GENERAL EDWARDS AT LEGISLATURE

for memorial services to the late George F. Edmunds.
In the House, a night raid on the state system of school supervision was made by Mr. Alexander of St. Albans, who moved to amend H. 250 by reducing the number of supervision districts from 66 to 14, an amendment which was promptly opposed by Mr. Austin of Reading for the committee and Messrs. Tewksbury of Ryegate, McFarland of Hyde Park, Dunham of Brattleboro and Carpenter of Richmond. The amendment was rejected and the bill, which allows superintendents to be removed on appeal to the state commissioner, after hearing by the selectmen, was passed.
The House also killed S. 80, giving jewelers a lien on watches and trinkets left for repair and uncleaned for six months. S. 81, making a penalty for $50 in case of habitual drunkards, was re-committed, as also was H. 146, raising the schedule for total disability under the workmen's compensation law.
The following bills were passed in the House:
S. 42, providing that names of candidates on direct primary ballot be placed in alphabetical order.
S. 59, providing that action in municipal courts may be suspended at any stage of proceedings; S. 74, changing the time in which primary petitions can be filed; H. 239, levying a tax on Windsor county to pay for repairing the courthouse.

Reported by the committee on banking and insurance, as a substitute for H. 225, to amend a method of fixing the value of buildings insured under a policy containing a no-insurance clause. Owner of building under these provisions may ask for appointment of appraisers to set a value upon buildings to be insured. Providing a penalty in case any insurance company declines to follow this act, suspension of right to write business in Vermont for a year. EX-KING NEARLY LOST LIFE IN SCUFFLE
William of Wurttemberg Had Narrow Escape from Drowning While Protecting His Yacht on Lake Constance from Seizure By German Sailors.
Geneva, Monday, March 10.—Former King William of Wurttemberg had a narrow escape from drowning to-day during a scuffle when German sailors from Kiel seized his yacht on Lake Constance for use as a fishing boat.
Disorders along the Rhine towns not under allied occupation are continuing. The German and Austrian consuls have been withdrawn from the Lake Constance territory because of the hostile attitude of the neighboring peasants.

BIG TROLLEY STRIKE
Ordered in Northern New Jersey Early To-morrow.
Newark, N. J., March 11.—A strike on all the traction lines of the Public Service Railway company, operating in northern New Jersey was ordered to-day to begin at 4 a. m. to-morrow by the state headquarters of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees.
The action was announced by William Wegner, chairman of the joint conference board of the street carmen, after the firing of a battle by the workers, which indicated an "overwhelming" sentiment, he said, in favor of a walkout by the 4,500 workers involved. The voting was to continue until 3 p. m. to-day.
The cities affected will be Newark, Paterson, Jersey City and Elizabeth, according to Wegner, in addition to 137 smaller towns in eleven counties.
The men demand union recognition and a nine-hour day with pay for 10 hours. The company offered a plan for a co-operative league providing for collective bargaining, equal representation on committees of workers and company officials and sick and other benefits. The proposal was declined on the ground it was aimed at weakening the influence of the union.

SEAPLANE FOR FISHING FLEET.
Gloucester Fleet May Be Accompanied on April Trip.
Gloucester, Mass., March 11.—When the mackerel sailing fleet of 55 or 60 sails starts for the southern fishing grounds about the middle of April, it will have one or two seaplanes as scouts, if plans of the Gloucester board of trade are perfected. The suggestion has been endorsed as feasible by Hugh H. Smith, commissioner of the bureau of fisheries at Washington, according to a statement issued by the board to-day. Secretary of the Navy Daniels has been asked to assign naval flying boats for the purpose but as yet has made no reply to the proposition.
It is pointed out that the scouting experiment if attempted would have to be under the direction of a practical purse seiner fisherman of an experience in identifying fish schools and estimating their size. Usually mackerel are encountered first in the vicinity of Cape Hatteras and from that point follow the coast north so that airplanes would not be required to go more than 25 miles off shore.

AMELIA E. BARR, AUTHORESS, DEAD

Passed Away at Her Home in New York City—She Began Her Chief Literary Work After She Had Reached the Age of Fifty.
New York, March 11.—Amelia E. Barr, the authoress, died last night at her home in Richmond Hill, this city.
Mrs. Amelia E. Barr passed the first half of her life in comparative obscurity. She ventured upon her first novel when she was 50 years of age. During the following 35 years she produced her books at the rate of about two a year, until she had 63 to her credit. In addition she had written hundreds of short stories, poems and magazine articles. For 15 consecutive years she supplied an average of a poem and a short story a week to one publication.
Tragedies came early in her life. She was born in Ulverston, Lancashire, England, in 1831, with the name of Amelia Huddleston. As a little girl, she lost three young brothers in quick succession by death. Then came straitened finances for the family. She set out as a teacher to earn her own livelihood. Finally settling in Scotland, she met and married at the age of 19 Robert Barr, a young Scotch mill owner. Barr soon lost his mills and money.
The young couple came to America in 1853 to start life anew. They lived and worked in Chicago, Memphis, Harrisburg (Tex.), Galveston and Austin, Mrs. Barr helping out by teaching school.
They were living in comfortable circumstances in Galveston in 1867 when yellow fever swept the city, and during the epidemic Mrs. Barr lost her husband and three sons—all the male members of her family.
She faced life anew for the third time with three daughters and little money. Her attempts at self-support proved to be fruitless in the Texan city. At the age of 40 she arrived in New York.
"I had $5.18 in my purse," she said, "and was absolutely alone in the battle of life, but confident that God and Amelia Barr were a multitude."
She turned to literature for a living.

Henry Ward Beecher employed her on the staff of his new journal, The Christian Union. This led to an acquaintance with many of the leading literary men of the day. Working day and night to support her family, she soon established a market for her literary wares.
"My expenses at the time," said Mrs. Barr, "were $80 a week. I had to make this. Sometimes I made less, sometimes more."
When 50 years old, and confined to her home with illness, she began to elaborate a short story into a novel. The result was her first novel, "Jan Vedder's Wife." From that day until her death, Mrs. Barr wrote novels, short stories, poems and magazine and newspaper articles constantly, and, as she once said: "I never wrote a story which I was unable to sell."
Most of her famous characters were created at her beautiful home, "Cherry Croft," at Cornwall, overlooking the Hudson, where she lived for more than 30 years.
"It is commonly said that authors are their own worst critics," she once remarked. "Nevertheless, I think that 'The Lion's Whelp' is my best book. I read 124 volumes to get the facts. It scored a financial loss. But I had the satisfaction of learning that President Cleveland liked the book so much that he read it three times before laying it aside."
Mrs. Barr was keenly intellectual. She believed in suffrage for all, and she believed in "the old-fashioned religion contained between the two covers of the Bible." She was an ardent believer in reincarnation.

"It is not, in a way, a belief," she explained. "It came to me all at once. That was 30 years ago, and I put my idea of the gradual purification of the soul through successive reincarnations into the book that I was writing at the time, 'Souls in Passage.' And in every book since then I have dropped some little seed that conveys the reincarnation idea."
