Anson Hawks, 12, a Bennington boy, is in the Putnam Memorial hospital with a broken leg and other injuries received when he was run down by an automobile the evening of Memorial day. The victim of the accident was riding a bicycle when he was hit by a car from Hoosick Falls, N. Y. From appearances it would seem that the boy and wheel were dragged about 20 feet after being hit.

The Whitecap club of the Knights of Columbus of Malden, Mass., about 50 members, traveling in nine cars, was at the Hotel Berwick in Rutland over Saturday night. This group of men had been touring the White mountains of New Hampshire. Each year the club takes some such trip, usually into Maine, but the members were so enthusiastic over Vermont scenery they intend to take their whole trip in this state next spring.

Lieut. Commander Walter G. Richardson, U. S. N., who was instantly killed May 29 in an automobile accident near Laconia, N. H., was a former resident of Bennington and his first wife, who was Miss Helen Fairbanks, gave to the village of Bennington the memorial drinking fountain near Putnam square.

In the car with Lieut. Richardson were his son, Frederick, aged 20, and E. M. Matteson, who had been a teacher in the Newton, Mass., high school for 32 years, and both were also instantly killed when a Boston & Maine train wrecked the auto in which the party was on their way to the Richardson summer home at Asquam lake in Holderness, N. H. Lieut. Richardson was in business in Bennington for nine years and left there 21 years ago. He was 59 years old and graduated from the naval academy at Annapolis, Md., in 1880, retiring from service in 1889 because of ill health, but being recalled at the opening of the war with Europe.

Rutland is determined to make examples of law breaking this year so far as automobilists are concerned, and on Saturday Herbert E. Proctor of Waterbury, Mass., was arrested, charged with leaving his machine in front of a hydrant while he got a punch. Mr. Proctor, a tourist, unfamiliar with the ordinances of the city in that regard, paid a fine of $5 and costs, but within a few minutes after he had done so pointed out to the police at the same hydrant where he had been arrested the delivery wagon owned by a former alderman of the city within the restricted district, which is six feet either side of all hydrants within the inner traffic district. Three other automobile parties were taken to the police station during the afternoon, all alleged to have been guilty of disobeying this same ordinance. It is asserted that in other cities where such an infringement of local ordinances is discovered by the police, the tourists are warned and instructed, but not arrested.

MARRIED 72 YEARS.

Mr. and Mrs. Stukely W. Smith of Addison Hale and Hearty at 93 and 94.

Addison, June 3.—Mr. and Mrs. Stukely W. Smith quietly passed their 72nd wedding anniversary May 27 at their home in Addison by receiving the congratulations of a few relatives and dear friends. Mr. Smith, who is 93 years old, is hale and hearty and able to attend to his farm duties. Mrs. Smith is his senior by a year. The whole of their married life has been spent in the home where they are now living. Mr. Smith having moved there when but three years of age.

He was born in Addison February 10, 1826, the son of Amos and Barbara (Westcott) Smith. The Smith family was of French origin, the emigrant from France to this country being the fifth generation removed from Stukely W. Smith. Amos Smith, son of the emigrant, was born in Cheshire, Mass., in 1766, and raised a family of six children, the eldest of whom, Henry, moved to Addison in 1790. He filled the office of justice of the peace for many years and also held all other town offices of importance and represented Addison in the state legislature in 1833-34. He was a prominent anti-slavery man when it cost something to be one.

Henry and Amos Smith, great-grandfather, and grandfather, respectively, of Stukely W. fought at the battle of Plattsburg and both received a land warrant as soldiers of the war of 1812. Stukely W. Smith, like his grandfather, has been elected to all the offices within the gift of the people of the town. He represented Addison in the state legislature in 1858-59, when the late ex-Senator G. F. Edmunds was speaker of the House.

Mrs. Smith's maiden name was Mari-an O. Dorwin, daughter of Wilda and Aurilla (Squire) Dorwin, and was born in Hopkinton, N. Y., Sept. 7, 1825, her parents removing shortly after to Vermont.

Mr. and Mrs. Stukely W. Smith were the parents of three children, Dr. M. D. Smith, a prominent physician of Pelham, N. Y.; Herman H. who died when nine years of age, and Sarah B., wife of Spencer G. Hawley of Addison. The only person present at their marriage who is still living is Mrs. Olin A. Smith of Addison, who was then an infant.

For the first time in 15 years, physicians of Arlington have decided to raise their prices. Their prices after the raise are much lower than those in other places before the last increase.

Rutland is determined to make examples of law breaking this year so far as automobilists are concerned, and on Saturday Herbert E. Proctor of Waterbury, Mass., was arrested, charged with leaving his machine in front of a hydrant while he got a punch. Mr. Proctor, a tourist, unfamiliar with the ordinances of the city in that regard, paid a fine of $5 and costs, but within a few minutes after he had done so pointed out to the police at the same hydrant where he had been arrested the delivery wagon owned by a former alderman of the city within the restricted district, which is six feet either side of all hydrants within the inner traffic district. Three other automobile parties were taken to the police station during the afternoon, all alleged to have been guilty of disobeying this same ordinance. It is asserted that in other cities where such an infringement of local ordinances is discovered by the police, the tourists are warned and instructed, but not arrested.
