

ABOUT THE STATE

HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST FROM DIFFERENT SECTIONS

Both legs of Ernest McCrillis were broken last Monday by a falling tree while he was chopping in the woods of West Corinth.

Henry Eldredge got caught in the machinery of his mill in East Hardwick recently, and before he was released was considerably bruised.

While digging holes for telephone poles in Wilmington, workmen dug out 48 small, brown and striped snakes, which had buried themselves for the winter.

Bert Sweet of East Hardwick lost a cow recently and upon examination she was found to have several eight-penny nails in her stomach and a wire three or four inches long had penetrated one lung.

Rear Admiral Field, who has spent many summers in Bennington, died Friday at his home in Washington, D. C. Only two weeks ago did he leave Bennington for his winter home. He was nearly 70 years old.

John C. Phelps of Pownal died suddenly a few days ago of acute indigestion after only three hours' illness. Mr. Phelps ate a quantity of fried cabbage before retiring the night before and this is thought to have caused his death.

Mrs. Julian Dimock of East Corinth has been engaged for the remainder of the year as assistant for extension work in the home economics department of the University of Vermont. Mrs. Dimock formerly was a teacher of home economics at Pratt institute and has assisted at the Massachusetts Agricultural college in extension work.

Elijah Dewey Waters, a native of Bennington, died recently at his home in Alameda, Cal., at the age of 79 years and three months. When he was 18 years old he moved with his father and mother, nine brothers and sisters to California, by way of the Isthmus of Panama, when it had to be crossed on horses and mules. He was a printer by trade.

Myler Lippincott of Pownal shot and killed a deer last Sunday and in Bennington court Tuesday pleaded guilty to the charge. He was fined $100, according to law, but because of extenuating circumstances it was remitted. The boy was 17 years old and alleged he was on the way to the woods to be ready for hunting the next day, when a buck jumped out of the bushes in front of him and the temptation was so great he forgot to wait until Monday. Neither he nor his family was financially able to pay a large fine.

Mrs. Anna J. Engrem, aged 94 years, died Friday at her home in Rutland, after being confined to her bed only two weeks. Mrs. Engrem continued keen in intellect until the end, following current events and keeping up with the latest books, besides doing much knitting. Mrs. Engrem was a native of Rupert, being born there Sept. 24, 1820. One of her ancestors was the first white child born in Bennington. Of four children born to them, two survive. Mrs. Engrem was the oldest member of the Congregational church in Rutland and only one has been a member a longer period than she. She joined in 1857.

TO FACE FEDERAL COURT.

Edward Nelson Charged With Burglarizing Postoffice.

Rutland, Nov. 30.—Edward Nelson of Albany, N. Y., was arrested at Brandon by the state authorities some time ago on the charge of burglarizing the Vermont Marble company store at Florence on November 10 and was held by the city court of Rutland, was Saturday arrested by Deputy United States Marshal Edward S. Whitaker of this city on a warrant issued by United States District Attorney Alexander Dunnett of St. Johnsbury, charging him with burglarizing the postoffice at Florence, which is located in the store.

Nelson was arraigned before Commissioner James A. Merrill of this city and was bound over to the February term of the United States district court under a bail of $2,000 in default of which he was confined at the county jail. Nelson was first caught by Deputy Sheriff W. H. Startup of Proctor because he had with him at Brandon some of the clothing and knives stolen from the store. When it was later discovered that he had a quantity of postage stamps in his possession it was decided to let the federal authorities deal with him.

Polish Woman Sees for Slander.

As result of an alleged slanderous remark made to other Polish women of the community on Oct. 29, last, papers were filed in Rutland county court Saturday in two suits for $2,500 damages each, brought by Mary Pullinen, wife of Andrew Pullinen of Proctor, against Anna Janna and Lina Lesko of the same village.

It is asserted in the declaration that up to Oct. 29 Mrs. Pullinen was looked upon with respect by her friends and neighbors, but as result of statements made by the defendants on that day, the defendant, Janna, addressing Mrs. Henry Also and the defendant, Lina, speaking to Katri Hamalainen, the plaintiff has been abused by her former associates and the entire Pullinen family have suffered mental anguish. The alleged slanderous statement attacked the morals of Mrs. Pullinen.

Vermont Business Troubles.

William A. Wood, Charles F. Warren and Anton Karl of Hamilton, N. Y.; James Dunker of Fair Haven, and James Beaman of Poultney have filed a petition in the United States court asking that the Hudson Valley Creamery company of Poultney be adjudged bankrupt. G. W. Platt of Poultney is counsel for the petitioners whose accounts against the company amount to more than $300. It is alleged that the creamery was organized as an act of bankruptcy by paying the Ontario National bank of Poultney $50,000 in preference to other creditors.

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed in the office of Clark F. Platt of Rutland by George W. Millard of Bennington. His liabilities are $322.15 and he has assets of $204.91, with $222.00 exempt. E. A. Ashland is his counsel.

BENNINGTON'S NEW POSTOFFICE

And Interesting History of Buildings Used Since 1783.

The new postoffice building in Bennington is now occupied. Postmaster Emory S. Harris having moved in this week. The building was completed Nov. 28, which date was over a month late because of failure of material to arrive on schedule time.

The Vermont delegation in Congress endeavored to secure a sufficient appropriation so that the building could be put in native granite, but was forced to concede this point in favor of marble quarried in Bennington county.

The slightly building, with its commodious lobby, private quarters for the postmaster and the assistant postmaster and a thorough modern equipment for the handling of mail, is the successor of the little frame house in which was established the first postoffice in Vermont.

In 1784, before this state was admitted to the Union, the legislature appointed Anthony Haswell of old Bennington postmaster general, with authority to establish postoffices in Bennington, Brattleboro, Rutland and Newbury.

