ORANGE COUNTY FARMERS' ASSOCIATION NOTES.

Notes for week ending Aug. 26: The canning demonstration held at Tunbridge the afternoon of Aug. 22 was attended by about 30. Miss Bessie Thayer, home economics demonstrator of the Vermont extension service, was in charge. These demonstrations show the possibilities of putting into cans for winter use at a very slight cost not only berries and fruits but any of our garden vegetables and many forms of meat. The county agent will be glad to send directions for canning to any lady who desires it. Any questions which these directions do not answer will be referred to the department at Burlington. Their finances do not allow them to do as much of this demonstration work as would be desirable, but they are always ready to answer questions and assist those who are ready to work themselves.

The Chelsea West Hill Farmers' club secured Miss Thayer's services that evening for another demonstration. Little clubs like this can, through their organization, secure the assistance of many outside helps which cannot be secured by the individual alone. With the organization of more of these clubs it is going to mean that nearly all the time will be taken by them. How about the club in your section?

The community picnic at East Topsham has now become a settled factor in that town. This year's attendance was over 200 or nearly twice that of last year. To make it a permanent event, the Waits River Valley Community association was formed with a committee made up of Fenton Miles, Mrs. J. D. Miller, O. P. Dickey, Walter Dodd and Mrs. Henry White, to have charge of next year's picnic. It is expected that this committee will not be satisfied with an annual picnic but will make active efforts this fall to have a local club formed which will work throughout the year to make the community a better place in which to live.

CONDITIONS UNSATISFACTORY

Milk Conditions About St. Johnsbury So Found. St. Johnsbury, Aug. 28.—A field party of milk inspectors under the direction of the bureau of chemistry, United States department of agriculture, which has been operating from St. Johnsbury over a territory within a radius of 40 miles, left town this morning, after a three weeks' stay.

In enforcing the federal food and drug act, relative to the interstate shipment of milk, samples of milk and cream from quantities destined for use in other states have been taken and examined chemically and bacteriologically in the local headquarters. A move to other fields was expected much sooner, but according to some of the party, the conditions found at the shipping stations coming under this jurisdiction were more serious than was expected, so that the stay was extended until the work could be carried to a completion.

The party was in charge of C. W. Burnett of the federal service and composed of 12 or 14 men with headquarters in the basement of the Pythian building, where their apparatus was installed and the laboratory work done.

Some of the men were employed in taking the samples brought in while others were on the road collecting samples at all shipping points. According to Mr. Burnett very little has been known of the work of this department as its nature requires great secretiveness in order that milk shippers who are knowingly violating the law in the quality of milk shipped may be apprehended before they have a chance to make any changes that would clear them for the time being.

The inspection is not only that the act may be enforced but that with the enforcement will come a permanent improvement in character and quality of the milk shipped.

After the examination in the local laboratory the results of each are sent to Washington for consideration by the secretary of agriculture.

From what has been said by members of the party here, it is understood that the results of their stay in this locality indicate that there is considerable room for improvement in the handling of milk at points of production.
