The school directors of Barre Town have decided that the schools shall open Sept. 3, and all the schools in the town will open at that time.

Mr. and Mrs. James Slora of Cutler Corner received a card this morning announcing the safe arrival of their son, Corp. James Slora, jr., overseas.

W. V. Schermerhorn of Omaha, Neb., is registered at Hotel Barre while arranging to act as the western representative of a well known Barre manufacturing concern.

James B. Carswell of Orange street is absent on a business trip to the middle West, and upon his homeward journey he will stop in Chicago to attend the convention of monument retailers.

Riley Burgess of Washington street, who is taking a vacation from his duties with the Cook & Watkins Manufacturing Co., of which he is a member, has gone to the Maine coast to visit relatives.

William A. Thomas of Zanesville, O., western representative of the North Barre Granite Co., is passing a week in the city on business and while here is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Duncan of East street.

W. F. Bradbury, machinist's mate in the U. S. navy, returned to-day to his station at Charleston, S. C., where he will resume his duties as company commander after spending two weeks with his parents on East street.

Paul Scampini, former pitching ace for the Barre A. C. and I. A. C., who went to Hartford, Conn., some weeks ago, twirled a one-hit game for the Colt's team a few days ago, according to a newspaper clipping received here.

Carpenters are dismantling the Bijou theatre in the Arcade building, which was recently vacated by Alo Marriana. The inclined floor is being removed and in its place a floor to conform to the ground plan of the building will be laid.

John A. Cross of Northfield, president of the Barre Granite Manufacturers' association, and Mrs. Cross have gone to Camp Perry, O., to visit their son, Lieut. Herman Cross, of the U. S. cavalry. From there they will go to Chicago to attend the retail monument dealers' convention.

Winifred A. Edson of Royalton and Rose M. Bagley of Royalton were married Aug. 5 at the home of the bridegroom in Royalton in the presence of a few friends. The service was performed by Rev. J. M. Mosely of Royalton, the single service being used. Mrs. Edson was formerly a resident of Barre.

A very pleasant surprise awaited Miss Marjorie Holt Saturday afternoon when, upon her return home from a visit to her cousins, 21 children appeared upon the veranda to meet her. Upon entering the house, she found the rooms tastefully decorated with crepe paper and flowers. She realized at once that the children were there to help her celebrate her eighth birthday. The afternoon was spent in music and games, and refreshments of ice cream and cake, cookies, saltines and lemonade were served. Miss Marjorie was the recipient of several gifts from her little friends. The party broke up late in the afternoon, wishing the little hostess many more happy birthdays.

A college friend of Ralph H. Rogers, a Yale divinity student who returned to his summer charge in Jericho this morning after visiting at his home on Richardson street, writes of meeting a well known Barre boy in one of the base hospitals of the American expeditionary forces in France. In his letter he says: "About a week ago a patient by the name of Harold Wilson from your town came into my ward with shell wounds in the head and shoulders. You should have seen his tin derby--it has a wonderful collection of holes and dents in it, but it surely saved his life. He is now quite recovered and will soon be well. I questioned him about you and he said he knew you and your family." The writer of the letter is now with a mobile hospital in the American sector.

Motorist's luck attended two men who rode a beer truck owned by Wilson & Gaul right up to the brink of the river bank just south of Intercity park yesterday. Dewey Stone was at the wheel and a man who was riding up the road apiece with him was on the same seat, and each had a narrow escape. Something went wrong with the steering gear, and when the heavy truck left the highway nothing that the driver could do in the way of applying brakes served to keep it from heading toward the stream. By good fortune the engine died a painless death within a few inches of the bank. The man who accompanied the driver was thrown to the ground and in the shuffle he suffered a fracture of his right thumb. The car was not badly damaged, although some trouble was encountered before it could be returned to the road.

Frank Todhurst, the cornet soloist, has been soloist for Sousa and the U. S. Marine band. Two vocal soloists are also with the company. We shall have to wait another year to enjoy as good a concert--adv.

Mrs. R. C. George of Elmoro street and Mrs. Elsie Caven and daughter, Miss Marion Caven, of Mount street returned to the city Monday evening from a visit of the past week with friends and relatives in New Haven, Conn., and vicinity. Miss Caven resumed her duties as cashier at the Woolworth five-and-ten-cent store yesterday forenoon, after taking a vacation of two weeks from her duties.

Clerks in the up-stairs department of the Daylight store held an enjoyable outing at Benjamin Falls after closing hour last evening. About 25 of the clerks and invited guests boarded the 5:45 car for the falls and upon their arrival prepared a substantial luncheon. The evening was pleasantly spent by the members of the party by several forms of diversions, while the return trip to the city was made late in the evening.

So many Barre granite producers, including both quarriers and manufacturers, have decided to attend the annual convention of the National Retail Monument Dealers' association in Chicago, Ill., next evening. About 25 of the producers have been chartered for the party. Granite men in the outlying towns of the district are to be included in the delegation, which leaves this city Saturday afternoon at 4:20 o'clock.

Barre friends of men in the 101st ammunition train will be interested and relieved to learn that a cablegram, reading "All well," was received Tuesday morning by Mrs. J. M. Ashley of Burlington from her husband, Major Ashley, of the 101st ammunition train in France. A rumor had been current in some places in the state that the 101st had been shot to pieces, but the message from Major Ashley may be relied upon as accurate.

