The Rookie Says:

10 Cents

I am a training camp rookie. Some of us are from the city, some from the country.

But we are all alike in two things.

We all want to do our bit for Uncle Sam, and we are unanimous that "Helmar" Turkish Cigarettes are good enough for a General.

Three cheers for "Helmar".

The mildest tobacco for cigarettes is Turkish. The best tobacco for cigarettes is Turkish.

Don't pay ten cents for anybody's cigarette until you have tried "Helmar," a fascinating, elevating, gentleman's smoke.

PROGRESSIVES BADLY SPLIT

National Conference Considers Three Programs

INDORSEMENT IS UNLIKELY

The Bull Moose Ticket, or Nothing, Declares Parker

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 4.—The three-way split that divides the remaining Progressive party leaders was emphasized yesterday with the arrival of representative Progressives from many states for the national conference at the Claypool hotel.

The three programs represented by the delegates were: To let the national ticket go by default and not hold another national convention this year, but to call a party conference to be held soon after the election and start an aggressive four-year fight for 1920.

To indorse the candidacy of President Wilson.

To order a national convention and begin the best fight possible against both old parties.

These three possibilities appeared to have strength in the order given with the controlling element against a national ticket and against an indorsement of Wilson.

"There are only two possibilities for this conference to decide: Shall we have a national ticket or shall we not?" said John M. Parker, the convention nominee for vice president. There is no possibility that we will indorse Wilson or Hughes."

The "Ty Cobb of Louisiana" said he believed there would not be a national ticket because the party had no suitable man to head it. He added that he would refuse the nomination for president if it was offered to him. He then launched into a vigorous bit of advice for President Wilson, saying: "If Wilson sees his opportunity he will get a double barreled gun and go after Kitchin and Hoke Smith, who are opposing the child labor bill," he said. "He should tell these two leaders that they aren't fit to be in Congress. It is my shame that southerners are the only ones opposing this legislation."

A Tip for the Farmers.

The threatened failure of the New England hay crop, due to the excessive moisture of a backward season, and the difficulty, not to say impossibility, of obtaining harvesters as a result of labor shortage, brings home to the farmers of this section a lesson which the agricultural authorities long have been trying to teach. The time has now come for the farmers of these states to increase their acreage of alfalfa. Some Massachusetts men who are growing this western forage plant have already harvested two crops, with a third coming along nicely, thus convincing the most skeptical that alfalfa may be grown as well in New England as in the Rocky mountain section where it has long been a staple. That the farmers are taking up alfalfa is shown by the fact that whereas three years ago there were but 300 acres in Massachusetts, this year there are 1000 acres in Worcester county alone. The education efforts of the various state boards and private organizations are producing results, a circumstance that must be viewed with satisfaction by all those who have at heart the agricultural advancement of this section, so well expressed by Mr. Theodore N. Vail as a movement looking to the production by New England of a larger percentage of the food crops consumed by its inhabitants.

Alfalfa is a more valuable forage crop than hay, and experiments having demonstrated that it can be raised in New England, the agricultural organizations should continue their work to interest the farmers in it. The Vermont agricultural extension service of Burlington has been conducting successful experiments that have proved that alfalfa culture can be made a part of the movement for agricultural advancement in that state. In Rhode Island an "Alfalfa Growers' association" is doing a work at Cranston farm that is full of promise for the future. The New Hampshire Society for the Promotion of Agriculture offers a medium for the development of alfalfa growing in the Granite state. With hay next winter selling at $30 a ton, as now seems probable, the farmers should do some thinking. Much of the money that will go out of New England in payment for forage might just as well be kept at home.—Boston Transcript.

Owing to advance in cost of paper, ink, leather and glue, due to war, price of Bibles has nearly doubled during last year. A Bible publishing concern announces that it expects to pay out an extra $130,000 this year for white paper, while cost of other necessary materials will be $20,000 greater than usual. The Concord, N. H., fire department was only called to answer one general and two still alarms during July.

HAIR HINTS

Worthy the Attention of Everyone Who Would Avoid Dandruff, Itching Scalp, Gray Hairs and Baldness

"What will stop my hair coming out?" Reply: Parisian Sage is the best remedy for hair and scalp troubles; said to prevent baldness, grayness and dandruff.

