A touch of winter makes all the world shiver.

The Balkan situation is "all Greek" to the entente allies, just as some problems are to some school boys.

The esteemed Springfield (Mass.) Republican devotes about three columns a day to the deer slaughter in its state, thus dignifying a casual happening into a great event day after day.

A contemporary speaks of a hunter "bagging" a deer. Judging by the miniature deerlets being shot in some places, the contemporary's selection of a word is quite apt, for some of the carcasses could almost be carried in a hunter's game bag.

The influence of the "movies" on the legitimate drama has become so powerful that an actor in a Boston playhouse had to stand as a target while a fellow-actor hurled electric light globes at him, one of the missiles severing an artery and nearly bleeding the human target to death. We can imagine such a performance in the "movies" but scarcely in the real drama, although we admit there was deep-dyed drama in the globe-hurling scene.

The town of Somerset in Windham county has 27 population normally, but a census at the present time would swell the size of the town tremendously, as the 15,686 acres embraced in the town lines are overrun by deer hunters. We trust that F. V. Johnson of that town is attending strictly to business, for if he isn't the offices of the town clerk, treasurer, selectman, road commissioner, school director, overseer of the poor, town representative and justice of the peace among others would thus be temporarily vacant. And how could the town do business?

It was good advice which Judge Willard W. Miles gave to a convicted burglar in Chittenden county court, advice to live like a man instead of like a criminal, and yet Judge Miles did not see fit to mix up maudlin sentimentality with justice and he promptly sentenced the fellow to a term in the state prison at Windsor. Inasmuch as the fellow had been caught breaking into a store in Burlington and inasmuch, too, as he drew a loaded revolver when about to be arrested, the judge did just the right thing; he gave the fellow something to think about and he then gave him five months in which to think about it. If the convicted man is not too much steeped in crime, he may come out of the state prison determined to live down his past and to be a man, as Judge Miles urged him to be. He ought to know by this time that the career of a criminal does not pay in the long run.

Charles Evans Hughes, justice of the United States supreme court, does not desire to be a candidate for president of the United States on the Republican ticket or any other ticket. He wishes to be a justice of the supreme court, and for several reasons, one of which is that he has a life hold on the job and because the scramble for the presidency is a very, very uncertain thing. Another reason is that his present work is considered by him to be congenial, considerably more congenial than the task of administration. Those two are the main reasons why an ex team could not drag Charles Evans Hughes out of his justice's chair and into the running for the presidency; but doubtless there are other good reasons why the Republican party might as well make up its mind that Hughes is a dead letter as far as a presidential candidacy is concerned. The Republican party is wasting time, it seems to us, by considering Hughes as a presidential candidate.

THE SINKING OF A HOSPITAL SHIP. Lacking the shock of deliberate blood-letting through attack, the destruction by mine of the British hospital ship Anglia and 85 wounded soldiers en route to England is nevertheless one of the most harrowing features of a war which has about passed through the entire gamut of terrible happenings. There was a ship laden with men who had fought bravely in the trenches of the British and who had received wounds which incapacitated them from service forever or for the time-being. They were going home, that is, to England, to receive the best of treatment and to recuperate from their injuries. Some were legless, some armless, others deprived of sight, still more sick unto death with the multifarious ailments incident to a soldier's life—and all of them entirely helpless or practically so. Then to these hundreds of men, already weakened by the sight of blood and already oppressed by their full share of the sense of personal danger, came a new horror, a new struggle for the defense of their lives. Held captive, as it were, by their infirmities, they could only wait for death unless perchance some rescue should come to them in their extremity. It must have been a terrible time of agony for them. Would that they might have been spared the second approach of death! However, it furnishes lightening of the sense of depression, which the world feels to-day, to know that at many of the brave men did not wait in vain for that rescue and were rescued from the sinking ship.

TALK OF THE TOWN

Dennison Densmore of 4 Elm street, who was stricken with typhoid fever several weeks ago, was able to be down town yesterday for the first time since his illness.

George T. Cutler and "Bud" Robbins, who have been passing a few days in the telephone camp, so called, in Perkinsville, were visitors in the city to-day while on their way home to Burlington.

There are a number of signs indicating that the football season is at an end in Barre, although until yesterday the gridiron authorities at Goddard seminary had not ceased to hope that their eleven would be seen in action again this year. After Spaulding went down to defeat before St. Albans high school Saturday, Manager William Quinn of the seminary team sent a challenge to the Railroad city schoolboys. The answer he got to the challenge was conclusive to convince him that St. Albans is satisfied with its championship claim and that any and all overtures for games at this time would be considered belated. Now plans for a game between Goddard and former Spaulding and Montpelier high players, captained by John Bartlett of the capital, have collapsed. Fans at large are deprived of the opportunity for testing whether a team of football stars can be a star football team, and strictly Goddard fans have lost their last chance to see the green and white in action again. Spaulding's season ended Saturday and the scrimmage hall has been put away until 1916.

His condition is much improved, although he does not intend to resume work until next week.

Rev. J. R. Gates of Northfield, a religious worker for many years in Africa, about to return to that field of labor in December, is to speak at the Hedding church this evening at 7:30. His subject will be "Africa," the country he knows so much about, and its people, their customs, habits, their social, moral and religious life. Rev. J. R. Gates is a Barre boy, well known in this city and many of his friends will want to hear him. The meeting will be under the auspices of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society.

