The new comet is visible through a small telescope in the eastern sky during the early evening and is moving rapidly northward, indicating that it is fairly close to the earth.

The War Labor Board.

The greatest usefulness of the war labor board, which came into being by presidential proclamation and passes out of existence by failure of funds and the end of the emergency, is shown in the fact that in 15-months' existence it adjusted more than 1200 labor disputes. Since Dec. 6 it has dealt only with disputes voluntarily submitted by both parties. The respect commanded by its record, by its absolutely fair representation of labor, capital and the public and by the personality of its heads, continued to bring a large number before it. Henceforth the country has no such general national agency for conciliation and arbitration, though the department of labor may provide for a judicial settlement when properly appealed to. The mediators of the department were increasingly busy in the period before the creation of the war labor board. In the fiscal year 1914-15 they intervened in 32 cases and adjusted in the 10 months ending Sept. 15, 1919, they intervened in 421 disputes. We must hope that with the disappearance of the war labor board the disposition of labor and capital to seek a peaceful solution of their quarrels will not diminish.—New York Evening Post.

THRIFT THE WATCHWORD.

Mrs. Myra B. Lord Addresses Representatives of Women's Organizations.

"Thrifty" was the watchword at a meeting of representatives of various women's organizations throughout the state, who gathered at Burlington Tuesday afternoon to hear an address by Mrs. Myra B. Lord of Boston, district director of the bureau of women's organizations. Plans were outlined for the furtherance of thrift through the medium of women's organizations.

Mrs. Lord outlined a general plan for establishing a complete state-wide machine perfected down to a thorough organization of every community, the ideal of which is the financial betterment of every person in that community.

"During the war," said Mrs. Lord, "the women never hesitated at anything, doing everything the government asked them to do, because this spirit of service was such a valuable asset to the world, the government felt that if it could get the women lined up behind this thrift movement it would be the biggest possible factor for its success."

Mrs. Lord then said that what was wanted was a thrift chairman in every woman's organization. The movement is already organized nationally. During the war people were thrifty to help the government. Now they are asked to be thrifty to benefit the individual, the community and the nation. It is asked: (1) That people put aside a certain portion of their money when they get it, instead of spending it all; (2) that they invest wisely, in something that pays a reasonable rate of interest and that they will not have to worry about; (3) that they spend the rest wisely; (4) that, having bought wisely, they use what they buy with as much care as if it were money.

"Buying with thrift stamps is an easy way to save small sums," said Mrs. Lord. "We do not say it is the only way to invest. Put it in the savings banks, farm mortgages, or in any investment your banker recommends so long as you are sure it is a safe investment."

Each thrift chairman is asked to organize and make her club or society one hundred per cent thrifty. The personal agreement pledge will be signed, each member thus indicating that she thinks war savings stamps a good investment and promising to save regularly for the purpose of investing in them.

Mrs. Lord also spoke regarding salvage waste matter into money; "turning trash into cash." This is done through junk dealers, jewelers and other dealers.

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health today were it not for the deadly drug Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed; and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read directions. Nicotol is the only medicine Doctor Connor soon to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine poisoning and how to avoid it. CURRENT COMMENT

Those Who Borrow the Paper.

The Vermont press is having much to say about the habit of borrowing papers. While it may be said in general that we believe this is practiced as little in this vicinity as anywhere, there are conspicuous examples to the contrary. What can be more exasperating to a subscriber (or to the publisher) than the persistent sponging of a nickel's worth of reading from the home newspaper each week? It is an established fact that every paper is read in more households than it has subscribers, and that circulation figures seldom show the actual purchasing power of a country paper, but the chronic borrower of a paper may be classed little short of a pest and a slacker.—Barton Monitor.

Frank W. Agan As Governor Material.

No possibility for the Vermont governorship in 1920 has thus far been mentioned who seems to be recognized as filling the requirements quite as well as Frank W. Agan of Ludlow. If Mr. Agan is a candidate and is selected, the state is certain to get a man of the most desirable age and experience—a splendid executive. It goes without saying that Mr. Agan would not seek or accept the high position as an honor for himself. To him it would be an opportunity for service, for hard contention, loyal service to the state which he loves beyond all else and where he has made a conspicuous success as a captain of industry. Keep the Ludlow man in mind; study him. The more one knows Agan the more faith he has in him.—Rutland News.

"One-Arm" Auto Drivers.

Secretary of State Black is certainly doing some good work in revoking the licenses of reckless and fast auto drivers. There is another class of fool drivers that he should get after, viz., the "one-arm" driver. The writer recently saw a dangerous and amusing sample of the "one-arm" act. As the car in which he was riding, between Montpelier and Waterbury, was going around a curve, he met a car with a lady at the wheel. She had one arm around her companion's neck and his arm was encircling her waist. Hugging bees are all right enough in the parlor, but not in an auto, especially when the machine is in motion. We hope Harry, in issuing licenses in the future, will notify applicant that if caught doing the "one-arm" act he will have his license revoked.—Bristol Herald.

The Rights of Readers.