The great war has not interfered with the sales of Parisian Sage—one of the most helpful and invigorating hair treatments known—as it is made in this country from the original formula.

"Before going to bed, I always rub a little Parisian Sage into my scalp," says a woman who has long, soft and fluffy hair. It is greatly admired. This stops itching scalp, keeps the hair from falling out and makes it easy to dress attractively.

Beautiful soft, glossy, healthy hair for those who use Parisian Sage. You can get a bottle of this inexpensive French hair dressing from the Red Cross Pharmacy, and druggists everywhere, with guarantee of satisfaction, or money refunded.—Adv.

BIG SURTAX ON INCOMES OF $500,000 AND OVER

The Senate Democrats Would Revise House Scales.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Heavier income tax burdens on very wealthy persons were proposed yesterday in amendments to the House bill perfected and agreed to by the Senate sub-committee on income tax headed by John Sharp Williams.

Two new classes on which surtaxes are to be levied were created—one between $500,000 and $1,000,000, and the other exceeding $1,000,000.

If the amendment is adopted all incomes of more than $1,000,000 will be taxed 13 per cent and all exceeding $500,000 12 per cent.

On the class from $500,000 to $1,000,000 the surtax is 10 per cent and on the $1,000,000 class 11 per cent. The base tax is two per cent. Immense increases in the income tax total are expected by the committee.

18 MORE MONTHS OF WAR.

Rome Believes England is Ready to Stick It Out for Victory.

Rome, Aug. 4.—Pope Benedict is said to be pleading with Germany not to resume an extensive submarine warfare.

Although peace rumors continue here Roman political circles assert England is reconciled to the possibility of eighteen months more of the war before a final allied victor.

Topics of the Home and Household.

A mixture of lemon juice and glycerine is good for sunburned hands and face. If you will grease your pan well before putting in a roast the roast will not burn on and the pan will wash more easily.

Metal teapots, when not used for some time, are apt to become musty. This may be removed by dropping a lump of sugar into the pot before putting it away. The sugar absorbs all dampness.

A sheet of corrugated paper is a handy thing to have on the writing desk for the purpose of placing wet pens or brushes in its grooves. The paper absorbs the liquid and the corrugations hold the pens or brushes in handy positions.

To make hermits, mix together two cups sugar, one cup shortening, one cup molasses, two well beaten eggs, two level teaspoons soda dissolved in one cup warm water, six cups flour, one cup currants, seeded raisins or chopped prunes, two teaspoons cinnamon and one of cloves. Mix soft and cut with a cookie cutter. Bake in a moderate oven.

In severe cases of illness where the patient is disturbed by the noise made in closing the door, tie one corner of a handkerchief around the knob on one side of the door and the opposite corner around the knob on the other side. The door will now close noiselessly on the folds of the handkerchief.

The woman or girl who goes a-bargaining with her eyes only, leaving her common sense at home, is the very girl who derides "sales" afterwards. It is not the shopkeeper's fault that you lose your head and buy things you cannot afford and do not need. Someone else probably does need and has money to put into that very article; there are plenty of other selections you might have made. Know how to buy, and you can live twice as well at half price. There are women who know so well what can be saved by buying at marked down times, that they save up for these days of shopping.

The Perfect Housekeeper.

She always kept everything perfectly clean. From the cellar clear up to the top; For neatness and order she surely was keen. And no one could get her to stop. Her husband could never find comfort at home. For fear he would muss up the place Where his wife with a broom and a duster would roam. With a stern sort of look on her face.

She never had time to be reading a book. She never had time for a call. Instead she was scrubbing some corner or nook. Or sweeping the stairs or the hall. She swept all her beauty and gladness away.

She swept all the joy out of life Until she became an automaton gray. A cleaning machine—not a wife.

She scrubbed all the love from the heart of her spouse. Her children were playless and glum. She had her reward—an immaculate house. Where nobody ever would come.

She swept and she dusted and scrubbed. Like a slave. Till she swept herself into the tomb. And the monument now at the head of her grave.

Is a duster, a brush and a broom! —Burton Brasley in the Character Builder.

