

Christmas

Are you making your plans for Christmas gifts? What would be more appropriate than one of CHARLES H. SAWYER'S Hand-Colored views of the White Mountains? Sawyer's love of nature, together with his great artistic skill, make these the most desired that can be obtained.

We also have a high-class assortment of landscapes by PLUMMER and BURROWES. Come in and look at them, or watch our show windows the coming week. These pictures, if seen, will speak for themselves.

We have these pictures in the following sizes, besides many odd sizes:

- 6x8 inches
- 7x9 inches
- 9x11 inches
- 10x12 inches
- 12x14 inches
- 14x17 inches

These are priced right, so do your shopping for these valuable gifts, before the very best ones are gone.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Burke of Pearl street have returned to their home after spending Thanksgiving with friends and relatives in Elizabethtown, N. H.

Club ladies, attention! Don't neglect the opportunity of attending the first of a series of talks on contemporary history in Aldrich hall to-night at 7:30.

Wilfred Trudelle and daughter, Miss Florence Trudelle, left yesterday afternoon for New Bedford, Conn., where Miss Florence has employment. The former will seek employment in that place.

The woman's association of the Congregational church will meet Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. Regular business meeting and program in charge of the missionary department. Will the ladies who have not paid please come prepared to pay dues?

The Spaulding high school Glee club and orchestra will make their first public appearance together in a program consisting principally of Christmas music, to be given in the Spaulding assembly hall on Thursday evening, Dec. 18. All friends are cordially invited. A small admission fee will be charged.

The first annual meeting of Barre post, No. 10, American Legion, will be held Wednesday, Dec. 3, at 7:30 p. m. in the manufacturers' association hall (over C. W. Averill's store). Report of delegate to national convention. Proposed amendment to constitution to be considered. Election of officers for ensuing year.

Anyone in Barre having articles which they are willing to donate for a rummage sale, the proceeds of which will be used by Miss Gridley along special lines in connection with her work in the city, are asked to bring them to the emergency room, city building, on Wednesday, Dec. 10, the sale to be held Dec. 11, 12 and 13, under the auspices of the civic department of the Woman's club.

Congregational Pliatheas, attention. Here is your chance to grow young. The monthly business meeting and social will be held at the home of Mrs. George Gates, 22 Orange street, Tuesday evening, Dec. 2, and for that evening every member is to be a child again. The committee extends the invitation in this way: "No one over 12 admitted." Miss Gridley, Barre's social worker, will be a guest of the class and speaker of her work in the city.

Beginning Dec. 4, it will be possible for Barre people to go to the Central Vermont station and by a sleeper ticket for Boston, and the railroad officials have assigned two sections in the Burlington-Boston car for the accommodation of its Barre patrons. This will do away with the inconvenience and uncertainty of having to telegraph for a reservation and then not be sure of getting one. This matter was taken up by the Board of Trade with J. W. Hanley, general passenger agent, at St. Albans, and the above arrangement was made.

A still alarm at 9:35 yesterday morning called the firemen to No. 1 Tomasi place, where a chimney in the apartment house of G. Tomasi was burning out and causing some alarm. The firemen used the contents of one chemical extinguisher in putting out the fire, and no damage was done. Chief Preble of the fire department calls attention to the great need of thorough cleaning out of chimneys and the placing of metal caps on stovepipe holes. He found one chimney the other day which was so filled with soot that there was scarcely room enough for the insertion of a man's arm. Chief Preble says that zinc painted on a fire will help to clear out the soot from a chimney and stovepipes but the best and surest method is to go to the top of the chimney and let down a brick at the end of a rope, moving the brick up and down until the walls of the chimney are cleared of the accumulation.

An order for a dozen fire extinguishers to be placed in the Spaulding high school building has been placed by the school commissioners, and as soon as the extinguishers arrive they will be placed in various parts of the building and two boys from each room in the building will be specially instructed by Chief Preble in the use of the instruments in case of emergency. It is figured that the 12 extinguishers in the hands of alert and capable boys would go far toward smothering flames before the arrival of the firemen, should such an occasion develop.

The Urban Stock company, which opens a three-day engagement at the opera house to-night with "The Dummy," is one of the best known popular priced attractions on the road. Entirely aside from the local appeal of two Barre boys, Charles E. Mills and LeRoy Kenneth in the cast, the company deserves big houses if the press notices from other cities where they have played are to be believed. "The Dummy" is described as a detective comedy and is the work of Harvey O'Higgins and Harriet Ford, based on the "Barney" stories that appeared in Collier's. The friends of Mr. Mills and Mr. Kenneth will welcome this opportunity to see them in action, and the lovers of clean amusement at popular prices should not miss this opportunity to see a good play by an excellent company at less than half the price of most road attractions. Seats are now selling at the box office.—adv.

