The snowfall gives the advantage to the deer hunter.

But the snow means a decreased possibility of fire in the woods.

"England expects every man to do his duty" seems to be a worn-out slogan.

About the most remarkable transformation was the Yale football "come back."

Winston Churchill has a chance to fight down some of the harsh things said of him in the British Isles.

The achievements of Booker T. Washington under great handicaps ought to prove an inspiration to the negro race.

The stream of motor arrivals still continues to come to Barre though it is mid-November. There is a reason besides the weather, that's certain.

If Serbia had an institution like Thanksgiving, the celebration would go by default the present year, just about as it would have gone in Belgium last year.

The more effective work made possible by the acquisition of fire fighting equipment must reveal to Williamstown people the advantage of preparedness against fire and must justify the wisdom of recent action.

The United States has proven itself a failure as custodian of interned belligerents. It is a shameful failure, too, caused largely by the trustful attitude adopted by the government, coupled with unusual disregard of a solemn obligation by men who were supposed to be honorable.

When a large machinework of the Bethlehem Steel company was burned, four distinct fires were burning in the great structure. Yet it was said that the main fire was caused by the explosion of an electric light lamp as it fell into some oil, or possibly it was a case of crossed wires. If we believe the story, we are capable of believing anything.

Canada is coming out of its shell to the extent of granting free privilege of driving a motor vehicle across the line for a stay of 10 days in Canada, providing the customs officials are satisfied of the driver's "good faith." Canada has been a heavy loser through more or less rigid enforcement of a policy which required the presentation of a bond by prospective visitors who drive motor vehicles.

The world (barring perhaps some sections) has reason to feel gratified that a terrible sea disaster was averted by the energy of the men who extinguished the fire on the passenger-carrying steamship Rochambeau of the French line. The steamship was carrying more than six hundred persons, of whom more than four hundred were passengers, mostly neutrals as far as actual participation in the war is concerned. At the same time the ship was carrying cartridges for small guns, for delivery to the French government. Of course, there is no proof as yet that the outbreak of the fire in the reserve hold of the vessel was due to machinations of someone who wished to prevent the delivery of those cases of cartridges; but there is naturally a strong suspicion that the fire was caused by the explosion of some instrument placed there with nefarious design. The frustrating of the plot does not reduce Adjusting Values in Vermont.

It costs six months to steal a Ford in Burlington. Gradually we are getting ourselves adjusted to values, it seems.

A Very Good at a Very Easy-Going County.

At this writing there are only five printers in employment at the county jail. Those of them will leave after the expiration of the full term of court, leaving only two, who are serving short term sentences. New-hire men in Burlington's Reformer. the magnitude of the crime but it does bring a tremendous sense of relief. Manifestly, too, it increases the demand that greater surveillance of loading liners be exercised, right to the end of the war.

PROTECTION OF PEOPLE AT HOME.

The Waterville (Me.) Sentinel raises a very important point as regards a state which makes a practice of entertaining a large number of summer visitors. The point is whether the summer visitors are to come first, to have the preference over the permanent residents. The issue came to a head because of a certain grade crossing accident in which an automobile was struck by a train and several young people in the motor vehicle were killed. At the inquiry it developed that the engineers had not blown their whistles at the crossing in question because the town had entered the plea that the blowing of locomotive whistles annoyed the summer residents of that vicinity. Because of the failure of the engineer of this train to sound the usual crossing warning, the automobile was struck and some permanent residents, so-called, were sacrificed. The contemporary further calls attention to the position of two Portland newspapers which refused to discuss a typhoid fever epidemic, alleged to have been due to milk supply, on account of the fear that such a discussion would have a tendency to scare away the temporary sojourners during the months of last summer. The Sentinel asks the very pertinent question: "Does it pay to endanger their lives (Maine permanent residents) because of a fear that if they are protected visitors may be annoyed or frightened?"

The answer, manifestly, is that it does not. Events have proven it. A state surrenders its birthright for a mess of pottage when it begins to make exceptions in favor of those people of other states who may come for merely temporary stay, people who are here to-day and who may be gone to-morrow. A state would do well to stick to its rules and its customs and ask the newcomers to adapt themselves accordingly while enjoying the benefits of the location.

MONTEPELIER

Montpelier High Is Negotiating with St. Albans High for Football Game.

Negotiations for a football game between St. Albans and Montpelier high schools to be held on a neutral field for the school championship of the northern part of the state will be started to-day or to-morrow, now that St. Albans has disposed of the only other contender, Spaulding high of Barre Saturday by administering a 27 to 0 defeat to the Barre eleven. Burlington has been suggested as a possible place for the contest and next Saturday may be the date selected if St. Albans is agreeable.

Cement work on the new bridge under course of construction on State street will be started to-morrow. 11 girders having been laid across the river and it is probable that by the middle of next week the bridge may be used by pedestrians. If the weather had been favorable to-day the cement work would have been commenced.