The Economy of the Unbreakable. With the modern tendency to efficiency

SANFORDS

GINGER

Is my favorite for little ills caused by change of climate, food or water. Delicious and refreshing it's always healthful and helpful.

A delicious combination of ginger, aromatic and French brandy for the relief of cramps, pain, colds, chills, weakness, nervousness and insomnia. Look for the Owl Trade Mark on the wrapper. Best you get a cheap, worthless or dangerous substitute. Forty years the standard of purity, flavor and strength. Sold by all druggists and grocers.

It comes a tendency to think about what one is doing every day and count the cost. It would be interesting to know how much money the average American home runs on a moderate income loses by broken dishes. Up to a comparatively recent time, nearly all the dishes used in the kitchen were breakable. Mixing bowls, measuring cups, baking dishes, jars, containers, even milk pans sometimes, were earthenware. Of course, they were sometimes odd pieces of old sets, but these do not go very far in cooking for a family. Sooner or later most of the big pieces were sure to come to grief. The pitcher with the broken nose might last a long time if it was only used to hold the buckwheat batter, but a broken nose is a distinct disadvantage to a pitcher when it comes to pouring. None of these dishes cost less than 10 or 15 cents, and some cost a dollar or more. In the course of a year, or five years, the expense of replacing broken earthenware amounted to something.

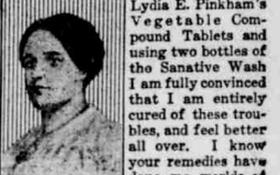

Then came the era of unbreakable kitchen dishes—not only pots and pans, but bowls, cups, pitchers, jars, pails, cans, fish kettles, coffee pots, all in trim, enameled ware of almost any imaginable color. Not only did it displace the breakable earthen plates and pots and jugs and bowls, but it crowded out the perishable tin stuff that was always liable to spring a leak, rust, or get jammed. With even an average amount of care an enameled saucepan will last until you get tired of it and give it away; it will not break, it will not leak, it will not rust. If we have all our kitchen things in this permanent form, we can afford to give a little extra care and money to our dainty china for the table. And the best of it is that the kitchen utensils will also be dainty and attractive to look at. Economy is sometimes the road to beauty.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

In South America for American Products to Be Investigated.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 4.—A complete report on the markets for construction materials and machinery in South America is to be made by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, and in its preparation a representative of the bureau will conduct an investigation covering all the southern republics.

The bureau intends to offer for the benefit of American business men such information and recommendations as will lay a substantial foundation for trade extension in the lines mentioned. For the important work to be done it has selected William W. Ewing, who has had 27 years' experience in engineering and construction work, four of which were spent in foreign countries, and who is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and the American Society for Testing Materials. Mr. Ewing was chief engineer of the Compania General de Asfatos y Portland, Barcelona, Spain; engineer of tests in the New York department of buildings for six years, and engineer in charge for a number of years with some of the largest international engineering, construction and equipment companies.

In investigating construction materials, attention will be given to markets for products used in building work, heavy engineering construction, and port and road projects, while the construction machinery on which information is desired includes devices, equipment and apparatus usually employed in such work. This is one of 20 important investigations to be conducted this year by the bureau in the interest of American foreign trade.

Mr. Ewing will spend the next three months visiting the principal cities of the United States and conferring with manufacturers with regard to the work he will do in South America. Conferences with him may be arranged and suggestions are invited. Correspondence should be directed to the Division of Commercial Agents, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

The Border News Fakers. General Funston is exactly right in his determination to rid the encampments on the Mexican border of faking correspondents. He can be trusted to do it with as little red tape as may be necessary to establish the facts.

The troops now engaged in preventing the invasion of this country by Mexicans are in no more need of essential supplies. There is, of course, some scarcity of those good things which might be expected if the boys were camping at Framingham and assessing themselves for a caterer, but they are receiving wholesome food, they are obtaining excellent physical training, and they are learning to obey orders.

Mothers and fathers at home who have been wrought up by telegraphic tales of their boys' pitiful condition should rejoice that Funston has at last determined to take action. In peace or war news fathers have no place in an army camp. Their activities elsewhere have to be tolerated, apparently, but not there.—Boston Traveler.