A canning demonstration that was very interesting and instructive was given in the Spaulding assembly hall yesterday afternoon by the extension service of the University of Vermont. She proved a very interesting speaker and her demonstration of canning, using a minimum amount of sugar, was very practical and helpful. She canned raspberries, peaches, tomatoes, peas and string beans.

A special meeting of the Barre Granite Manufacturers' association was held last evening for the purpose of completing plans for the trip to Chicago, where the National Retailers' association is to convene next week. Among the out of town manufacturers present were: C. D. Swasey and W. H. B. Perry of Waterbury, Frank A. Phillips, M. Chase, George Cross, Levi Cross, N. Pelagri and John Burns of Northfield, and Arthur Provost of West Berlin.

W. W. Lafayette has received a letter from his son, Wallace Lafayette, who is with the American expeditionary forces in France. He is well and having a good time and has been in France for three months. He finds the country an old one and the ways very queer. As he is getting fat, he thinks his friends will not know him when he returns to this country. "Eats" are good and the officers excellent. The one thing lacking which would make for his happiness seems to be letters, which he asks friends to write him.

Gerald Ball arrived in the city last evening from Seneca Falls, N. Y., where he has been employed during the past year, to spend a few days at the home of his mother on Averill street. Mr. Ball, who is a graduate of Spaulding high school, recently passed the physical examination for the U. S. navy at Seneca Falls, and has been ordered to report for duty at one of the South Carolina naval training stations. Mr. Ball expects to leave for South Carolina the first of next week.

Submarine Here Again.

The appearance of German submarines along the American coast, this time within three or four miles of Cape Cod, raises no new danger and suggests no new counsel not already brought into evidence, just seven weeks ago, by the first reports of their activities this side of the Atlantic. If the immediate locality of their operations points to a more determined effort on the part of the U-boat commanders to strike at American troop transports, that is scarcely a novel factor in the situation. From the outset the transports have been the supreme stake for which the U-boats could operate in these waters, and the Germans' eagerness to attain it must as much be taken for granted in respect of the first raid as in this second campaign. By similar token it must be assumed that the supreme concern of the United States navy, apart from its operations in the actual war zone, is still to protect the transports and defend them with all possible power against the submarine menace. Certainly the American public will not for one moment play into the hands of the German purpose by clamoring for any least diversion of whatever strength the navy needs to maintain the lines of troop movement or by counselling any withdrawal of American ships from the active war zone. There the submarines are concentrated, and concentration can only be met by counter-concentration.

As for the new raid itself, if it is designed as a more direct attempt on the transport lanes than the first was, then it has thus far met with still less success, in this regard, than the first did. Although the San Diego was important prey, which may very probably have been taken by a torpedo, it is not by the Orleans affair that the submarines can cover themselves with any particular glory, even of the kind "made in Germany." A tug and three barges, two of them empty, neither represent serious loss to our coastwise shipping nor bear any possible relationship to the transport service. Rather the periculous attack on the barges seems a direct relinquishment of German efforts to bag bigger game, as being, at least for the time, too dangerous for them to attempt.

Yet if the submarines were to operate against any convoy of importance, certainly the weather during the last few days has allowed them conditions as ideal as they ever can have for the purpose. For three days past, especially on Friday when the San Diego was attacked, the sea along this coast has been one great sheet of glass, with just enough mist in the offing to obscure a periscope from more than the smallest chance of detection, while leaving vessels of size quite clearly exposed to a periscope's observation. Whether or not the moon is considered by the Germans as an important factor in timing their operations here, none the less it is worth while observing that each of their two raids has been promoted when the moon was in a favoring phase. The first attacks began on May 25, the very day when the moon reached its full, and continued until the moon was dark. The June moon saw no submarines on the western Atlantic. But just after the July moon had attained its first quarter, on the 18th of this month, the new raids began, this time with moonlight stretching before them for nearly two weeks.

Since the periscope cannot be successfully used without a good measure of actual daylight, the night has not been found a favorable period for submarine operations in the war zone, where the water are so heavily guarded that only the periscope dare be shown. Here, where the protection is less, the U-boats seem much more ready to risk full exposure above the water-line, and so may plan to use the moonlight as freely as one did the sun yesterday, when it remained in view off Orleans, as some reports say, for more than an hour.

When the assurance comes along that all local facilities have been organized for the largest possible measure of aggressive defense, there will be no question of New England's receiving the submarines here as anything more than a compliment which it deserved. First to herald America's need of preparedness, New England should be allowed precisely the near-at-home proof of the justness of her contention which the present raids now afford. New England will receive these attacks as stout-hearted as ever she clamored, many months ago, to be given her chance to share in suppressing the German tyranny that menaces all shores, by black submarine or by still blacker shadow, the entire world over--Boston Transcript.

Pleasant for Those Named. Lane Recorder--The Morrell sisters played a duet and Charles Herbery played several selections on the gramophone. The remainder of the evening was very pleasant.--Boston Transcript.

Strapped, Too. "Society finds its level in a street car," doesn't it?" "Well, it shows how many people who think themselves in good standing are merely hangers-on."--Baltimore American.

Another Raw Recruit. Colonel--Didn't you hear me give the command to fix bayonets? Private--Yes, colonel, but my bayonet is all right; there's nothing wrong about it to be fixed.--Yonkers Statesman.