TALKED AGAINST MORMONISM.

Prof. O. F. Davis Gave Interesting Talk at Hedding Church.

A large audience gathered last evening at the Hedding church to listen to the lecture-recital of two scenes from the play, "Polygamy," given by Prof. O. F. Davis of Wisconsin. The meeting was under the auspices of the Woman's Home Missionary society and it was presided over by Mrs. L. D. Martin, the president of that society. Miss Ella Hoyt rendered a number of excellent musical selections on the pipe organ. Miss Agnes Rue sang a fitting solo. Miss Gilman offered prayer and then the president of the society introduced Professor Davis, who made a few remarks before giving his recital. The speaker said that Mormonism was a menace to the United States in that its doctrines and practices were out of harmony with constitutional law and although supposed to abide by the law since the manifesto in 1890, yet facts prove that in many instances this law is not faithfully kept by many of the Mormon people. He cited three ways in which the Mormons have indicted themselves: (1) Treason against the United States government; (2) coalition of church and state; (3) the new polygamy. Professor Davis then gave a most excellent recital from two brief scenes taken from the play "Polygamy." He held the close attention of his audience and the reading brought out the message that the authors of the play intended to convey to the American people.

At the close of the reading an opportunity was given for anyone in the audience to ask questions. Some questions and objections were raised, the objections by a Mormon missionary now located in Barre, but Professor Davis, because of his long study of the matter, was able to present arguments to support every statement that he had put forth and he did so with such facts and literature at his command that there was no doubt left in the minds of most of his audience as to the truth of his statements in his remarks or in his lecture-recital. At the close of the meeting a rising vote of thanks was heartily given to Professor Davis.

Many useful articles, such as men's and boys' overcoats and shoes, ladies' clothes of all kinds, furs and coats. A good trunk will be for sale, also a commode and many other useful articles. The household economics department of the Barre Woman's club has secured Mrs. Julian Dimock of East Corinth for Monday afternoon, Nov. 22. Those who heard Mrs. Dimock last fall will need no further introduction, but those who did not may be interested to know that Mrs. Dimock was formerly a teacher in Simmons college and is now engaged in agricultural extension work by the state. Club members please notice that the meeting is on Monday afternoon, Nov. 22, at 2:30 o'clock.

At a largely attended meeting of Harmon review, No. 1, W. B. A. O. T. M., last evening in K. of P. hall, a reception was held in honor of Mrs. Theresa Lebourveau, who leaves Saturday to reside in New Jersey. She was presented a handsome toilet set as a token of appreciation for her long and faithful services as an officer and member of the review. A poem was read, which was written for the occasion by Mrs. Jessie Pierce. After the meeting, a banquet was served by the November circle, Mrs. Bessie Williams acting as chairman.

Cold Weather May Hold Up Construction of State-Street Bridge.

Efforts to finish the construction of the steel and cement bridge on State street may be abandoned this week until next spring, as it is feared that the weather is too frigid to allow the cement to set properly. Such action was considered necessary by the city council at a special meeting held last evening and the street committee received authority to confer with Contractor James E. Cashman and inform him of their opinion and to allow him to present his view of the matter. A plan considered feasible by the council last evening would make necessary the finishing of the stretching of the girders across the river from the two banks and then proceed to lay planks across the girders, thus allowing teams, automobiles, pedestrians and the electric cars to travel over the span. The cement work, the council has been advised by the engineers, makes very little difference in the strength of the bridge, the girders playing the big part. A cement sidewalk has already been laid over the bridge on the side next to the Rialto block and the rest of the bridge could be boarded easily and the expense would probably not be excessive. Engineer Reed last evening told the council the lowest rate of temperature in which it is possible to lay cement without prospects of its freezing and from the explanation, the council deemed it wise to stop the cement work until warmer weather. Whether or not the contractor will agree to the proposition is not known, but the council did not think it probable that he would object, inasmuch as he is under bonds to erect a satisfactory structure. The meeting was held primarily to allow citizens to register complaints about their sidewalk assessments, but few appeared to take advantage of the opportunity offered.

A deed has been filed at the city clerk's office transferring a small house on the Worcester branch road from Sylvester O. Alden to Alva S. Alden, for a consideration of $600.

Miss Annie Crosier, superintendent of Heaton hospital, has returned from a six weeks' vacation in Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts. She also attended the American Medical Congress of Surgeons in Boston.

George Rivers went last evening to Burlington to attend the funeral this morning of Mrs. Elbia Fulton.

The final meeting before Referee W. N. Theriault in the bankrupt estate of L. A. Flint of Montpelier has been set for Nov. 29 and the final dividend will be declared at that time.

Eugene Chambers, a farm hand employed by J. N. Perrin of Berlin, suffered the fracture of his collarbone early yesterday morning while assisting in the moving of farm equipment. A threshing separator passed over his body, barely missing his head, he having been knocked down by the pair of horses hitched to the separator. The horses were restless and the young man went to hold them by the bits, when they jumped forward. Aside from the broken collarbone it is feared internal injuries will develop, although there were no indications yesterday. His mother was called from Moretown to care for her son.
