Although Their Team Will Be Without Services of Keck, Star Tackle

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 8.—The first of the gridiron clashes of the season to-day between Princeton and Harvard attracted thousands of alumni from all sections of the country.

Harvard entered the game the favorite, but despite this and the loss of Keck, Princeton's star left tackle, through an injury, Orange and Black supporters placed their confidence in the fighting spirit of the Tigers and declared they expected them to win.

WHAT GOOD IS WEALTH

If you are in poor health, if almost everything that you eat distresses you, frequent headaches, pains in the stomach, bad taste in the mouth, dark rings under the eyes, etc. The fact is, life is not worth living if you are a chronic sufferer from indigestion and biliousness.

When the stomach is out of order, the liver not working properly, your heart is obliged to do so much extra work, that it causes palpitation, faintness, and if not checked becomes dangerous.

To feel fresh and fit for your daily duties, you must keep your stomach well, your liver active, and the bowels regular; you can get into this healthy condition by taking SEVEN BARKS, a digestive tonic, and stomach remedy, it has no equal, and 50 years of continuous sale proves its wonderful merit.

Get at the root of your indigestion and constipation trouble by driving all poisons out of your system for good. No matter how chronic your case is, you can get quick relief by taking nature's remedy, SEVEN BARKS; one bottle costing 50c will prove its value.

After you have proven its wonderful efficiency, you will never be without it. Ask your druggist for it.—Adv.

OVER BILLION PURCHASED.

In Thrift Stamps, War Stamps and Treasury Saving Statistics. Boston, Nov. 7.—Evidence that the national thrift campaign has been a success to date is indicated by figures which recently came from the treasury department at Washington to the savings division, first federal reserve district, which comprises the New England states. They show that more than $1,107,000,000 has been realized through the sale of thrift stamps, war stamps and treasury savings certificates at a cost of only $5,947,424.

Commenting on these figures Mrs. Francis L. Higginson, director of savings, first federal reserve district, states: "It is certainly with a great deal of pleasure that the war savings workers view these figures from Washington. The cost of the campaign, which is a trifle over one-half of one per cent, is certainly worthy of notice. Without taking any glory away from any of our government campaigns, I think it is safe to say that the war savings campaign is one that has won the heart of the great American people."

As Secretary Glass has previously announced, thrift stamps, war savings stamps and treasury savings certificates will be available for purchase indefinitely. The design for the 1920 war savings stamp is now being completed. Secretary Glass' statement issued with these figures states: "Figures since compiled showing the expense of the government savings and investment movement and the return from the sales of the smaller denomination securities up to and including Sept. 30 of the present year. While, naturally, with the termination of the present campaign, the present tendency to waste and extravagance which have come as a reaction from the war-time economies, are beginning to have their effects. The present showing of expense versus return is a gratifying one."

Reserve figures received at the headquarters of the savings division, first federal district, show that after a steady decrease in the sales of thrift stamps, war savings stamps and treasury savings certificates, after the signing of the armistice, these securities began to be in great demand in August and September, and reports now indicate that there will still be a more substantial increase.

OHIO ELECTION STILL IN DOUBT

But Repeal of State-Wide Prohibition Appears to Have Been Defeated

2.75 PER CENT BEER ALSO SEEMS LOST

Prohibition Enforcement Measure Was Defeated by About 25,000

Columbus, O., Nov. 8.—Whether Ohio voters last Tuesday approved or repudiated the action of the legislature in ratifying the federal prohibition amendment probably will not be known definitely for a week or ten days.

The vote as tabulated by the secretary of state's office was so close to-day that it was apparent that nothing but the official count could determine the result.

Complete official and unofficial returns from 87 of the 88 counties, however, showed that repeal of state-wide prohibition had been defeated by approximately 30,000; that the proposal to manufacture beers and wines containing up to 2.75 per cent alcohol had been defeated by approximately 15,000, and that the federal reserve district enforcement act had been defeated by approximately 25,000.

The returns from the 87 counties with several precincts missing gave the wets a majority of only 678 against ratification.

ROMANCE AND THE PRESS.

With Recent News Story from Illinois as a Basis. Out of deference to historical accuracy it ought to be recorded that the coroner's verdict on the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Tanner at a railroad crossing in Illinois makes no mention of the romantic circumstances which caused their story to be conspicuously reported by the entire American press and to become in many places a subject for editorial meditation. At the time it was said that the woman had caught her foot between the rail and the plank, and that her husband, having cried in vain to free her, voluntarily met death at her side. The question debated was, "Did the husband do right?"

