

AGAINST CHIEF OF MUNITIONS

Head of the War Industries Board in Favor of Trying Out New War Dept. Board

SYSTEM BETTER, BUT NOT YET BUSINESSLIKE

However, Willard Says That Weakness Is in Voluntary Character of Work

Washington, Jan. 15.—Army reorganization was given a powerful impetus by the unexpected testimony in its favor by Bernard M. Baruch, before the Senate committee on military affairs, yesterday. Mr. Baruch drew the line upon a secretary of munitions, as proposed in the Chamberlain bill, but up to that point he solidly supported the scheme of the bill, and thereby greatly strengthened the growing sentiment in favor of it. Daniel Willard, chairman of the war industries board, did not go as far as to concede the necessity of one supreme head over the supply system, clothed with plenary power, but his criticisms of the present system were in themselves sufficient to condemn it and to raise the question whether half-measures, such as have been proposed by Secretary Baker, will place the department on a business basis. Congress is now, through the testimony of these two gentlemen, presented with no less than four plans of reorganization, ranging from a making over of the present bureau, and the creation of new ones, within the department, to a complete divorce of military and business functions, with the latter committed wholly to a new cabinet officer, with powers so well-defined that they cannot be tampered with during the progress of a war. Roughly speaking, the alternatives might be termed the Hoover system of unofficial, but none the less direct control, and the establishment of a new department, with statutory powers, whose sole business shall be the provision of supplies for the army, and perhaps the navy, leaving to the secretary of war, as his title implies, only the military direction of our armed forces. The munitions bill is by no means dead. On the contrary, the need of drastic reorganization is being so accentuated by every day's fresh testimony that it is gaining support all the time.

MINE WORKERS CALLED BEFORE SUPREME COURT

President F. J. Hays and Nine Others Must Show Cause Why They Should Not Be Declared in Contempt.

Washington, Jan. 15.—President Frank J. JOHN SWENSON DIED AT CONCORD, N. H.

Was One of the Best Known Men in the Granite Trade—Long in the Business.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 15.—Hon. John Swenson, the well known granite contractor, died at his home, 340 North State street, from pernicious anemia, Sunday night.

Mr. Swenson was born in Falkenburg, Sweden, July 11, 1851, and came to this country at the age of 19 years, gaining a livelihood from various forms of work.

Determined upon securing an education, although 21 years of age, he started in the lower grades of the public schools of Oswego, N. Y.

He was married in New York in 1876 to Ellen Anderson, who died two years ago. Mr. Swenson is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Walter B. Clifford of Pittsburg, Mass., and three sons, Omar S., J. Arthur and Lieut. Guy A., now at Camp Stanley, Tex.

Mr. Swenson came to Concord in 1882 and started to learn the granite cutters' trade and soon engaged in the granite business for himself.

Mr. Swenson was one of the most able and best known granite men in this country. His life was one of hard work. For years, his labors were from early morning until late at night.

This, with his thorough knowledge of his business, his treatment of his employees and his honesty were factors in his success. His sincere and genial manner won for him many friends.

He represented his ward in the legislature of 1895 and was chosen state senator from the 11th district in 1906.

GOLDMAN AND BERKMAN MUST GO BACK TO PRISON

Supreme Court Sustains Conviction—Two Years and $10,000 Fine for Each—Other Sentences Upheld.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Conviction of Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman on charges of conspiring to prevent the operation of the selective service act by urging men of draft ages not to register was sustained yesterday by the supreme court.

Conviction of Louis Kramer and Morris Becker on charges of conspiring to prevent persons of draft ages from registering in New York were also affirmed. Kramer was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine, and Becker to 20 months' imprisonment.

The court also sustained Ohio decrees sentencing Charles E. Ruthenberg, Alfred Wagenknecht and Charles Baker to one year imprisonment for violating the draft law.

Miss Goldman and Berkman were convicted in New York and sentenced to serve two years in prison and a fine of $10,000 each. Both contended the act was unconstitutional, but the supreme court last week Monday upheld the law, although at that time it rendered no opinion in the cases involving conspiracy charges.

Ruthenberg and the other Ohio men were convicted on charges of conspiring to prevent Alphonse J. Schme from registering under the selective service act.

RETAILERS AGREE TO BE FAIR.

Seventy-five Thousand Sign Agreement to Charge Moderate Prices.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Approximately 75,000 food and grocery retailers signed the food administrator's pledge to give their customers fair and moderate prices with no more than a reasonable profit above cost in the first week of the drive to enroll the 350,000 retailers of food commodities. Full returns have not been tabulated.

Railroads in War Times.