A St. Johnsbury lawyer has taken the daily paper of that city to task for interesting patent medicine advertisements through its news columns whereupon the publisher retorts that he is in business for something more than his health. Probably it is a simple difference of opinion on the part of the two men looking at something from a different viewpoint and while recognizing that certain advertisers demand and secure space in the news columns we wonder if the St. Johnsbury lawyer has not a good basis for his objections.

When a man buys a newspaper to scan the local columns it is probably irritating for him to wade through too many patent medicine readers and undoubtedly the solution of the matter would be for publishers to exclude such readers from among their news items and run them at the bottom of the columns.

Subscribers have certain rights which can scarcely be encroached upon even under the guise of business necessity and sometimes we think the point of view of the readers receives too little consideration and the point of view of the advertiser too much.

Since advertisers come to a paper only in proportion to the number of readers, inclination to please such readers might be more of a consideration with the average publisher than it is and very few but what transgress at some time or another.—Burlington News.

The Mexican Expedition.

The pursuit of Mexican bandits by an American armed force, following a "hot trail," takes on peculiar interest in view of the government's recent sharp warning to Mexico. The expedition on its face is only one more of a series carried out by agreement with the Mexican president and under the sanction of international law. Its justification is a peculiarly flagrant defiance of law and order and an insult to the United States.

GOOD VALUES
This week we are showing good values in Shirt Waists and Black Petticoats. Come in and look them over.
Lee & Clara B. Shortt
Marshfield, Vt.

The two American aviators landed in Mexico because they had lost their way. They appealed for help and trusted to their supposed rescuers. They were not deliberately courting trouble by going where danger was known to lurk nor were they connected with any private interest accused or suspected of desiring to exploit Mexican resources at the expense of Mexico or its people.

The circumstances of this particular outrage, although American officers were its victims, were, however, not essentially different from those of the many that have preceded it, so far as the Mexican government is concerned. It illustrates in precisely the same way the "unwillingness or inability" of Carranza to protect foreigners from wanton attack when engaged in their legitimate business. Of itself alone it does not justify the "radical change" of American policy threatened in the recent note.

Secretary Lansing last Friday described armed intervention as the "remotest possibility." There seems to be no reason to suppose that the situation has materially altered meanwhile or that there is any intention of making the present expedition the forerunner of a more serious movement. It is certainly to be hoped that Carranza will meet the reasonable American demand by vigorous action of some sort. Perfect order or perfect safety for America is not to be expected; nor would it be possible under American occupation. It is, on the other hand, proper to expect, and to demand, that the rights of Americans in Mexico shall be protected by every means so far as possible. What these are under the circumstances the American government must judge in determining its policy. It realizes, of course, that it is the sinister desire of certain private American interests to embroil this country in actual war with Mexico, and that such a necessity would be most deplorable.—Springfield Republican.

Good Taste in Stations.

The posters of the war and treasury departments which, in large numbers, are seen everywhere in railroad stations, afford a good index of the efficiency of the station master. They give loud testimony to his taste and neatness—or to the lack of these qualities. There are numerous villages, here and there, in which the railroad station is the most prominent—or the only—public building in which neat "housekeeping" is exemplified. We have seen such stations. There are also a good many stations of the opposite kind—a fact which, perhaps, it is not necessary to recall to our readers.

These posters—large and small, colored and plain, of pleasing design and some not so pleasing—are issued quite frequently, and the care which the regional directors have been taking to put them up in waiting rooms (and cars) suggests that they call for serious attention. Ragged edges and big spots of dirt, when added to carelessness in posting or in selecting places for posting, spoil much of the good effect which it is desired to produce.

The station master who neglects these details is to be classed as inefficient. This may sound like a rather severe indictment, but will not the testimony of all first-class trainmasters confirm it?

It is to be hoped that Senator Dillingham may be permitted to round out his splendid congressional career by seeing incorporated into federal law a workable, reasonable system to fashion the immigration into the country so that its strength as a republic will be increased rather than weakened by the inflow of foreign blood. If he is permitted this, it will be an accomplishment of untold benefit to the country.—Rutland News.

Even chronic cases of 20 to 30 years' standing, with profuse bleeding, have been completely cured in from three to ten days.

No discovery of recent years in the field of medicine has caused such a stir amongst the medical profession as the recent discovery that piles can be successfully treated and cured at home by a wonderful prescription known to druggists as Miro File Remedy.

It has been proved that so-called external remedies applied or inserted into the rectum cannot cure piles and at the best only give temporary relief. This is also true of surgical operations, which simply remove them after formation, but in no wise act on the source of the trouble.

This prescription, although taken internally, is not digested in the stomach, but is rapidly passed on unchanged to the intestines in a short time, reaching the exact place where by its soothing, healing action, it first allays all inflammation and then by direct contact with all ulcers and piles, causes them to heal and disappear forever. It's positively marvelous how speedily it acts. Bleeding often comes in two or three days at most, even in cases with profuse bleeding that have resisted all known treatments and operation, really wonderful results have been accomplished.

IMPORTANT.—What is known as itching piles are not piles in the true sense of the word, although this condition may accompany a true case of piles. For this condition Miro File Ointment has been found to be of every case it is not necessary to take the internal prescription. If your druggist cannot supply you, we will gladly send you the true Miro File Ointment in receipt of price, Internal Treatment $1.50, war tax 5c, Ointment 50c, war tax 5c extra.
