U. S. Army Offers Opportunities to Learn Trades.

The air service, motor transport corps, tank corps, construction division of the quartermaster corps, coast artillery and other branches of the U. S. army are in need of young men who have the desire and are capable of being trained for technical trades connected with the service. Experience, though desirable, is not necessary as all branches of the army have schools completely equipped for the beginners as well as those who have had previous training. The tank corps require a number of men capable of being trained as radio operators, mechanics, chauffeurs, tank drivers and gas engine experts. The coast artillery are training men in electricity, clerical, radio, mechanics and other trades. The motor transport corps have fine equipped schools at Camp Holabird, near Baltimore City, for various mechanical courses, while the air service have over 40 branches of work in which the soldier may learn a trade which would be a paying proposition in civilian life at the end of his enlistment. Many other branches of the service are conducting schools and training camps in various parts of the country, usually near a large city and with all modern conveniences for the comfort of the men stationed there. Any information regarding these branches of the army or other information capable of being obtained from the recruiting sergeant, who will be at the postoffice in Barre from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m. Saturday, July 19. Every branch of the army is open for enlistment. The period of enlistment is now one or three years and the pay remains on the war-time basis of $30 per month.

RED CROSS NOTES

What the future is going to hold for the Red Cross is now becoming more evident in its broader aspects. The war program did not end with the armistice, nor has it ended with the signing of the treaty of peace. It will merge gradually into the peace program. A part of our army is still in Europe and, while France is rapidly assuming the responsibilities with her own borders, our work there cannot be terminated abruptly. The calls from Poland, the Balkans, Macedonia and Russia have forced the sending of new commissions to those countries to carry, in the name of the American people, that emergency relief in sickness and suffering which only the Red Cross is organized to carry. Our immediate obligation is clear: to carry through to an effective end at home and abroad the war program undertaken in the name of the American people and endorsed by them. There then remains the inspiring future in which the new spirit of service born of the war and symbolized by the American Red Cross shall be turned to the prevention of disease, the relief of hunger and suffering, and the improvement of the conditions under which we live. Mrs. R. M. Saltonstall, acting director of the New England division bureau of chapter production, is making an appeal to knitters. She says: "There is enough knitting to be done to keep every Red Cross worker busy all through the summer. There is no quota because there is no apparent limit to the number of knitted garments needed. We cannot begin to meet the actual demand, but we can do something to prevent the terrible suffering that these endure the coming winter unless we help provide them with warm clothing. The order to 'stack needles' should be forgotten. It was rescinded long ago, when the signing of the armistice and the cessation of fighting gave Red Cross representatives overseas an opportunity to ascertain the actual conditions existing in eastern Europe. "We have the yarn with which to do the knitting, but our warehouse is no longer filled with a reserve supply of knitted garments. It has been practically stripped, only enough garments being retained to meet emergencies in this country. "Every child's sweater, every pair of child's stockings will be shipped overseas as soon as possible after they are completed and sent in." The bureau of chapter production is preparing summer knitting packets. In each packet there are eight skeins of sock yarn and four skeins of sweater yarn. This material will make five pairs of children's stockings and two children's sweaters. These packets will be distributed free to workers who will agree to make the stockings and sweaters and return the completed articles by Sept. 1 or before that date if possible. The packets will be distributed to workers through the chapters of the division. All women who will take some of this work for the vacation period, are requested to go to the nearest Red Cross chapter for the wool. Limits. "Prohibition will not prevent the moon from getting full," remarked an exchange. Nor the bases, we may add. Neither will it prevent the fog from getting dissipated.—Boston Transcript.