Miss Euna Nelson of East Montpelier and James W. Ford of Manchester, N. H., were united in marriage at 8 o'clock this morning at Montpelier and the couple left on the morning train for a wedding journey to Boston. The wedding was celebrated on the 21st birthday anniversary of the bride. Mrs. Ford attended Montpelier high school, being in the class of 1912. They will reside at 112 Pearl street, Manchester, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Heaphy left Sunday noon for Boston, where Mr. Heaphy will attend a meeting to-morrow of the New England Hotel association and before returning to this city. Mr. and Mrs. Heaphy will visit relatives in Brattleboro.

E. D. Washington of Tuskegee, Ala., son of Booker T. Washington, who died suddenly Sunday morning, was in this city Friday and Saturday, leaving on an early morning train yesterday for New York City. Mr. Washington was in this city in the interests of the Tuskegee institution, arranging for a series of lectures.

Gov. Charles W. Gates arrived on the morning train from Franklin and was in the executive chamber at the State House this forenoon.

Justice and Mrs. John H. Watson left this morning for Rutland, where a special term of supreme court opens to-morrow morning.

Harry Moulton and George Pitkin of this city and Harold Jackson of Boston returned to-day from Malletts Bay on Lake Champlain, where they passed several days duck hunting.

Commissioner of Education Mason S. Stone left Saturday for Nashville, Tenn., to attend a conference this week of the representatives of different states in the country. The conference was called by the federal government and the principal purpose is to study the problem of instruction in the rural schools. Commissioner Stone will be a speaker at the conference.

Mrs. Thomas Gisborne and Miss Mabel Gisborne returned Sunday evening from a visit in Randolph with relatives.

Middlebury undergraduates, who were in the city Saturday to attend the football game at Interity park between their college eleven and Norwich university's team, were considerably perturbed over what they considered the unfairness of Norwich in playing a former Holy Cross player, Malen, at right end. When the line-up was given out Marsh was listed for the right end position and he took the field with his team. Just before commencement, however, he was called to the sidelines and a player named Hooker was substituted. He played for a few minutes when Bower, Middlebury's quarterback, protested that the man was Malen of Holy Cross and was, therefore, not eligible. His protest was sustained and Marsh returned to the game. Bower's home is in Worcester, Mass., and he quickly recognized the Norwich end as a Holy Cross player.

INDIA HAS FINE PROSPECTS.

Is Making Progress in Many Lines, Reported Two Missionaries.

Many people who were unable to attend the annual meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions at Burlington last week took advantage of an opportunity to hear two of the speakers of that assembly, Rev. and Mrs. William Hazen, at the Congregational church last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Hazen have been working as missionaries in Sholapur, India, for the greater part of 15 years and have made a careful study of the native life and religious needs. Mr. Hazen, who spoke first, dwelt chiefly on the difference between the India of to-day and the India found by the first American missionaries, who went there from Salem, Mass., over 100 years ago. India, he said, has changed politically, socially and commercially, as well as religiously, and these changes, though started and in part directed by foreign missionaries with the aid of official and unofficial British residents, are being wrought by the people themselves, who, through education, are coming to see the value of modern ideas. The political changes are being brought about by evolution rather than revolution, and, encouraged by Great Britain, which has control of the country, India is fast becoming a great nation, capable of governing itself and one which, in the opinion of the speaker, will take an important part in the affairs of the world. The whole attitude of the Indian people toward British rule has changed during the last seven years, as is shown by the general enthusiasm in the British cause and the freely offered aid at the outbreak of the present war. Socially, the three great evils, child marriage, the worship of idols and the caste system, are slowly but surely breaking down under the influence of the younger and better educated generation and are making way for a feeling of national patriotism. Commercially, the same process of evolution is taking place, for India is gradually changing from a purely agricultural country to a manufacturing nation. The country is also changing its religious ideas, and the change is coming more and more to be managed by the natives. The foreign missionaries now occupy their time in leading, directing and training bands of faithful followers among the natives. To aid this work is one reason for the establishment of mission schools. Institutions of this kind are necessary for their existence. About one-tenth of the people working for the cause of Christianity there to-day are foreign missionaries; the other nine-tenths are the younger descendants of the first converts, made a century ago. Mr. Hazen believes that the crippling of the British missionary societies by the war will, in the next few years, give America a greater opportunity for work there than ever; and he made a strong plea for American men and women to carry on the work, as well as for American money to finance it. At the close of Mr. Hazen's address, Mrs. Hazen joined her husband in the plea for greater interest in foreign missions. In regard to the respective value of foreign and home missionary work Mrs. Hazen said: "The light that shines the farthest shines the brightest at the source." She went on to tell of the horrors of the caste system and the early marriage rule and lamented the too common idea that the Hindu religion is good enough for the people that practice it. She stated that in India there are "more gods than people," and gave as the reason for the great strength of the
