

POLITICAL ADVERTISING

FOR LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

THE claims of John E. Weeks upon the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor of Vermont rest upon his character as a man, his experience as a legislator, his fidelity and usefulness as a state official, and his proved ability as a business man and as a presiding officer.

Judge Weeks has spent his life in Addison county, an active farmer and business man, and no man in Vermont stands higher in the respect of his neighbors for uprightness and strength of character. He is the kind of man people trust and to whom they go for counsel.

Judge Weeks would come to the Lieutenant-Governorship straight from a successful experience as presiding officer of the lower House, having been speaker in 1915. It is generally agreed that he made one of the best speakers Vermont has ever had.

Judge Weeks' chief interest in life is not in his private affairs, nor in political promotion, but in the unfortunate citizens of our state in our penal institutions, especially the boys and girls in the Industrial School.

Judge Weeks is a farmer. He owns to-day the farm on which he was born, and makes it pay. He is a business man, one of the most successful in the state.

On your primary ballot September 12, under Lieutenant-Governor, put a cross opposite the name of John E. Weeks.

REPAIRING AND MAINTAINING LAWNS

Late Summer and Early Autumn Best Season for Rejuvenating Grass Plots in North Central and Middle Atlantic States.

The work of lawn repair, like that of making a new lawn, declare specialists of the U. S. department of agriculture, is best performed in early September in the regions south of New England and north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers.

In New England and the other states of the northern tier, similar procedure should be adopted in renewing the lawn, but the work should be done in the spring.

Careful attention is necessary if an established lawn is to be kept in good condition. Most lawns need an occasional application of some good fertilizer regardless of the kind of soil on which they exist.

It is stated that the committee in charge of Old Home week observance have received sufficient money from various sources to pay all expenses and leave a small balance in the treasury. This will be placed in someone's hands in trust for the use of the next committee for a similar purpose.

Due credit should be given to the local grange for taking the first step in this matter which has turned out so satisfactorily for all concerned.

Among the many pleasant events occurring in connection with the town's first observance of Old Home week was the gathering of groups of friends and relatives for a picnic lunch at noon on the first day, Wednesday, Aug. 30.

From the lawn by the town hall we noticed a party of the members of the Rural Good Luck club. Out of doors near the home of Glen McAlister were friends of that family. Members of the local Relief corps assembled on the lawn of the Methodist church. At the home of Bert and Gertrude Martin was a party of fifteen, most of them descendants of Aaron G. Martin. On the Robinson lawn were gathered a party that included Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Blanchard and Mrs. Cheney of Montpelier, Mrs. Mary Quigley of Somerville, Mass., Mrs. Julia Blanchard and Mr. and Mrs. E. L. House and son, Reginald of Barre, who held an impromptu reception while waiting their lunch.

Perhaps the largest of these gatherings was on the north side of the Congregational church, the word having been passed that all girl students of the older village schoolhouse were to meet there for a reunion and basket picnic. So cordial was the response that a roll-call showed that thirty-four were present, their present homes being in Colorado, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Washington, D. C., as well as from many towns in Vermont.

After a bountiful lunch, over which many guests and reminiscences were exchanged, letters of regret were read from Mrs. Hattie Sprague Lynde of Parker's Prairie, Minn., Mrs. Elizabeth Martin Tarbell and Mrs. Edith Tarbell Bean of Randolph and Mrs. Jennie Fuller Pember of Rochester. One from Mrs. Luna Simons Denny of Northfield was received too late to be read with the others.

After the reading of the letters, many stories were told of the old school days in district No. 5, including memories of former teachers. Among these teachers were mentioned Miss Parris A. Thompson, who taught here before she became a member of the faculty at Goddard; Joel B. Martin, who taught for three successive winters, following the building of the schoolhouse in 1876; the three Beckett sisters, Emily, Mary and Julia, who taught in the old two-story schoolhouse that was torn down in 1876 to make room for the new one; William (Carpenter) of Chelsea, who later went West; Miss Adelia A. Clement also of Chelsea; George E. Adams, now of Fair Haven, who was in town but unfortunately not present at this reunion, and others. One of the earlier teachers, now Rev. Cary L. Watson of Phillipston, Mass., was present to greet his old schoolmates and former pupils. The party visited the old stone steps of the schoolhouse, now occupied as a dwelling by Carroll E. Dutton, where some of the old school songs were sung and then they reluctantly adjourned, hoping to meet again in future Old Home weeks. Among those present not named above were: Amelia House Graves of Colorado Springs, Col., Julia A. Simons and Effie Howe McIntyre of Providence, R. I., Lucy D. Abbott of Oneida, N. Y., Ellen Bruce Harrington of Springfield, Mass., Ellen Waldo Colby of Plainfield, May Bacon Houston of Northfield, Ella Martin Kanaely of Montpelier, Alma Woolcut Lang and Lucy Earle Holt of Barre, Bessie Emma Eskine Jeffords of Graniteville. The balance of the party live in town and include Annie Schofield Randall, Fannie Simons Dow, Nellie Williams Ingalls, Anna Simons Poole, Martha Simons Poland, Mary E. Waterman, Hattie M. Briggs, Fannie Martin Stewart, Maggie Whittney Griffin, Alma Work Call, Alice Walker, Hattie Burnham Granger, Alice Adams Boyce, Celia Wilber Colby and Adams Boyce, Adelia Wilber Colby and were noticed on the outskirts, wishing they could be included in the talkfest.

Coats are Growing Longer. In the September Woman's Home Companion the fashion editor says:

"Coats are conspicuously showing the descending line. Autumn suit coats will vary in length from twenty-eight to thirty-eight inches, thirty-four inches being the most popular length; while forty-eight inches is a good length for the separate coat.

"Plaits and panels are featured. The flare is not as prominent as in the spring models. This does not mean that they are not wide at the bottom, for they are. The separate coats, especially, show a sweep at the hem. Some have the top portion made with fitted lines, others hang loose from the shoulders.

"Flush velvet, panels—which is the short nap French velvet—and imitation fur fabrics are all good materials for these coats. The leading novelty in these imitations is Rodier's edereella, a close imitation of Persian lamb.

"These suit coats and separate coats alike rely upon their collars and cuffs for their novelty note, and I assure you they have not relied in vain. The cape collar, about the only real military note in the new fashions, and the high wrinkled crush collars, are the leaders. They both have the big clumsy look in common—it is regarded as their chief style note. Some of these collars may be worn two ways, buttoned up close about the neck, or laid out flat in cape style.

"Many of the separate coats have kimono sleeves, often so stitched that they have a raglan effect. The full log of mutton style is seen, too, made with deep flaring cuffs.

"Suit coats are not showing many long-shouldered effects. The armhole is generally the regular size. The sleeve most favored is the regulation coat sleeve with nothing new or unusual about it until the cuff is reached. Then comes the novelty. Very deep cuffs are worn, fur-lined and button-trimmed. Big, flaring, inverted bell cuffs are fashionable, lined with a contrasting, often gay color. There are cuffs that swing out from the sleeve and appear to be just a broad band caught together and to the sleeve with a big button and buttonhole, in fact, there is no end to the cuff novelties.

"In the early fall many women of fashion will include in their wardrobes, French-looking peleries of satin. These long coats were first made by Callot."

She Felt For Him. He had sat looking absent-mindedly out of the train window for two hours, whistling the same tune and not on the key. The passengers had become well-nigh distracted.

A well known actress sat behind the young man. Finally there came a moment when the whistler paused for breath, and in that moment the quick-witted actress leaned over and said: "I know just how it is. I never could whistle, either."