When the story was printed, skeptics also asked questions. For one thing, they wondered who was there to hear and Mrs. Tanner with his wife. Something was said, to be sure, about a flagman. But it appears that the flagman cannot speak or understand English to any extent, and that he was not near the couple, but was trying to get near them, and was injured while doing so.

The coroner's verdict does not show that the woman's foot was caught. The findings with regard to the man and woman are the same—they met death while crossing the track. There is no mention of suicide.

So full credit for the thrilling story of a husband's mad devotion must be given to an ingenious and imaginative reporter. Will the public wish to be disillusioned? English observers have sometimes said that Americans demand from their newspapers just this romantic embellishment of life. A. B. Walkley, dramatic critic of the London Times, when he came to the United States a decade ago—10 years ago next month to be exact—to assist at the opening of the ill fated New Theatre in New York, thought that both in our drama and in our press we Americans were "prone to forego the satisfaction of the real for the delight of the romantic."

"What," he asked, "take the most familiar instance, is the typical American newspaper today, with its ruthless sacrifice of accuracy to picturesque, with its persistent determination to make every piece of news a thrill, if not a great engine for romanticizing the events of every-day life?"

If it is true that the public relishes the romanticizing of events, is it because life itself affords the average person, engaged in a humdrum occupation, so few opportunities for heroism? For sacrifice there are surely opportunities enough, though not perhaps of the heroic order. Or is it because we like to see human nature portrayed as more spontaneous, more altruistic, more willing to stake everything on a glorious chance, than we find ourselves and the ordinary people about us? The trait, though not conducive to clear thinking, is not unamiable. It may even express the intrinsic idealism of mankind—or, at all events, of Americans. But there is just the danger that it may cause us to overlook the unostentatious occasions for sacrifice, for disinterested effort, for ethical self-realization, that are always close at hand. And its effects on the national literary taste are undoubtedly deplorable. The Tanner story has produced some incidental benefits. By contributing money for the orphaned children of Mr. and Mrs. Tanner some have learned anew the lesson that it is more blessed to give than to receive. The editorial discussion has not been wasted, for the principles abide, even though the illustration was imaginary. But it must be said that the same amount of critical insight applied to the reports of the incident would have disclosed therein a large measure of stark improbability.—Springfield Republican.

Alaska Produces Tin. The tin mines of Alaska produced 226,000 pounds of tin, valued at $118,000, in 1918, according to the U. S. geological survey, department of the interior. These figures may be compared with 200,000 pounds, valued at $123,300, in 1917. The decrease in output in 1918 was due to the fact that only one dredge was operated. Additional tin, however, was recovered by sluicing. The first important production of Alaska tin was reported in 1902, when the output was 15 tons. Since 1912 the average has been over 100 tons annually.

The recent discovery of placer tin has been reported from Putnam and Humboldt creeks, on Seward peninsula, and from Moran creek, a tributary of Meloi river, where the gravels are said to contain 2 1/2 pounds of tin and 10 cents' worth of gold to the cubic yard.

REINDEER MEAT TO MARKET. The Herds of the Deer Will Number Millions in 20 Years. Best cuts of reindeer meat now bring $1 to $1.25 a pound in the markets of Seattle, Portland and San Francisco. Most of it comes by way of Nome, from various points in northern Alaska, the carcasses being shipped whole, and consigned to cold storage firms in the cities mentioned.

The United States bureau of education, which has managed the Alaskan reindeer enterprise ever since it was first undertaken 27 years ago, says that 20 years from now there will be 2,000,000 of the animals in that territory. Already the vast herds number a total of about 140,000.

In western Alaska there are 400,000 square miles of treeless country admirably adapted for reindeer, affording plenty of pasturage in the shape of moss and other vegetation suited to the animals' needs. Half a century from now reindeer by millions will be browsing over that region in vast herds. They will rival in numbers the buffalo.

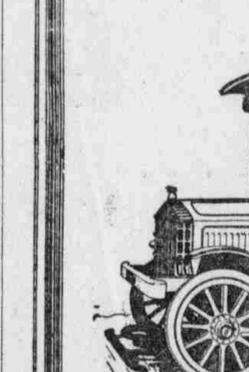

It is believed that 50 years hence there will be 10,000,000 reindeer in Alaska; and of this number (killing off the surplus males) 2,000,000 can be sent to market annually without diminishing the stock. Inasmuch as the animals weigh from 200 to 250 pounds, one may realize how enormous their contribution to the meat supply of the United States is likely to be.

The natural habitat of the reindeer extends through northern Asia, Europe and America, clear around the Arctic circle; but the two native "barb" have never been domesticated.

FIRST RESERVATION TO TREATY APPROVED

Senate Retains Provision Which Requires Acceptance of the Reservations by the Other Powers.

