WATERBURY

302 Swine and 190 Head of Cattle Kept at State Hospital.

The state piggery on the Duxbury farm, owned by the state, continues to be a very interesting place, as well as a practical one in supplying the patients at the Vermont state hospital with food. At present there are 150 pigs from four to nine weeks of age and 143 hogs, making a total of 302, the largest number yet kept. These are White Chester, which are thought to mature more quickly and are nicely housed in this up-to-date building, which contains 24 pens, each 10x10 feet. Of course, at this time of year the hogs are in the pasture. Only a small amount of grain per head is fed these creatures, as they are raised largely on the refuse from the institution. This is cooked or heated in a cookroom 24 feet square. In this way the pork is produced with very little expense. One hundred and forty have been butchered within a year, there being now an average of three a week. The piggery is nicely kept, a large amount of water being used in washing the same and all pains possible is taken by Walter Irish, under direction of the state farmer, who cares for them that everything may be done to keep the creatures well. The loss in numbers is very small compared with the numbers kept. The slaughterhouse is near the piggery, all butchery being done by Mr. Irish. Fifty head of beef have also been slaughtered here the past year for use in the institution. These were not all raised, however, on the farms. At the present the state owns here 190 head of cattle, half of these being young cattle. The problem of supplying meat for the people in this institution seems nicely managed. With this number of cattle and 302 swine, there does not seem to be any danger of a meat famine.

Miss Julia Shipman came home last week from her school work in East Milton, Mass., and went to-day to the summer school at Middlebury college.

Fred Ravelin has returned from a few days in Barre and Burlington.

This promises to be the best season ever in these camps. During the past week there has been a big demand for cottages and many have been rented and occupied. Four nice families from Montreal rented cottages in the Platt's camp last season and all are back except one and another Montreal party has taken the vacant cottage. Mrs. C. L. Bugbee has rented her cottage, Lake View, to H. A. Layton and family of Montreal, and L. P. Thayer has rented his Edgewood cottage to Mr. Coulin and family of Montreal. He is one of the leading members of the bar in that city. It seems from this, that Montreal, as well as Barre people, have discovered that this is a delightful spot in which to spend a summer vacation.

H. S. Johnson and family of Barre are occupying the R. A. Hoar cottage, Rockridge, for an outing.

There were several auto parties in camp for dinner Sunday, one or more being from Barre.

The teachers' training class from the Highgate high school are having a delightful time at Squirrel Inn with their instructor, Mr. J. S. Dunton, acting as chaperone.

M. A. Smith, a Norwich university graduate, of Ardmore, Okla., is spending his third season with his family in the Blanchard camp, occupying the Blanchard cottage.

The electric lights make a great addition to the attractiveness of this resort. All of Platt's cottages, most of those in Camp Handolph, all on the street to the point, the hotels and boardinghouses have them. Then there are street lights from the postoffice to Platt's and other camps on the lake shore.

WAITSFIELD

Waitsfield Creamery Co. Reports Satisfactory Financial Condition.

The directors of the Waitsfield Creamery Co. held a meeting Saturday evening. The manager, G. W. Wallis, reported the financial condition very satisfactory. Looking toward the dissolution and final wind-up of its affairs the directors voted a first dividend of $1.25 on each dollar of the par value of stock issued, to be paid July 1, 1915. It is expected that a second and final dividend of about 15 cents on the dollar will be declared, probably about Jan. 1, 1915.

Some fishermen living in the western part of the town made a good haul of suckers near Rood pond last week, the catch numbering 33 and weighing 60 pounds. Postscript. This item is true.

Mrs. R. W. Wilson of Manchester, N. H., called on Mrs. Harley T. Martin last week, while passing through the town on an auto trip. Mrs. Wilson was in town a part of the summer several years ago as the guest of Mrs. Martin.

The selectmen will meet at the office of the town clerk on Friday next, July 2, at 1 o'clock p. m., to pay bills against the town.

Superintendent and Mrs. Leonard D. Smith went to the home of Mrs. Smith's parents in Morrisville the 26th having as a passenger, Robert B. Parker, a former teacher in the grammar school, who had been in town for a few days with friends.

A very thinly attended meeting of the fire district, held in the town hall on the evening of the 25th, voted to tax ten cents on a dollar of the grand list, to pay the outstanding bills of the district.

Dr. George E. May, formerly of Post Mills, but for many years a practicing physician at Newton Center, near Boston, Mass., was in town last week, while on his way to Montpelier with a party of friends, and made a brief call on G. E. Wilber, who was a classmate at the normal school at Randolph in 1882. The two had not met for 30 years.

Some slight changes in the timetable that took effect Monday, June 27, are here noted. The time of arrival of all the trains is the same. The morning train leaves five minutes earlier, at 7:30 instead of 7:35. The next train leaves five minutes later, at 11:55 a. m., instead of 12:00. The night train that has left at 5:20 for several months, is now to leave ten minutes earlier, at 5:10 instead of 5:20.

Archie R. Cram, who has been teaching the past year in the Springfield union district, of which H. D. Casey, formerly of this town, is superintendent, has finished his engagement there and is at the home of his father, Clinton W. Cram.

Dr. J. P. Gifford of Randolph was in town the 27th with an auto party and called at George T. Colby's for a short time. Celia Gifford remained there for a visit to her sister, Mrs. Fanny Wilber.

There will be a second moving picture show in grange hall on Friday evening, July 2, under the auspices of the band. Concert in front of the hall at 7:30. Entertainment begins at 8 sharp.—Adv.