The postmaster was a native of England and came to Boston when 13 years of age. He established the Vermont Gazette at old Bennington in 1783 and the first postoffice was located in the building in which the newspaper was published. The office was retained at the "old" village until 1847 when a change in the administration gave the inhabitants of the lower village an opportunity to carry out a long desired plan of moving the office into the center of the larger community.

The building in use at that time was loaded on to a large sled to which were hitched many pairs of oxen and hauled to the village in the valley. The building was then placed on the site of the quarters occupied by the postoffice today.

This location was not permanent, however, for residents of the upper village secured authority from Washington to move back up the hill again. The population of the main village, however, increased so much more rapidly, that the people on the hill were finally beaten in the struggle and the office became a fixture in the valley.

The present postmaster, Emory S. Harris, took possession July 18, succeeding Collins M. Graves, who had served during the Roosevelt and Taft administrations. He was born in Hoosick, N. Y., but has passed the larger portion of his life in Bennington.

When a young man he was for several years bookkeeper for a firm of railroad contractors, but in 1884 located permanently in Bennington. He was for a time engaged in the furniture business. From 1894 to 1898 he was United States marshal for Vermont. In 1898 he represented Bennington in the legislature. For 14 years he was continuously chairman of the Democratic state convention, resigning when appointed postmaster.

WINTER HOUSE FLOWERS.

Every One Should Grow a Few Plants.

The long winter days could be robbed of half their dullness if our houses were always brightened with flowering plants and filled with the scent of spring, and if, in building our houses, we planned for at least one large fireplace, where a cheerful blaze would invite us in the evenings; our Puritan ancestors had certainly one detail for which to be thankful, namely, the great central chimney, with its spacious open fireplace, a gathering corner for the entire family on cold winter evenings.

In every house there is usually one sunny window easily convertible into a miniature conservatory, and in selecting plants to fill it be content the first year with old-timers which have stood the test and proved worthy of a corner in the winter's choice collection. Among the most hardy and easiest to grow are both the Glent and Mollis variety being noted for their great mass of large, brilliant blossoms, appearing even before the foliage develops. The Mollis come in orange, pink, or yellow, while the Glent vary in all the shades of white, yellow, orange, red, pink, carmine, and lilac. It will be safer to buy these from a seedhouse importing them from Holland, and they cost about 75 cents each for strong healthy plants. Imported plants are supported, but they have balls of earth around the roots, and if the roots are dry, soak them in water, afterwards setting them in the smallest pots possible. The soil should be made of fibrous loam, sand, and peat, and when firmly potted, water and set them in a cool semi-dark place, with a temperature ranging from 35 to 45 degrees, until ready to force, which requires about six weeks from the time they are potted, the best germinations are too well known to need comment, and cuttings started in spring will flower about Christmas time; they should have a rich soil, but cannot stand too much water.

How to Get Cutting.

Bourvardia, with its late autumn and early winter flowers, also makes a charming addition to the window conservatory, and is propagated from root cuttings starting in March, if winter blossoms are desired. One way of increasing the supply of winter plants has been suggested by dividing a healthy plant into pieces small enough to go in three-inch pots. The plants are grown in the house, with a night temperature of 60 degrees, until the latter part of May; then they are planted out in the open in a rich soil, and late in August are transferred to their winter quarters again.

If a Christmas tree is especially wanted for the Christmas good cheer, an Arbutus canadensis is worth having, with its dark evergreen foliage and clusters of brilliant red berries; these may be had for 25 cents each, or may be raised from seeds, which, however, develop slowly, not blooming until the second year. The Jerusalem cherry is also a satisfactory Christmas plant, and splendid specimens may be had from seed sown in the spring, while Bernonia Blue, Indian and Lady Washington geraniums, hydrangeas (the double hortensia variety), Japanese spruce, and gladioli, all offer delightful possibilities to the flower enthusiast.

BALANCING ACCOUNTS.

On Which Side Is the Balance?

November has always been considered a good month to close accounts, so it is a good time to take an inventory of everything on the farm which possesses any commercial value, including tenant houses, all barns and other buildings (also chicken houses), crops, the wood lot, the tillable pasture land, the live-stock (a value put on each one), poultry, tools, and improvements, which should all be valued with a 10 per cent discount for depreciation, and in setting these values it is well to be very conservative, for the higher the valuation, the greater will the investment appear on the balance sheet and the larger will be the interest. Thus if the belongings are figured up as worth $10,000, the annual interest at 5 per cent would be $500, and the amount has to be made up by the owner's work and energy, before there can be any profit in farming, for the simple reason that $10,000 would enable him to retire to some pleasant boarding house (if he could possibly find one), and live on the $500 interest without doing a stroke of work. Thus, if he really wishes to know where he stands, it is a great mistake to fool himself on the inventory.

The inventory finished all the total sales and purchases, keeping the household expenses separate, except where the house is indebted to the farm for eggs, milk, etc., and the difference will show the cash gain or loss, providing the cash book has been properly kept up. The bills receivable and payable, of course, tell their own tale, and all these placed on the sides of the sheet where they belong, will show how matters stand. Improvements, in the way of extensive repairs, or clearing fields, or additions to buildings, all go to show increased valuation, but one should be able to show added income as the result of the improvements. The busy man cannot be expected to keep an elaborate set of books, but for his peace of mind at least a record should be kept of all his transactions, so that he may know whether his efforts are bringing in returns sufficient to warrant their continuance.

There are many things a family may get from a farm besides mere dollars and cents, but a certain income they must have, and if country life appeals to them they can well afford to overlook the question of interest on capital, and be content to think of this interest as