Washington, Nov. 8.—In the first test of strength on the reservations to the peace treaty proposed by the foreign relations committee, the Senate refused yesterday, by a vote of 48 to 40, to strike out the provision which would require acceptance of the reservations by the other powers.

Senator McCumber, North Dakota, was the only Republican who voted to strike out. Three Democrats, Reed of Missouri, Walsh of Massachusetts and Gore of Oklahoma, voted with the Republican majority.

By the same vote and with the same partisan alignment, the Senate rejected another amendment offered by Senator McCumber to the preamble, proposing that acceptance of reservations "might be" effected by exchange of diplomatic notes. The committee preamble requires such an exchange of notes.

The Senate also rejected a proposal by Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, to require that all four instead of three of the great powers be required to accept the reservations. On this vote the mild reservation group of Republicans swung over with the Democrats.

KILLING TUBERCULAR CATTLE.

Average of 30 Per Day at Plant of Burlington Rendering Co.

Burlington, Nov. 7.—Many hundreds of cattle are being slaughtered at the plant of the Burlington Rendering Co. as a result of the crusade against tubercular herds, the average number killed at the plant at present being about 30 per day. Never in the history of the state have infected cattle been disposed of at anything like the present rate. On some days last week as many as 60 infected cows arrived at the plant.

The reason that so many cattle are found to be infected is that new herds are being tested all the time. The United States is co-operating with Vermont, and $240,000 has been appropriated to defray the expenses of the tests. The government pays one-half of this and the state of Vermont pays the other half. The owners of the cattle are paid three-fourths of the appraised value.

Owing to the campaign against tubercular cattle, the more progressive owners of herds want their cattle tested and on the other hand object to having their cattle tested as they are being tested all the time. In the old days a farmer might dispose of his cattle when they were found to be infected but that day is about past. If a herd is tested at the expense of the government, the owner must agree not to import any other cattle which have not been found clean.

The large appropriation of the United States and Vermont makes it possible to go over the state pretty thoroughly and to an extent impossible under the old arrangement. The fact that ten times as many cattle are slaughtered as formerly does not mean that there is more tuberculosis in Vermont, but that it is being cleaned out.

There does not seem to be any particular locality where the cattle are more diseased than in others. They are found wherever the agencies work and are shipped in carload lots to the plant, which makes use of them for fertilizer.

NEED INCREASED PRODUCTION

To Reduce High Cost of Living and Give People Enough to Eat.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Referring to the demand of striking coal miners for a 30-hour week, F. M. Parsons of Canada, an employers' delegate, told the International Labor Conference yesterday that there was greater need for a minimum limit of hours of work per week to insure increased production than for a reduction in the maximum number of hours.

"The world is not suffering on account of long hours," he said, "it is suffering on account of lack of food and clothing. There are a hundred million people in the old world on the verge of starvation. Not one-third of the industries of the world are producing to full capacity. Since the introduction of the eight-hour day in France there has been a 20 per cent reduction in production."

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 8.—Yale swung into the last lap of its football season today with Brown as an opponent. Captain Callahan, the Blue leader, who has not played for a month on account of injuries, will be in his old position.

Allen, the veteran Ell end, was out with injuries and his place was taken by Robinson, a third-string player. The Brunonians presented their strongest line-up. The probable line-up:

New York, Nov. 8.—Dartmouth was a slight favorite in the annual football game with the University of Pennsylvania at the Polo grounds to-day. Both eleven presented their strongest line-ups.

The Green had not been defeated this season and scored a victory over Penn State 19 to 13, which eleven humbled Pennsylvania last week to 0. Dartmouth narrowly escaped defeat at the hands of the powerful Colgate team last week, tying the score through the medium of a blocked kick in the last minute of play.

SAVED BY HIS JUMP.

Charles Farrington of Poutney Just Got Out of Way of Train.

Poutney, Nov. 8.—Charles Farrington, mail carrier on rural route, No. 1, narrowly escaped instant death yesterday when his five-passenger Ford automobile was struck by the northbound passenger train. Mr. Farrington was not injured, but his machine was damaged badly.

Mr. Farrington lives on a farm located between the railroad tracks and the river. He had started in his car to make his daily mail delivery trip. A large icehouse owned by the Boston & Maine railway company obstructed his view to the south and he neither saw nor heard the train until it was too late to avoid an accident. Mr. Farrington stopped his machine as quickly as possible and seeing he did not have time to reverse his engine he jumped from the car.

The front end of the automobile, which was very close to, but not on the track, was struck by the railroad engine, turning the machine around so that the rear end was struck also.

Mr. Farrington's presence of mind resulted in his jump doubtless saved his life.
