importance throughout the state and, moreover, he has been a member of both the House and the Senate, and is acquainted with the situations peculiar to Vermont's legislative body. He is sufficiently in touch with sentiment about the state, too, to know that it is the desire of the people of the commonwealth to have the business of the session expedited as much as possible without sacrifice of due scrutiny of the measures coming before the House.

CURRENT COMMENT

Skilled Supervision of Highway Work.

The American Highway association and the National Civil Service reform league in co-operation have launched a movement for skilled supervision of road work throughout the United States. As everybody's money is spent in building roads, and as the results to be achieved for a given sum vary enormously according to the skill of the engineers in charge, the movement is one which ought to interest the public very deeply.

The comparatively small state of Vermont, for instance, is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars annually for highway improvement. This money has, especially in recent years, been expended with economy and great results are seen. In other states, notably Massachusetts and New York, millions of dollars have been wasted by building expensive highways that have not stood the wear or that cost impossible sums for maintenance. Any state may save money by having skilled supervision. It is experimentation that costs.

Building a stone or cement road is not child's play, but an exceedingly intricate and difficult task. To lay a road out properly, with the right grades, efficient drainage, and in the most economical manner, is an engineering task of the most kind. Further engineering skill of high caliber is required in determining the most suitable structure for the road, and in supervising its construction.

Hugo Deubner's Necktie Broke With His Weight.

Bennington, Jan. 1.—Hugo Deubner, a young German who has been living with relatives on County street, was yesterday taken to the asylum at Brattleboro by Overseer George R. Mathers and Dr. J. D. Lane, having been pronounced insane.

Deubner, who has been ill for some time, attempted to commit suicide by fastening one end of a necktie about his neck and the other to a bedpost in his room.

CRIPPLED IN CIVIL WAR.

Ephraim Haskell of Brattleboro Used Crutch Over 30 Years.

Brattleboro, Jan. 7.—Ephraim Haskell, a member of Stannard's famous Vermont brigade, who had to use crutches for over 30 years as a result of a wound which he received in the battle of Gettysburg, died at his home here yesterday evening.

He was born in Wilmington, Jan. 27, 1827, and was a son of Ephraim and Salina (Stetson) Haskell. While a young man he went to New York and entered business with a partner in the manufacture of spades and shovels, but the partnership proved disastrous and the concern failed.

He returned to his native town and enlisted on Sept. 3, 1862, with company F, 16th Vermont volunteers, the regiment commanded by Col. Wheelock G. Veazy. Mr. Haskell was one of the 200 men sent out on the picket line and was wounded by the bursting of a shell on the last day of the battle of Gettysburg.

He married Miss Georgiana A. Phelps of Guilford in March, 1866, who survives him, he also leaves two brothers, Newland M. Haskell of Wilmington and Ilram Haskell of Brattleboro. He was a member of Sedgwick post, G. A. R., of this town and of the Methodist church of Wilmington.

URNS DOWN SUFFRAGISTS.

President Wilson Tells Them For Sixth Time He Will Do Nothing.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—President Wilson declined yesterday for the sixth time since he entered the White House to support a federal constitutional amendment for woman suffrage. When a delegation of Democratic women, who declared they had helped to elect him, presented the sixth formal petition, the president repeated his previous declaration that he considered suffrage a state issue.

Mrs. George E. Armes, president of the District of Columbia branch of the Wilson and Marshall league, Miss Alberta Hill of New York and Dr. Frances McGaskin, spokesmen for the delegation which called at the White House, reminded the president that the House would vote on the suffrage amendment Jan. 12, and asked that he lend his moral support to the movement.

"I am most unaffectedly complimented by this visit that you have paid me," the president told the women. "I have been called on several occasions to say what my position is on the very important matter that you are so deeply interested in. I want to say that nobody can look on the fight you are making without great admiration, and I certainly am one of those who admire the tenacity and the skill and the address with which you try to promote the matter that you are interested in.

"But I, ladies, am tied to a conviction which I have had all my life that changes of this sort ought to be brought about by state action. If it were not a matter of female suffrage, if it were a matter of any other thing connected with suffrage, I would hold the same opinion. It is a long standing and deeply matured conviction on my part, and, therefore, I would be without excuse to my own constitutional principles if I lent my support to this very important movement for an amendment to the constitution of the United States.

"Frankly I do not think that this is the wise or the permanent way to build, I know that you perhaps unanimously disagree with me, but you will not think the less of me for being perfectly frank in the avowal of my own conviction on that subject, and certainly that avowed represents no attitude of antagonism, but merely an attitude of confidence.

"I want to say again how much complimented I am by your call and also by the confidence that you have so generously expressed in me. I hope that in some respects I may live to justify that confidence.

Only one child in a hundred can keep money in their possession and not let it slip through their fingers. You now have an opportunity of teaching your children the habit of thrift. You know a boy's nickels or dimes fairly burn holes in his pockets if he cannot get to a store to spend them. What is to become of this little fellow if he keeps up the pace he is going now? The THRIFT CLUB will help all of the children in our city to establish the habit of thrift. Everyone who joins our THRIFT CLUB will form the habit by making their weekly trip to the bank. Set the example by joining yourselves.