Things have changed some since the war began. Here are the American people, who once upon a time, and not so long ago, used the public service commissions as clubs to force railroads to run unprofitable trains that a few might be accommodated or fancied local necessities might be met. In the same public accommodations to all this now being told that if they want to travel they must do so when the government says they can and must put up with whatever accommodations are at hand. The traveling public is not going to be coddled any more during the war.

This is made plain by the discontinuing of hundreds of passenger trains all over the country. The government has better and more important use for the power and rolling stock than to have it hauling people around who are all dressed up but who have no place in particular to go. In war times pleasure travel must be reduced to a minimum. This is the experience of all belligerent countries. In England, as Senator Hollis points out, passenger fares have been increased over 50 per cent., not in an effort to increase revenue, but to put an end to pleasure travel.

It looks as if the roads were going to have all the business they can handle looking out for Uncle Sam at war. And a war work must come first, there can be no just complaint on the part of the people if it does become a bit more irksome to make a trip. The moral is: Don't make the journey unless it is absolutely necessary. It will be a certain indication of lack of comprehension if people place blame on the individual roads for the curtailment of the service. They are acting under government orders for the common good, and they have a natural right to expect that they will be supported, not kicked, when they are performing such a function.—St. Albans Messenger.

To Weed Out Incompetent Medical Officers.

The health of soldiers depends much upon the right kind of medical oversight. In the rush to raise a great army it is fair to suppose that not all the doctors who have volunteered are qualified to give the sort of attention that is required. The patriotic impulse may go with inadequate medical knowledge and experience. In the light of these considerations it is reassuring to find that practical results are to follow the surgeon-general's recent tour of inspection among the camps and cantonments in this country.

General Gorgas has called upon any army division surgeons, commanding officers of base hospitals and other medical officers having subordinates to list those medical officers whose work has not been satisfactory. This is one of the results of his personal study of healthy conditions in the camps. He recognizes "that a proportion of medical officers are not fully qualified to perform their duties because of physical disability, mental incapacity, temperamental unfitness, laziness, inability to command men, lack of education or proper training."

There is to be taken no deal unfairly with any now in the service, and so systematic instruction in military hospitals is recommended to remedy "incompetency due to poor training in the technical or professional work"; medical officers' training camps "are relied upon to correct deficiencies other than professional incapacity." No action for discharge will be taken until the medical men have failed in two lines of work.—The professional care of the sick and disabled and medical field work, the latter including camp sanitation, handling of men, first aid and transportation of wounded.

Men who prove incompetent in one line of duty will be transferred and tried in other positions. If then unable to do satisfactory work they will be reported to the surgeon-general as unfit and sent before a board with a view to their discharge from the service.—Springfield Republican.

TO TAKE ALL SAILING SHIPS

Shipping Board Asks for a Report on Location of Vessels

COMMERCE DEPT. TO TAKE CENSUS

Redfield Says Those in Near-by Waters Represent 425,000 Tons

Washington, Jan. 15.—Requisitioning of all American sailing vessels was forecast yesterday when the shipping board requested the department of commerce to report the location of such vessels.

Secretary Redfield replied that 175 sailing vessels with a cargo carrying capacity of 425,000 tons now are within or adjacent to American territorial waters.

There are nearly 50 sailing vessels of 1,000 tons or larger flying the American flag, and it is being urged that in this time of stress, when the liberty of the world depends on shipment of food and supplies to Europe, the vessels should be taken from private business and put into the public service.

Of the 175 vessels which could be made immediately available, 76 are in port; 99 are loaded, and nine are undergoing repairs, which will be finished soon. The other vessels are scattered.

ORANGE COUNTY FARM BUREAU.

Notes for Week Ending Jan. 12.

The county agent has a supply of account books modeled after the farm survey method of analyzing the farm business, which are to be distributed to farmers interested, at the cost of their printing. These books are simple to keep and at the same time so arranged as to give the farmer a valuable record of his farm business and one which he can compare with average as formulated from the survey records taken. This winter is a good time to start such a record. If interested write the county agent.

Meetings have been held in Bradford and Newbury this past week at which these records were explained and farm account books started. Twenty-one books were placed in the three days of the section meetings will be held in other communities during the next three months.

The county agent has a letter from the federal department regarding the income tax to be levied this year on incomes of over $2,000 for married men and $1,000 for single men. It is for those individuals who come in this class to make out a summary of their business. Many farmers are unfamiliar with the records necessary for this. The county agent will be glad to assist such in making out their record as far as he can reach them. Watch the schedule of meetings and plan to see him when in your section. The account books mentioned above would be valuable to keep such a record in for next year.

There will be a two days' poultry farm management and home economics school at North Tunbridge Jan. 23 and 24. Sessions will be held Wednesday afternoon and evening and Thursday afternoon. The speakers will be Prof. Leggett and probably one other poultry man from the extension service.