WARREN

PLAINFIELD

"Fighting in France," in moving pictures, with a special lecture by one of New England's foremost lecturers, George M. Bragg. This wonderful production will be exhibited at Plainfield Wednesday night, Dec. 3, one night only, and it is a picture that everyone should see, one that will live in your mind forever. The greatest mother's picture ever made, taken right on the battlefield in France. This attraction comes here highly recommended by both press and public and will prove the best that ever came to this vicinity, having just completed a tour of the large cities. We are now here at your very door with no advance in prices. Doors open at 7:15 p. m.; starts at 7:15 sharp.—adv.

Members of the Mothers' club please take notice of the changed time of next meeting. The time will be, Thursday forenoon, Dec. 11, with Alice Hatchelder.

WILLIAMSTOWN

Newell R. Farnham, lifelong resident and respected citizen, died.

Newell R. Farnham, lifelong resident and much respected citizen of Williamstown, died at his home in the village yesterday, Nov. 30, about noon, after an illness of only 10 days. Several causes contributed to his death, among these organic disease of the heart and liver, asthma and hardening of the arteries. He had a very serious illness last winter, from which he doubtless never fully recovered.

The deceased was a member of one of the oldest families in town, his father, Jonathan Farnham, having settled in what was called the Luce district, now the S. Martin district. His mother, Emily Worthington, was also of an old family, prominent in the early history of the town. Two brothers, Amasa and George Farnham, passed away some years ago. The deceased had held a number of offices in town and was well known as the agent of the Vermont and Union Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Montpelier. He was an attendant of the Universalist church, a member of the Masonic fraternity, as well as survivors of the G. A. R., of which the deceased was a member and holding the office of adjutant, will attend. He was about 78 years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brock of Barre and Worth Jeffords of North Montpelier were home for Thanksgiving at Frank Jeffords last Thursday.

Rev. and Mrs. A. M. Markey were in East Brookfield yesterday, where the former conducted the service at the church in that place. Transportation was by team furnished by Albert M. Goodrich, who now lives at the south end of the village, in the house long owned by Herbert Martin and later by Mrs. Myra Dennison.

Fred Alger had a severe attack of asthma not long ago and was compelled to call on neighbors for aid in doing the morning chores.

WEST BERLIN

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lawrence from Montpelier were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Libbey, Nov. 27.

A very pleasant family gathering at the home of Miss Corrie Streeter last Thursday included Mrs. Stephen Ramsdell and two children from Wilder, Leslie Streeter from Asheville, N. C., and George. It has been some 25 years or more since the two sisters and two brothers have spent Thanksgiving together.

Mrs. W. H. Dixon from St. Albans is employed at the station in this place in the absence of L. J. Gagnon.

Mrs. L. L. Cooper of Montpelier has been quite ill with bronchitis, but is reported more comfortable now.

Mrs. Catherine Komney has been in Boston the past two weeks, but is now expected home soon.

Preston Libbey spent Thanksgiving week in Newport, N. H.

FRANCE STANDS FIRM

In decisive terms, the voters of France have made their reply to the demand that the nation abandon its post as a bulwark of civilization and capitulate to the forces of an extreme radicalism. Although the details of Sunday's vote are not entirely known it is certain that the so-called blue national—a combination of a number of political groups on the common basis of nationalism—has secured a notable triumph over the extreme socialists. Of the 600 odd members of the new Chamber of Deputies, an overwhelming majority will belong to the new political group. In practically every district in France the same story was told—victory of the representatives of the national party, and defeat of the candidates running on an extreme radical platform. The results of the election are to be considered as a victory for the principles for which George Clemenceau, the veteran premier, has been fighting. The personnel of the new chamber guarantees that the political principles of Clemenceau, which guided the nation through the perilous period of the war, will continue to guide the reconstruction.

Considering their broader aspects, the elections revealed to the world the characteristics which are fundamental in the French nation. The issue was between conservatism and a radicalism that was intolerant of all existing institutions; the triumph of conservatism marked the reassertion of those qualities which not only have brought greatness to France in the past, but are the chief source of hope for the present. Neither the defeatists Calliaux and Malvy, nor the French bolsheviks who have been the chief cause of the party, and the setting up of a soviet regime, represent the great mass of the French population. A nation where property is held in all strata of society by about 6,000,000 individuals can never entrust its political destiny to a group of radicals whose creed calls for the abolition of capitalism from the modern state.

The combination of a number of political parties into one group will give to France greater political stability than has been exhibited in the recent history of the country. The near future should be a period of the confidence in the two-party system which forms the basis of American and British political life. The existing blue national should develop into a conservative party, and the minority opposition, composed now of extremists, may very well later become the nucleus of a liberal party. For the abolition of the blue national will produce the leaders of the nation, and will lay down the policies that will govern the reconstruction of France.

The outcome of the French elections should prove an inspiration to patriots and thinking men everywhere. If France had showed the confidence in the ability of the extremists to solve the problems that face her, the extremists of every land would have been the gainers. The decision of her voters to entrust the affairs of the nation to those whose loyalty to it is unquestioned, is therefore of a significance of importance. Despite the terrible strain of the war the heart of France is still sound. She faces the future with confidence because she knows that the leaders she has elected are free from the scourge that has brought ruin to Russia.—Boston Transcript.
