POPE URGING "GERMAN" PEACE

Plot to Detach France in Cardinal Gasparri's Letter

SHOWS GAIN IN PROMPT AGREEMENT

Further Fighting by French Only Means More Destruction

Paris, Oct. 2.—Having failed in the field, Germany has launched a peace drive which now is in full swing, ably assisted by agents and much Teuton, and possibly some American, gold here and "over there." Revelations made in the Bolo case show that there is, or was, a wholesale scheme to get control of French newspapers in behalf of German propaganda seeking to depress the soldiers and the civilians and to urge a "German" peace. Incidentally, the exposure of this scheme is one more testimony to the alertness of the American police, who it is said "tipped off" the French government as to the large financial transactions Bolo and others had with banks and other institutions on this side of the water. As an additional impetus to this peace "offensive" Cardinal Gasparri, the papal foreign secretary, has written a letter to a French bishop, pointing out that a continuance of the war only means ultimate destruction of invaded France, that the pope's proposals are all to the advantage of the French, and that negotiations had better be instituted with as little delay as possible. In Germany, however, the Pan-annexationists are receiving the support of Wilhelm II, according to "Germania," in an effort to offset the "no-conquest" program put forward by the Reichstag majority.

WELLS RIVER

The young people of the village gave a surprise party to Vera Cameron on Saturday evening last, the occasion being her 16th birthday. Miss Cameron is one of the most popular of the younger girls.

Miss Florence Glynn, who has been away on a two weeks' vacation from her duties as stenographer for the Ryegate Paper Co., returned home on Saturday.

Mrs. Daniel Glynn left by auto Monday for a week's visit with relatives in Bellows Falls. Mrs. Robert O. Blood of Concord, N. H., is visiting Mrs. E. A. Lyons for two weeks. Mrs. Blood was formerly a teacher of music in our public schools. Dr. Blood, who was located here for a few years, has entered the medical branch of the U. S. army and is now on his way to France. Dr. Blood was considered one of the most skilled surgeons in this section.

On Saturday, J. A. Moore and family motored to Montpelier and Barre, where they visited friends.

Owing to the rainy weather, only 25 of Co. K, 1st Vermont volunteer infantry, were present at their special services on Sunday at the Wells River church.

Miss Lucille Angell underwent a slight operation at Cottage hospital on Saturday and is rapidly recovering.

The new bridge across the Connecticut is rapidly nearing completion and is at the present time all ready for the cement road bed. This bridge is to take the place of the present toll bridge.

Ted Sherwell of Newport visited with friends in town the first of the week.

SOUTH WOODBURY

J. C. Brown, who has been passing a month with relatives here, returned to his home in Fitchburg, Mass., the first of last week.

Glenn Batchelder has gone to Springfield, Mass., where he has employment. Isaac Hill of Hardwick visited his sister, Mrs. Jane Ball, last Monday.

Mrs. W. H. Goodell went Wednesday to Barre, where she visited relatives the remainder of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Hall of Boscawon, N. H., are the guests of Mr. Hall's mother, Mrs. L. W. Haskell.

Mrs. Mellie Wells of Burlington was a recent visitor at W. B. Goodell's.

Paul Kinoyworth of Hardwick was the guest of Roy Benjamin Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Watkins spent Saturday and Sunday at White River Junction.

Miss Agnes Tassie went last Tuesday to Johnson, where she will attend the normal school.

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $1. and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare.

Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (60 cents) which pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 65 cents and gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, chest and bronchial tubes, so greatly, and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, be sure to ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

HIS ALMA MATER

By JANE OSBORNE.

When Clay Stimson received the appeal from the secretary of his class at college for contributions to support the aviation corps that was to be sent to the front by his alma mater he madd out that check for a thousand dollars, but before he signed it he thought of Peggy. Peggy made all the difference in the world.

It wasn't that Peggy was selfish, but Peggy was the sort of wife that needed to be financed generously. It would have been as alien to Peggy's nature, thought Clay, to attempt any sort of economy, even in war time, as it would be alien to the butterfly's nature to start in storing away the honeyed sweetness that it gathers from the flowers as the thrifty bee does.