The county agent in Franklin county has found that many beans which they had threshed and bagged have frozen in the bags due to the high per cent. of moisture. Germination tests of these beans show a lowered vitality as a result. If your beans have frozen, it would be well to test before saving for seed. Also test any you intend to purchase for seed.

The county agent has from the state marketing agent names of several commission men considered reliable who deal in beans. Names will be furnished on request.

The U. S. department of agriculture has purchased a large quantity of nitrate of soda to be sold direct to farmers at once. If interested in the purchase of nitrate write the county agent, who will send plans as soon as received from the department. The probable cost will be $75 per ton f. o. b. Baltimore.

The county agent has learned where there is a supply of seed corn of a variety adapted to our conditions. If a community could make up a co-operative order at once, some of this might be obtained for this county.

For the week ending Jan. 19 the county agent plans to be present at meetings of the Brookfield and East Bethel N. E. M. P. A. Friday and Saturday of this week. Saturday is the day to test samples of milk brought in by farmers at East Bethel creamery. At both of these meetings and also at the granges at Randolph Center, North Randolph, Brookfield and East Braintree, Harvey Dodge, manager of the Washington County Farmers' Exchange, will be present to explain that organization.

Recipe for week: Baked Soy Beans—Pick over one quart soy beans and soak them over night or an equal length of time in the daytime. Pour off the water and cover with fresh water to which one-half level teaspoon soda has been added. Cook just below the boiling point until tender. Pour off the water, put the beans in a baking dish with one level tablespoon salt and two tablespoons molasses. Cover with boiling water and bake slowly three or four hours or until soft. Keep covered except during the last hour.

Summary for week ending Jan. 12: Mr. Loveland—Days in office, 2; days in field, 4; letters, 21; office calls, 3; farm calls, 18; meetings, 4; attendance, 117; miles traveled, 192. Miss Dutton—Days in field, 8; meetings, 4; attendance, 84; miles traveled, 175.

E. H. Loveland County Agent.

BOLO PASHA HAD CAREER IN COSTA RICA

First Posed as Traveling Salesman, and He Made Numerous Friends by His Easy Manner.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Jan. 15 (correspondence of the Associated Press).—In keeping with his financial operations as a man of means, which resulted in his arrest in France and an international scandal growing out of his attempts to purchase or corrupt French newspapers in the interest of Germany, Bolo Pasha enjoyed a meteoric career in Costa Rica.

Having received a considerable commercial reputation based largely on credit obtained from Costa Rican business men, Bolo became the apparent owner of a beautiful farm and handsome residence in the suburbs of Cartago. There he entertained on a lavish scale until he became enamored of a French actress, lavished presents upon her and finally fled with her, leaving his creditors to seize his princely estate, only to discover that it had not been paid for.

Bolo is said to have abandoned the actress in Colon, Panama, leaving her to mourn the loss of money and jewels.

Paul Bolo, as he was known here, came to Costa Rica posing as traveling salesman for important and well-established manufacturing and commercial firms in France. He was always well dressed, spoke several languages, and had a most interesting conversation and good manners, was a gambler and quite fond of playing attention to women. He soon made numerous friends, and being a plunger and hustler soon obtained credit and launched into business. He became the owner of commissaries and stores at different places which he stocked full of goods purchased on credit from wholesale houses in this city. His business places soon boomed as the result of his liberality and facility to make friends, and he had established a good trade for them he sold one by one at a good profit. In these transactions he formed the basis of his capital, as it is a well-known fact that when Bolo came to Costa Rica he did not have a farthing to his name.

In the purchase and sale of these business places he made several thousand dollars in the climate of the Atlantic zone did not agree with him, and he was often troubled with fever and malaria. Furthermore, his longing for the easy and apparently happy life of barrooms and hotels, enjoying the company of beautiful women and numerous friends, spurred him constantly to come to this city.

A Colombian by the name of Moquera, who lived on a banana farm quite close to one of the stores owned by Bolo, became his very close friend. Visiting his friend, Bolo made the acquaintance of his daughter, a charming young girl of 16 with whom at first sight he became infatuated. The girl was a rare specimen of tropical beauty: dark complexioned, tall, slender and graceful; her eyes as dark as night and her cheeks as red as a rose. Bolo was a devotee of women, he immediately went crazy over the girl, but "Old Man Moquera," as the father was generally called, an affectionate and faithful guardian of his daughter, a veteran of many a Colombian revolution and a ready man to handle a razor, soon put a stop to the love affair.

