A slight accident on the corner of Main and Elm streets caused a little excitement last night, when a Ford car, owned and driven by Niles Baruch of this city, approached from Elm street and narrowly escaped a good smash when a big Cadillac belonging to Clifton Heaton of Montpelier bumped into the side of the little car, causing it to be thrown out of its course several feet. Gov. W. W. Clement, State Highway Commissioner S. R. Bates and State Engineer H. M. McIntosh returned last night from their visit to the site of the proposed repairs in the road between Highgate Springs and Phillipsburg, Canada, about 3.15 miles to join a permanent road that the Canadian government is constructing to make Highgate Springs a summer resort of prominence. The federal engineer and Mr. McIntosh are looking over the project again to-day.

The town of Albany at a meeting yesterday voted to borrow $4,440 to make possible the completion of a road contract on which the state offered to pay $6,000. G. L. Gregoire of Barre was the lowest bidder on the contract.

One of the boilers at the Pioneer plant was put out of commission temporarily, at least, to-day, when a leaky flue started an oil smudge in the boiler. The plant was soon filled with smoke, but there was no damage to the building. The fire under the boiler was drawn, and when the boiler cools it will be possible to determine what damage, if any, was done.

WHO HAS PICTURE OF OUR LARGEST TREES? Who has pictures of our largest trees? The American Forestry association wants it. The association also wants pictures of trees with a history connected with them and a short account of why the tree is famous. The largest not-bearing tree in the United States is a valley oak on the ranch of B. F. Gruver in San Benito county, California. It is 37 feet, six inches in circumference and it is claimed it produces a ton of acorns every year. Many have claimed the Hooker oak of Chico, Cal., was the largest, but this tree is 21 feet, eight inches in circumference. The largest tree in the non-not-bearing class of hardwoods is a sycamore near Wardington, Ind., and the acorn tree is the largest hardwood tree in North America.

PRESENT PURSE TO IRONSIDE

Congress? in favor of sending their decision to President Wilson and asking him to communicate the suggestions to congress, supporting the postal employees in their request for a reclassification of salary that the convention urged Governor Clement of the state of Vermont to call a reconstruction convention of employers and representatives of employees for the purpose of devising ways and means for bringing about necessary readjustment in the industrial life of the state.

That the state branch assembled requests that U. S. employment service be continued as a permanent function of government at Burlington and Rutland and that other offices in Vermont be abolished, and that Congress and the general assembly make ample appropriations for these purposes.

That the governor be requested to appoint a committee to inquire into the high cost of living and that a labor man be one of the committee so appointed and further pledge themselves to maintain a decent standard of living for all who toil.

Commissioner of Industries Spoke. There were some drastic things said yesterday afternoon during the reports of the delegates, particularly as to the conditions at Barre, stonehills and the quarries and in Burlington, and the commissioner of industries' attention was called to these matters.

Commissioner of Industries John S. Buttles came to the hall with some information wanted by the officers and was invited to speak to them and then listen to some suggestions from the members. Mr. Buttles spoke for only a few minutes, explaining that he is new as commissioner and that the work was new to him, so they must not expect too much of him at first, but if persons thought they were not getting a fair deal to approach him on the matter. He asked the delegates to report matters to him which in his judgment should be improved. He believed that the employees do not all understand their rights under the workingmen's compensation act and he urged them to post themselves.

Alex. Ironside inquired if he had seen the letter which the governor sent to R. W. Simonds June 19 relative to improving the dust condition in granite sheds. Mr. Buttles replied he had not, but that he had the matter under consideration and that something was being worked out on the matter relative to dust removers in sheds.

Mr. Ironside asked that a woman inspector of the factories be appointed. He claimed that $10,000 was all there was for two years, leaving out salaries, and claimed this sum too small to do the work of the office. When Mr. Buttles was present a complaint was made about the conditions under which they work at the granite quarries. M. D. Sullivan stating that in one quarry there is a ladder 250 feet long and that most of the time there are two railings but at times none. He advocated a double ladder with three railings. The condition in which the grout is piled up near the quarries was called to the commissioner's attention.

Alderman Germain of Rutland referred to the lack of inspection in Rutland where girls were employed on the third floor of a building without suitable fire escapes. Mr. Ironside referred to the granite quarry conditions as damnable and Mr. Buttles spoke of them as deplorable.

Mr. Buttles agreed there was merit in

Mr. Ironside's request for a woman inspector of factories.

Mr. Ironside urged that their is need of more field workers and he invited the commissioner to inspect the quarries relative to the ladders and other dangerous conditions and not confine his visit to calling at the office of the companies. He criticized Mr. Simonds for failure to report conditions that he found, thus failing to urge the legislation that should be given the laborers. Mr. Ironside referred to the little dust removing machines used in Wisconsin and said that until the manufacturers do something along that line other than to raise wages they cannot get young men to learn the trade of cutting stone.

Mr. Sutor called attention to the dangerous condition around some of the grout piles, how some time ago one slid into a quarry but fortunately it was at a time when the men were not on the job, so they escaped injury.

The Burlington Chocolate Factory Strike. The attention of the commissioner to the working conditions at the chocolate factory in Burlington was urged as well as to some other industries.

After Mr. Buttles had retired, Mr. Mason explained at some length the details of the unorganized strike that took place at the chocolate company's plant, of the organization formed after the girls had left the place and the improvements they obtained in working conditions. He also explained the trouble that occurred with the University of Vermont, where non-union help was employed but which was straightened out. He said that Alex. Ironside, the state secretary, was called to Burlington and a conference between Mr. Mason, Mr. Ironside and Mr. Buttles occurred, in which the adjustment was satisfactory and the non-union painters employed a few weeks since left the job.

Mr. Mason explained the card system that was used in the traction company strike and stated that the employees are now 100 per cent organized. A member of the carpenters' union, in making his report, referred again to the locked doors of the chocolate factory while help was working therein. The report also showed that good work and progress has been made by the carpenters in Burlington. The same was true of the painters and plumbers, while the metal workers stated that since they had organized one plant, which makes ovens, has been unable, although working overtime, to fill the orders.

C. H. Reagan for the Central Labor union of Montpelier reported good progress and seven unions in Burlington. He reported that the final condition is good with the cutters, having plenty of work and the increase of Aug. 1 was appreciated. Clyde Brigham, for the trolley car men, had nothing other than good progress to report.

The report of the Central Labor union in Barre by Mr. Ironside showed 21 branches, all doing well; help scarce, and reference was also made to the recent increase in wages for the cutters. Mr. Lund, for the cutters, added a little to the foregoing report, stating in closing that the cutters were living up to their agreement and looking for all that was coming to them. Mr. Sutor reported for the polishers relative to their increase and that a general plan for uniform scale is being formulated so that it may take effect before their scale of wages expires. Mr. Hall, for the carpenters, reported a small increase in wages per hour.

The Rutland iron workers reported a 20 per cent raise and that everything is going along nicely. Other branches also made reports.
