NINTH GAME AT CINCINNATI In Case Chicago Should Win To-day's Game.

Cincinnati, Oct. 9.—The ninth game of the world's series of 1919, if it becomes necessary, will be played at Redland field here. This announcement was made by the national baseball commission at the end of yesterday's game, the statement reading that Cincinnati had won the toss and had chosen to play it here.

Signs of worms are: Constipation, sour stomach, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full belly with occasional gripings and pains about the navel, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nose, itching of the rectum, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red points sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever.

PLAYERS KEYED TO HIGH PITCH

White Sox Eager for Game Which Will Tie the Series

CINCINNATI ANXIOUS OVER THEIR DEFEATS

The Eighth Game Is to Be Played at Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 9.—A forecast of showers with moderate temperature caused uncertainty this morning about the eighth world series game. Cheered by the second successive victory, the White Sox returned to Chicago to-day to make a determined effort to draw abreast the Reds.

Needing but a single game to bring his team the championship, Pat Moran was expected to send "Hod" Eller to the mound to-day. Eller established the world series record of six successive strikeouts when he held the Sox to three hits, one a scratch, in the game here Monday when Cincinnati won, 5 to 0. Claude Williams, twice defeated by the Red Legs but holding them to an aggregate of eight hits in the two games, was expected to be Gleason's election for mound duty.

Williams' pitching was of high order but each time he opposed twirlers before whom the White Sox heavy hitters virtually were powerless. With the assertion that "his boys" had recovered their betting wits and fighting spirit, as was evidenced yesterday and Tuesday when they battled from the box Rether and Sallee, who overcame them in the first two battles, Gleason was confident his star left-hander would pitch a comeback game as did Cicotte yesterday.

Moran seemed confident to-day he would end the series, making unnecessary the ninth game to-morrow at Cincinnati.

Interest in the series at Chicago was renewed by the comeback the White Sox staged and the prospect was that a capacity crowd would be out.

"Red" Faber, hero of the 1917 world's series, was mentioned as a White Sox pitching possibility to-day, but the consensus of opinion was that Williams would be given the honor. Faber is said to have recovered form, though he was virtually on the retired list all the season.

In their renewed hope that the White Sox yet would win the series, local enthusiasts began to cast about for precedents. In no world's series has a club won four straight games when its opponents needed but a single contest. In 1907 Frank Chance's old Chicago Cub machine took four straight from Detroit after the first game ended in a tie, and four straight victories by the Boston Nationals over the Philadelphia Americans, and by the Boston Americans from the Philadelphia Nationals after the latter had taken the first game also were won.

Few wagers on the outcome of the series were reported to-day. Prevailing odds on the series apparently were 3 to 4, with even money on to-day's game.

Keep it handy to promote prompt relief from rheumatic pains and aches

WHEN you know what Sloan's Liniment will do, as thousands of men and women the world over know, you, too, will keep it handy. You will use it for those "twinges of rheumatism" for relieving that lame back, muscle stiffness and soreness, aches, all sorts of external pains, and exposure aftermaths.

SALLEE WAS KNOCKED OUT And Cicotte Pitched White Sox to 4 to 1 Victory.

Cincinnati, Oct. 9.—Chicago took the seventh game of the world's series of 1919 here yesterday by a score of 4 to 1. The first two runs scored by the American leaguers were the result of clean hitting, while the second two resulted from errors by the Reds, intermingled with two hits.

Cicotte pitched his first win in the series, after dropping two to the National leaguers. The Cincinnati club fielded wretchedly although with Cicotte's pitching, it cannot be said that this caused them to lose the game.

The Sox hit Sallee hard but could do little with the offerings of Fisher and Luque.

The Reds caused some excitement in their half of the ninth by getting two clean hits after two men were out but at this juncture Cicotte tightened up and after getting three balls and two strikes on Rath, forced him to fly out to Felsch, thus ending the game. The score:

SCHOOLS LAUDED FOR WAR WORK

Commissioner Hillegas Outlines Some of the Accomplishments

SCHOOLS ORGANIZED WITHIN ONE WEEK

A Large Army of Crop Producers Was at Once Formed

A tribute to the part paid by Vermont teachers and public school children of Vermont in the period of the world war was paid to-day by State Commissioner of Education M. B. Hillegas at the convention of the Vermont Teachers' association in Montpelier. Mr. Hillegas said:

"During the period of the war all citizens were asked to render unusual services to the government. No one group or class of citizens other than the young men who entered the army can be singled out and praised for remarkable efforts to meet their country's demands. The farmers of the state responded nobly to the request for increased food production. The housewives were equally helpful in their uncomplaining efforts to economize food. No group or institution responded any more generously in time and effort than did the teachers and the public schools of Vermont. I have been requested to enumerate some of the more important services rendered by teachers and pupils.