Soon afterward Bolo sold out all his stores in the Atlantic zone and took refuge in this city, where he remained in hiding until he heard that Moquera in turn had also sold his properties and sailed for Colombia. Once Bolo had overcome his worry and anxiety over Moquera, he decided to engage in agricultural enterprises. This was in the latter part of the year 1896, and it was then that he purchased a beautiful farm, located in the suburbs of the city of Cartago and belonging to a wealthy Costa Rican.

One of Bolo's first steps was to build himself a palatial residence on the place and then actively proceeded to start various cultivations. His residence was furnished in a princely way; the wine-room was stocked with the best of liquors, and when champagne was served, he frequently invited his friends to spend a week with him, after which this wine-room had to be restocked.

He continued to increase his credit in this city and accordingly continued to improve his farm. He spent a part of the week here, and a part of the week there. At the gambling places attended by the wealthy people, Bolo was always seen to be most fortunate. It has always been remarked that at gambling he won large sums of money in Costa Rica, although in the same easy way in which he made money he spent it.

At that time M. Aubry's grand opera troupe, especially contracted by the government for the inauguration of the National theater in this city, arrived here. From the arrival of the troupe, Bolo made many friends among its members, especially among the actresses, who were paid every attention and frequently invited by him to parties and picnics which he especially organized. Bolo made himself famous for the costly gifts and presents which he gave many of the actresses.

On the day of the inauguration, Bolo, attired in a stylish and perfectly fitting dress suit, surrounded by his friends and beaming in smiles, occupied one of the most prominent boxes at the theatre.

"Faust" was the opera sung the night of the inauguration, and it was a grand success for all the members of Aubry's troupe. It was also on that eventful night that Bolo broke all his previous records at a stately supper which he gave at a hotel in honor of the principal players.

Frequently, when circumstances would permit, Bolo invited the members of the troupe to go to his farm, and there would entertain them in such sumptuous fashion that people who attended those outings still say that there has never been anybody in Costa Rica who could entertain as he did on those occasions. For these outings he took orchestras from Cartago to San Jose. In the meantime, Bolo's credit and good luck were rapidly decreasing.

In spite of this fact, upon the arrival of Mademoiselle Lardinois, a noted and beautiful French actress who was brought to reinforce the company, Bolo became infatuated with her, gave her many valuable pieces of jewelry and continued his life as a lunatic and spendthrift.

It appears that Mlle. Lardinois in her turn, also became infatuated with Bolo, and that they spent together a season of luxury and pleasure.

The date for the departure of the opera troupe was rapidly approaching, and as several of Bolo's creditors were becoming exigent and uneasy he decided to depart with the troupe and informed his creditors that he was taking a trip to France in order to make certain arrangements with the firm he represented. Bolo's excuse quieted his creditors, much more so when he left behind his princely estate, to which an absurd value was wrongly attached by all. It may here be

Spies.

Two kinds of spies are found in war, and there is a wide gulf of difference between them. One kind of spy was represented in the Revolutionary days by Major Andre on the British side and by Captain Nathan Hale on the American side. Both of these men were gentlemen and brave soldiers. For a military purpose, under superior orders, they risked and gave their lives within the enemy's lines. It takes a brave and intelligent man to perform this sort of spying, and the work is accounted an honorable service in all countries. Though it is necessary to put such military spies to death if they are taken, they are awarded a soldier's death. They are shot, not hung, and often they receive the honors of war in their burial.

The other sort of spy is not so noble. He takes no chances in an enemy's camp. He lives as a civilian in a peaceful community and pretends to be a loyal citizen. Not infrequently he is a citizen or subject of the country he betrays. It is very easy for him to pretend loyalty, but he sneaks about, obtaining and forwarding information, destroying property, poisoning public sentiment, setting fires and working incalculable injury. If such a person is detected in his treason, what is the legitimate penalty that he pays? He does not die a soldier's death and receive the honors of war. He is hanged like a murderer, or should be hanged.

We have had a large contingent of such spies operating in this country since we went to war with Germany. They have performed a service as dangerous and as odious to the land of their residence as it has been valuable to Germany. Their work leads directly to the death of American soldiers and to the defeat of American plans. It is an assistance to German brutality, to German massacre. Some of these spies have been taken red-handed. What has been done with them? Not one has been executed. The worst that has been adjudged to any one of them has been imprisonment, and most of them have simply been interned in a camp, under very pleasant circumstances, until the end of the war. Such a "punishment" as that they do not dread at all. After the war they will come out, and will be in a position to enjoy their rewards from the German government, for the rest of their lives.

If upon some of these people the legitimate penalty of their crime were promptly visited, there would be fewer betrayals of our soldiers, fewer explosions of munitions plants, fewer fires destroying establishments which are supplying the material of war.—Boston Transcript.