CARE OF THE BABY.

Weaning and Supplementary Feeding Should Be Gradual.

Weaning is the process by which breast feeding is stopped and another food given in its place. It should be done gradually. At first give one bottle instead of one of the breast feedings; after a week or two add another bottle, and then continue adding them until bottle feedings are entirely substituted for the breast.

Never hurry the weaning. Give the baby time to get used to the new food. When it is agreeing with his digestion, there is no belching of gas or spitting up of milk, and the bowel movements are soft, yellow and smooth. If any disturbance appears, stop the bottle until it is over, giving only the breast milk.

A baby should never be weaned in the heat of summer, if it is possible to avoid it. He is much more likely to be made sick by a strange food when the weather is hot than at other times of the year. Even if the baby has to be fed partly on the bottle the mother should nurse him often enough (three or four times a day) to keep the breast milk from drying up; if the baby should be attacked by diarrhea, the mother's milk may be the means of saving his life.

Some mothers are able to nurse their babies all year, but many find that their milk begins to fail by the time the baby is six or eight months old, so that some additional food will be required. Practically all babies should be entirely weaned from the breast by the time they are a year old, unless that brings the weaning in hot weather.

Babies born in the late summer or early fall should be nursed through the following summer if the breast milk is sufficient in quantity, in order to carry them past the danger period in July and August. When breast milk becomes scanty, it does not change in quality. By the addition of a bottle or two, therefore, the deficient quantity can be made up.

It is sometimes quite difficult to wean a baby and great patience is required on the part of the mother, but if the baby has been taught at an early age to take his drinking water from a bottle or from a cup, weaning will be easier. If the baby is nursed until he is 10 months old or longer, he should be weaned directly to a cup. Earlier it will probably be easier to use a nursing bottle and nipple; but the bottle should not be used beyond the end of the first year, save for the bed-time feeding.

Remember when feeding from a cup, that the milk must be taken very slowly, just as slowly as when feeding from a bottle. It is better to feed from a small spoon than to teach the baby to drink from a cup.

The second summer has gained the reputation of being the most critical period of a baby's life, largely because mothers are apt to feed the baby many different things after he is weaned. Very much of the food that is given these older babies is as unfit for them as artificial food is at birth.

These improper foods cause troublesome, dangerous and unnecessary illnesses which are aggravated by the heat. Careful feeding would prevent most of them.

Later articles in this series will deal with the feeding of babies from nine to 12 months, and during the second year. When a breast-fed baby cries a good deal from hunger and does not gain in weight, the mother is apt to feel that her milk does not agree with him, and so weans him, often because of the well-meaning advice of some neighbor. This is a mistake. The trouble is not with the quality of her milk, but with the quantity.

Instead of weaning the baby she should increase her own diet by drinking plenty of milk, eating eggs, meat, bread and fresh vegetables and by taking moderate exercise in the open air, regular periods of rest and by avoiding worry and excitement. This will usually increase the milk supply sufficiently; if it does not do so, the baby must be given some additional food.

This additional food, or "supplementary" feeding, as has been said, is given when it is necessary to supplement the mother's milk with one or more bottle feedings, or for the purpose of weaning the baby. Cows' milk is the only supplementary food to use. It should be the best and cleanest milk that it is possible to get, mixed with water and sugar as described in the preceding article. A very much weaker solution than that normally required for a baby of the given age should be tried at first, increasing the strength slightly day by day if the baby shows no signs of indigestion, until the full strength food is reached.

To begin with, give the baby one bottle feeding in place of one breast feeding. If he shows a gain in weight, this may be enough. If after a week there is no gain, two bottles may be given each day. The mother should meanwhile be doing all she can by rest and increased food to build up the breast milk, but if with all these measures the baby still fails to gain or gives evidence of illness, the advice of a good doctor must be sought and followed. Do not delay in securing this advice until the baby is seriously ill.

The preceding article gave directions for the proper amount of milk mixture for babies of given ages. If the mother desires fuller information she may write to the children's bureau of the U. S. department of labor, at Washington, D. C., for a bulletin called "Infant Care," which gives simple directions for preparing the baby's feedings and shows what amount will suit the baby of a given age. This book is sent free to everyone who asks for it. A postcard request will do. The name and the address of the applicant should be written very plainly.

Weaning from the bottle should begin by the end of the first year, and after the baby is 14 months old he should have the bottle only when he goes to bed at night. Teach him to drink from a cup and eat from a spoon.

To wean a baby from the bottle, begin by giving him a little of his food from a spoon, gradually increasing the amount at each feeding until all of his food is taken in this way.

Professor Charles H. Richmond, Ph. D., of Syracuse university will lecture in Union church, East Calais, at 7:30 Wednesday evening, June 30, on "The Geological History of Calais." ## GOOD TREATMENT FOR OILY SCALPS

Men and women whose hair and scalp are excessively oily suffer more in the warmer months than at any other time. The summer's dust and dirt mingle with dandruff, cling to the oily hair and scalp, clog the scalp pores, stifle the hair roots, and make proper cleansing almost impossible.

Parisian Sage is an ideal treatment for this trouble. Wash the hair not oftener than once a week, but use Parisian Sage twice daily, pouring a little into the parted hair and rubbing briskly right into the scalp with the finger tips. It drives out dandruff, dissolves the excess oil, and stimulates the scalp into healthy, normal action. Sold by the Red Cross Pharmacy and leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.
