Vernon just as dry. The pains taken at this time to get the best possible shingle roof for Mount Vernon is warrant for believing that the new one will last fifty years or so. Much water will flow under the Long Bridge during that time; many tides will ebb and flow, many men will come to Washington and go out again, back to their loving constituents, many new plans for making over the world will be conceived and tried, and some of them will fail. It is hard to guess what sort of place the United States will be to live in, for Mr. George Perkins' children or anybody else, by the time that Mount Vernon will need reshingling again. It is to be hoped that this new roof of 1914 will account for itself well, as a specimen of the work done at this time when the world, as Congress now sees it, is a degenerate place, in sad need of making over in all its details, from freedom to shingle roofs.—New York Evening Sun.

What Mr. Wilson Wants.

When the delegates from the United States and Mexico met with the representatives from Argentina, Brazil and Chile at Niagara Falls to-day, it will not be a debate over the Tampico incident nor how our flags shall be saluted. The question will be the future of the whole of Mexico. This was made evident by the wishes which President Wilson expressed to the American delegates on Monday. The solution of the problem, according to Mr. Wilson, means the elimination of Huerta and the establishment in his place of a strong provisional government, which will conduct an election fair to all factions in the southern republic and would guarantee a solution of the agrarian problem and other domestic difficulties which have bred revolution in the country for the last three years at least. Mr. Wilson wishes a comprehensive settlement that will conserve the rightful interests of the people who live in the territory now controlled by Huerta, and will take into account the economic principles for which Carranza, Villa and Zapata are fighting. And we shall stay in Vera Cruz until such a settlement is reached. There is nothing except fairness and the best interests of Mexico in the desires of the president. He stands where the great majority of the people of the country stand. We mean to see order re-established in Mexico. We shall not stop until we get it.—Boston Globe.

Next Week Will Be Festival Week.

With the approach of the dates of the May festival of the Montpelier Choral society it is apparent that next week will be consumed in this all important event. Beginning with the placing of the stage by Contractor Perkins on Saturday, each day will have some part of the week's program, which will end on Thursday of the following week. Owing to the small space on the Montpelier city hall stage a special stage has to be constructed each year at considerable expense to provide room for 250 chorus members, the orchestra and the soloists. Contractor Joseph Perkins will have charge of the work this year, as formerly, and expects to have all in readiness by Monday, next. Monday will open the week's program with a special rehearsal of the men at 7:30, followed by the whole chorus at 8 p. m., the chorus occupying the seats on the stage for the first time. The orchestra, which has been devoting much time to the musical numbers, will also be present to rehearse with the chorus. Tuesday afternoon and evening will have rehearsal of the chorus, also followed by special rehearsal on Wednesday as may be called for by Mr. Coffin. On Wednesday night will open the grand festival, followed by the matinee Thursday and the final concert Thursday evening.

The members of the Boston opera house orchestra who will be here for the festival are Roland Huxley, concert master, who has given excellent satisfaction in this work at three previous festivals; Irving J. Bancroft, second violin, the leading second violin of the orchestra; Harry F. Grover, the leading viola; C. Frank Porter, the first cellist; Charles K. North, first flute; Henry Woelber, first trombonist.