It was just when he was turning into the long driveway that led to the low-roofed bungalow nestling among the trees where Peggy, who, he was sure, ought to have lived in an Italian villa, at least, deigned to dwell, greeted him with even more than usual excitement at the door. It was Peggy's manner always to be in a state of delightful expectancy and impatience when Clay returned home every night. Her vivacity was contagious and Clay would have been transported from business or thoughts of the departing stenographer had it not been for the thought of the unsigned check for one thousand dollars. He was rather pensive at dinner, stealing snatches of time between Peggy's clever little sallies to meditate and work out his plan of action. In order to dispense with the stenographer, he was thinking, he would have to work overtime. It would often mean that he would have to return to his office at night, patiently to type out the letters that were not typed in the daytime.

Of course Peggy should not know. He would have to tell Peggy simply that business detained him.

Peggy talked glibly through dinner, which she seemed to eat with a relish. And more than once she stopped to give directions to the waitress.

"Do you think the new cook will do?" she asked, knowing well enough that Clay never had a word to say about the household management. "You know, I had to dismiss Brady. I think this one is rather better."

"Yes; that caviarre was delicious," Clay had presence of mind enough to say; and then, venturing into an unaccustomed field of inquiry, he added: "I suppose wages are advancing even with cooks?"

Peggy pouted with a playful note of annoyance.

"Yes; I really had to agree to forty dollars this time. I suppose I shall have to make an increase if I am to keep her."

Had Clay found it possible to throw off his air of preoccupation more easily he might have remained at home that first evening. But so eager was he to begin the work that would make the sending of a check for a thousand dollars possible that he excused himself after dinner to return to his office. By eight o'clock he was busy with the files, bringing his correspondence up to date, so that the burden of his fater work would not be too heavy. "I shan't in the least mind your going," Peggy reassured him, as he started out. "I'm dreadfully sleepy, and I'm afraid I should have been quite stupid if you had stayed home."

Three or four nights out of the week Clay returned to his office, and as often Peggy, apparently uncomplainingly, professed perfect willingness to retire early and forget her loneliness. One evening that Clay had intended to devote to his correspondence, the vision of Peggy in a new evening frock changed his mind. It was one of those exquisitely simple gowns that experience had taught Clay to know were the most expensive kind. But even this knowledge did not spoil the pleasure it took in beholding his pretty wife so attractively dressed to meet him.

"Do you very much like this dress?" Peggy asked him after he had finished dinner. "I can really tell that you do just by the way you look at it." And then, not waiting for Clay's enthusiastic response, Peggy went on: "I never could keep a secret, so I just have to tell you that I made it." She paused a moment and watched, and not finding a reproving frown on Clay's face she went on: "And I have cooked dinner every night for two weeks—ever since the last cook went. Oh, I never meant to tell you that, too, but you know I can't keep a secret, and if you ever found out you'd hate me for deceiving you. You see, the girls in my class at college were getting up a fund for an ambulance, and of course they looked to me to help a little. But I knew you couldn't endure having two-course dinners or seeing me dressed in a shirtwaist in the evening, so I decided to go along living just as we always had, and I'd save the cook's wages and my dressmaker's bill by doing a little myself. And that caviarre we had the other night wasn't caviarre at all; it was just mock caviarre made out of sardines. Nelly's been a trump and has done a lot to help me with the cooking. And nights when you do stay home she does the dishes all alone, and the nights when you don't, we really have fun together. So that's my secret."

Half an hour later Clay and Peggy in the roadster were speeding toward Clay's office, and half an hour after that they were home again. And with Peggy at his side, Clay was typing out the letters of the day in his library. (Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Very Severe Case of Dandruff. Itching Was Terrible. Lost Sleep. Healed By Cuticura.

"For several months I was troubled with a very severe case of dandruff which greatly irritated my scalp. The itching was terrible, causing loss of sleep, and sore eruptions formed that caused untold agony. Scales appeared and my hair lost its gloss and became dull and dry."
"At last I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased a box of Cuticura Ointment and used it constantly on my scalp, and I also used the Cuticura Soap to wash my hair. I continued, and at the end of another week I was completely healed. Since then I have not been bothered with any skin or scalp trouble."