"Within one week from the time that our country entered the war the schools of the state had been organized for the purpose of increasing the food supply. The public safety committee of Vermont manifested their confidence in the importance of the schools' activities in this matter by voting a credit which eventually amounted to $10,000 for the purpose of assisting in organizing the work and in moving seed from one part of the state to another.

"Hon. Fraser Metzger of Randolph served without recompense for a period of several months in organizing and leading the campaign. Under his leadership carloads of potatoes were moved from sections where seed potatoes were abundant into other sections where they were unable to secure them. Many bushels of seed beans were also transferred. During the summer of 1917 two carloads of fruit cans were purchased and sold at cost to the school children of the state.

"The district superintendents of schools almost without exception devoted their entire summer to the close supervision of this work. Nearly all of the rural school teachers and many of those who were engaged in villages and cities spent much time and energy in assisting the boys and girls. More than 150 teachers devoted their entire summer to this work and in return received credit toward their certificate.

Campaign for Food Production.

"This was a campaign conducted primarily to increase food production. It did not seem advisable to call for detailed reports and records other than those involved in the financial transactions that may have taken place. It is, therefore, impossible to indicate the exact number of boys and girls who were enrolled in what came to be known as the 'Green Mountain Guard.' It is safe to say that not less than 20,000 of the pupils below high school assisted in gardening, food production and food conservation during the summer.

"The results have been tabulated and are reasonably accurate. It developed that during this summer the members of the Green Mountain Guard produced at least 28,691 bushels of potatoes, 2,000 bushels of beans, 17,762 bushels of corn and canned 49,095 quarts. In addition to this large quantities of other vegetables were produced.

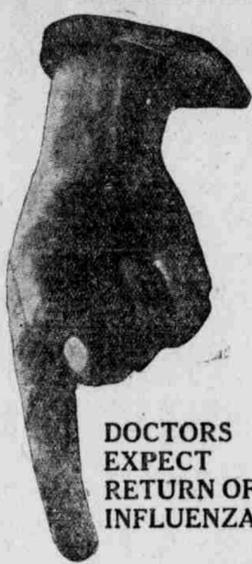

"The work thus undertaken should not be confused with school garden activities. The children's assistance in the home garden was urged and while many children had their own gardens, by far the greater number worked to better advantage with father and mother.

"There is every reason to believe that during this first year of the war the teachers and children of Vermont did more in proportion toward food production and conservation than was accomplished in any other state.

"At a meeting of the department of superintendents held in Atlantic City early in 1918, a school principal from one of the New Jersey cities presented to the convention what was there regarded as a remarkable achievement in food production by school children. In the audience was a superintendent of Vermont who represented a city of less than one-half the size of the New Jersey place. The Vermont superintendent might have given, had he been privileged, a statement of achievements for his city which would have surpassed by more than one-half what had been accomplished in the New Jersey city of twice the size. The speaker in the course of his address gave his aims and ambitions for the coming year, yet these did not surpass the achievements of the smaller Vermont city for the previous year.

"It often happens that some of the by-products in school work are of very great importance. This was certainly true of the Green Mountain Guard. The results have been tabulated and are reasonably accurate. It developed that during this summer the members of the Green Mountain Guard produced at least 28,691 bushels of potatoes, 2,000 bushels of beans, 17,762 bushels of corn and canned 49,095 quarts. In addition to this large quantities of other vegetables were produced.

"During the winter of 1917-18 the state board of education entered into an agreement with the extension department of the state college of agriculture by which the Green Mountain Guard was combined with the boys' and girls' club work and the state college of agriculture assumed financial obligation for proper organization and supervision. "During that year 25,000 children were enrolled, doing 33,000 different pieces of work which produced garden produce to the value of $72,435.04. "This in brief represents the achievement of the public schools in food pro-

War Savings Work.

"Late in 1917 the government issued an appeal for funds to be raised through war savings stamps and certificates. To this call the school children of Vermont and their teachers responded in a most gratifying manner. Within three months from the time the movement was instituted many of the schools had 100 per cent enrolled. The signing of the armistice came before the close of the first year and detailed reports were not collected. It is the firm belief of those who directed the work in Vermont that no state surpassed Vermont in the achievement of its school children.

"Soon after the beginning of the campaign the state board of education published and distributed to the schools of the state a book intended to assist in the teaching of thrift. It will be of interest to the teachers and citizens of Vermont to know that this book, written by Mr. Clyde V. Hill, supervisor of junior high schools, and Mr. John M. Avery, formerly state reference librarian, has
